The disappointed person may be old or middle aged, either sex and in each and every case he or she is an unfortunate creature. We are all disappointed on that point per se, but the disappointed person is the one who should be pitied for he or she fail into the same mental rut/slough of despond, despair, misery, and as a last faith we feel sorry with and for the disappointed. When we are disappointed we are apt to say, "Oh, I'll get over it," and we do, but the disappointed person is one who does not get over it, and who is the real object of pity. Disappointment is bad, but just as the prosecution was about to take away the girl took her departure. Chesterwick smiled then, and the Empress of Shoolds'n't be surprised if this girl and Chesterwick were the same person. If so there was no passionate act at the conclusion of the affair. He simply made a gift to a lady who was in the way of his career.

This statement seemed to interest the police immensely. "Did he tell you his name?" they asked.

"I think I would know it if I heard it," said the witness, "but I forget."

"Seems to me it was something like that. Nah, I remember. The first name was Marvin."

The lady's face was suffused with a becoming blush.

"Is that your name?" asked the manager.

There was no reply, no word of a reply; the blush rose to the hair.

"I told you not the police that's trespassing is allowed on the grounds."

The gentleman arose and answered with remonstrance politeness.

"I did," he said.

"Then I do not understand why you should grant payment of the place for bestow."

"To tell the truth, I have a strong prejudice against such persons."

"Why so?"

"For several reasons. Firstly, I question the natural right of any one to appropriate to his or her exclusive use any portion of the planet. But this is based on philosophic principles too deep to enter upon just now. Second ly, there is, I think, selfishness in refusing others the enjoyment of at least free and poetical grandeur."

"Perhaps if you owned a place like this and saw persons romping on it and injuring things you would feel differently."

"That would not alter the case, as I have stated it. I am capable of rating the import to your place and you as the possible poor fooling."

"Oh, we don't own the place; we merely rent it."

"What kind of a person is the owner of?"

"I don't know, never having seen him. He is a noble good man."

"He be benefactor?"

"Why do you ask that?"

"A woman's idea of a man is often influenced by her love affairs."

A trifle of indignation flashed in her eye. "I assure you," she said, "that it is a very much more valuable trait than physical beauty that has prompted me to favor of Mr. Chesterwick."

"Chesterwick! That's an unusual name. I am in very close touch with a man of that name."

"Our Mr. Chesterwick is abroad."

"That's where I met my Mr. Chesterwick."

"He's been traveling in Switzerland and Italy a very long time, I understand, yesterday. He was to sail immediately for America."

"I made an arrival of Most Rhine with my Mr. Chesterwick and a month ago."

"What's your friend's first name?"

"Bert."

"Albert? Our landlord is Albert B."

"That's the Albert Bertram I speak with."

"I can't but strange that you should know him so well? Here are you my friend that I have only met once, and he is him?"

"I certainly am surprised. I never can anything in him to warrant such an encomium."

"You don't? You are not very kind to your friend."

"I didn't mean to be unkind toward friend of mine."

"You said you are to very close touch with him."

"And it! That doesn't necessarily mean that I admire him. But I am open to conviction. If you will give the four reasons for your encomium I think you may succeed in passing it to me."

"Perhaps we had better go up to the house, where you can see our landlord at once. I shall be pleased to offer you some refreshment."

"I know very much. I will go with you with pleasure."

When they were comfortably seated in the drawing room the lady said: "Now I will tell you why I am so sure Mr. Chesterwick and Mr. Albert Chesterwick have a mutual friend. Mr. Chesterwick's father is a retired clergyman and he, himself, they may be of the Methodist of low sin, are not usually associated with worldly men. Mr. Chesterwick had an opportunity to meet this prince for a good man. Mr. Chesterwick thinking it would be cruel fried to the poor man, he went to see him [illegible]. When Mr. Chesterwick heard about it he told Mr. Chesterwick father might have it. What do you think of that?"

She gave a triumphant glance at her companion.

"Oh, Chesterwick, I suppose from that every word to be proven should support the rock and there's no better way of accomplishing that than by doing one's duty to the rock. The summer was drawing to a close The leaves had not yet taken on their autumn colors, but there was a feeling in the air even during the noon of the hot months being absent from the hills and the valleys.

A gentleman whose appetite bore a distinctive foreign cut sidled from a cafe at a railway station and, leaving his belongings, set down on a road bed. But to an attractive country place. On reaching the entrance, flanked by stone pillars, he noticed on one of them a sign, "No Trespassing."

He proceeded up the path toward the house and, reaching a certain where branch trees he could see an attractive view, sat down on the grass, took out a cigarette and began to smoke. He was aroused by a feminine voice behind him.

"Did you not see the notice that is trespassing is allowed on these grounds?"

The gentleman arose and answered with ceremonious politeness.

"I did," he said.

"Then I do not understand why you should grant payment of the place for bestow."

The latter hears the "ding-dong" of the engine-room telegraph bell as it indicates to engine room to the extreme point of the scale. The engineer below has the handle and opens the throttle valve to admit more steam to the engine, and a fierce blast of air is let into an angry looking furnace. The fire is fed and fanned through the draughts.

That is the outward and visible sign of the execution of the order but deep down in the hull of the ship perhaps below the water-line there are souls that seem to be forgotten by all but the engineer and upon whom the officer in charge depends for the extra speed he requires.

Working in white duck trousers, often stripped to the waist, the stokers perspire freely as they trim the coal, hoist the fires, and generally arrange for the replenishing of the supply which the ocean greyhound is expending.

The temperature is high—well above that of which we have been complaining during the recent drought, the sweltering heat is intensified, confined, and the hard, manual labor is intensified by the fact that the heaving of coal is dependent

Child Burned To Death

—and Fatality Few Miles South of Town—Victim Little 4 Year old Daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Simon Watkins

A shocking fatality occurred at the homestead of Mr. and Mrs. S. Walker Wednesday afternoon, when the second child, May, aged 4 1-2 years was so badly burned that death resulted. The mother was in town and the father in the vicinity of the house at the time. On opening the door to go into the house the father beheld his child in flames, he quickly tore the clothes from the little one who was frightfully burned about the body.

The child it is supposed was heating a toy iron when her clothing caught fire.

The funeral will be held Friday at 2.30 p.m. at the English church. Genuine sympathy is felt for the family in their sad bereavement.

Lost

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of childbirth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial [illegible]

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

GENIUS

[illegible] has detected [illegible] Shakespeare the vulgar are fain to cry that Shakespeare did not mean it. Well, what of that? [illegible] the very mark whereby we know a true poet. There will always be a number of beauties in his works which he never meant to put into them.

This is one of the resemblances between the works of genius and those of nature, a resemblance betokening that the powers which produce them are akin. Each besides its immediate apparent purpose is ever connected by certain delicate and almost imperceptible fibres, by numberless ties of union and communion and the sweet intercourse of giving and receiving with the universe of which it forms a part. Hereby the poet shows that he is not a mere "child of time," but offspring of the eternal prime. His works are not narrowed to the clime or seasons, the manners and thoughts that give birth to them, but spread out their invisible arms through time and space and when generations and empires and even religions have passed [illegible]

WOMEN AND CRITICISM

With the entry of woman into public life there will come great changes in the masculine attitude toward her, and she must be prepared to stand a good deal of sharp criticism and a certain slackness of politeness and chivalry.

MOONEY'S BISCUITS

ONE TIRED WOMAN AND ONE LITTLE OVEN

You have probably been there yourself—perhaps are right now.

Bright women all over Canada are getting away from this. They welcome MOONEY'S BISCUITS as a most acceptable substitute for their own bread and biscuits.

MOONEY'S PERFECTION SODA BISCUITS

are the crispest, creamiest crackers made. Better still, they are baked in Winnipeg; right at your very door. They come to you fresh as the product of your own oven.

You can have them in air-tight packages or sealed tins as you prefer.

String beans cut with a pair of sharp scissors on a slant instead of straight across will cook more quickly if one happens to be pressed for time. This may seem a notion, but I have tried it often and have found the beans to cook quicker than when broken straight across in the usual way.

Itching Eczema's Cause and Cure

THIS DREADFULLY TORTURING AND OBSTINATE DISEASE IS ENTIRELY OVERCOME BY

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Eczema is common to rich and poor, old and young and is neither contagious nor an indication of uncleanness as some suppose.

Teething, improper food, indigestion, vaccination poisoning by clothing or from ivy, etc., are named among the causes.

There is inflammation, redness, heat, swelling, discharge, formation of crust, and all the time annoying, troublesome itching and burning, which often becomes so torturing as to be almost unendurable.

This ever present feeling is what makes eczema so dreaded, and it is this feature to which Dr. Chase's Ointment gives relief from almost the first application.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is not only delightfully soothing but is a wonderful as a means of healing the skin, and it is not long before the raw, itching sores are thoroughly cleansed, the itching subsides and the process of healing begun. [illegible]

This great Ointment is a wash beneficial to the skin, making it soft, smooth and velvety, and besides being the most effective treatment known for the cure of eczema [illegible]

Mothers use Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing skin troubles of their babies in preference to unsanitary pore-clogging powders. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

WIFE WHO IS A FAILURE

It is a sad day when the realization comes to a young wife that she is a good deal of a failure. But at the same time it is a propitious fact. The young wife who thinks [illegible] her position inadequately is on the way to becoming a successful wife. But the wife who does not see her mistakes or faults, who blames the unhappiness of her married life on bad luck or poverty or the incapability of her husband and friends, who never understands that she herself is the cause of much of the unhappiness [illegible]

The wife who is a failure is a [illegible] woman. Her husband would not have married her if she had not have been that. Men demand that the woman they marry be good and pure. But they should go a step farther and expect [illegible] for the success of marriage.

The Cat's Eyes

And How They Came to Be Restored

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911

As the two men entered the darkened studio Bertrand stumbled over something that spat and hissed back at him. There were two points of flame that glared at him from a distant corner.

"Heavens! What was that?" ejaculated Bertrand, with a nervous laugh.

Harris snapped on the shaded electric lamp and turned a curiously smiling face toward his friend. "No one but Hara—and she won't hurt you. Probably her dignity's ruffled because you used her for a doormat. Here, old girl."

The cat came from behind a deeply valanced chair with deliberately padding velvet footfalls and many a sidelong look at Bertrand. She leaped into the artist's lap and arched her back under his caressing.

"A cat! How the dickens did it occur to you to keep a cat?" growled Bertrand, showing a resentment that seemed entirely out of keeping with the unimportance of the matter.

"Came to me, and so I had to keep her," explained the artist. "See anything queer about her?"

Bertrand stared at the creature, almost with dread in his eyes. She was a sleek, graceful animal of an indefinite smoke gray color, short haired and round headed, with the prominent ears that mark the Egyptian feline. Her eyes, large and round and pale topaz in color, stared at him strangely. He turned his own glance away hastily.

"See anything queer about her?" repeated Harris.

"Egyptian, isn't she?"

"Yes; something else too."

"Her eyes. She's got a beastly impertinent stare," hazarded Bertrand reluctantly. He hated cats.

Harris laughed. "Unnerving chap you are," he chuckled. "Hara's eyes are worth five hundred each, eh, old girl?" He tweaked her ears, and the stare of her topaz eyes was not so alert but he loved to sit at ease.

[illegible]

Look at him too!

[illegible]

... on three long leaps across the room and hurled herself at Harris' throat. He tossed her into a heap of cushions and laughingly brought out a bottle of antiseptic solution and applied it to his scratch.

Suddenly he became aware of his friend's long silence and looked quickly at his friend. The latter was hunched forward in his chair staring dazedly at the cat, which crouched on her cushions and stared back at him from sightless jeweled eyes.

"What's the matter, Bertrand?" Harris asked sharply.

Bertrand looked up with a little shudder.

"Retribution," he said dully.

"What? What are you talking about?" Harris shook him into an upright position.

"It's retribution," repeated Bertrand, pointing a finger at the cat.

"Explain yourself, old man. I don't know what you're talking about. What has Hara got to do with you?"

"I, too, have been in the tombs of Abusir," said Bertrand, regaining his composure, "but it was several years ago. I committed a little crime—a theft. There; it's out now, although I thought I paid them for what I took. My guide had shown me the mummy of the Princess Hara, and I was attracted by the mummified body of her pet cat, which reposed at her feet. Well, the cat mummy had in its head the finest pair of cat's eye jewels I ever saw—almost blue in color with pale yellow pupils. To make a long story short, I took the cat's eyes and tucked underneath the little cat's body the worth of the jewels. I wanted them for my collection, you know."

Harris nodded assent and added: "You know, I'm a collector myself—coins—and I've been tempted a score of times, so I know all about it. Well, go on, old man; you didn't go back and steal the cat afterward, did you?"

"Why do you ask that?"

"Merely because there was no mummified cat in the Princess Hara's coffin when I visited it."

Bertrand stared with unbelieving eyes.

"Do you mean that?" he asked thickly.

"Yes; it isn't strange, though. The tombs are poorly guarded, and there are people who might fancy a cat mummy [illegible]"

"Don't you think it's very strange?" asked Bertrand at length.

"What is strange?"

"That I should take the jeweled eyes from the mummy of Princess Hara's favorite cat and you should visit the tomb later and not see the dead cat but come across an apparently live one minute [illegible]"

CHEESE AS A FOOD.

A Good Word For the Much Maligned Welsh Rabbit.

According to a circular issued by the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, we make a mistake in not eating more cheese, Welsh rabbits and other cheese products. Concerning the value of cheese as an article of diet it is stated that one pound of cheese has nearly the same food value as two pounds of fresh beef or any other fresh meat. It is worth as much as or more than a pound of ham and is more digestible. It is equal to two pounds of eggs or three pounds of fish.

Heretofore, it is stated, cheese has seldom been regarded seriously by consumers of any class in the United States as a possible cheap staple food. All consumers of cheese, with very few exceptions, use it as a luxury in small quantities at comparatively rare intervals. While in the aggregate a large quantity of cheese is eaten in this country, the total quantity is nevertheless almost negligible when compared with some other products of less food value and inferior palatability.

Experiments conducted by government scientists associated with the department of agriculture have led them to advocate the eating of cheese omelets, macaroni and cheese and even warmed up potatoes cooked with cheese.

"Cheese can no longer be discriminated against because of a suspicion that it is not a healthful food," the report concludes. "The absolute lack of any disturbance of the general health of the subjects used in the experiments is proof that cheese can be eaten in larger quantities without danger to health."

THEIR LAST NIGHT.

Neglected Wife Had Run Away For a Few Days of Pleasure.

THE dreamy silence of the mountain air had woven a spell over the man and woman as they sat close together, gazing down the moonlit slope that stretched before them. The silvery rim of the moon rose through feathery clouds, making a picture to which no artist could do justice. It was an evening in midsummer—such an evening as makes love seem the more beautiful—and the man and woman had loved each other since childhood.

They were both young, he not over twenty-five, the woman several years his junior. She had a sad, wistful little face and clear white skin offset by a mass of chestnut hair. The man was tall and handsome and, like the woman, dark. The unmistakable stamp of good breeding encompassed them both.

The woman stirred, with a sigh. "It is our last night here," she said. "Tomorrow you must return to your work, I to my husband." A groan escaped her at the mentioning of that name. Her companion frowned. His thoughts seemed far from pleasant. Then after a moment: "Is he very—hard nowadays?" It was as though nothing else could be said at such a time. She thrust out her hand with an impulsive little gesture.

"Oh, yes, I dare say. They tell me he is very successful, yet he gives me only the bare necessities. He never takes me anywhere, is not civil to me at times, and yet"—her voice dropped to a whisper—"I could almost die for him."

The man patted her on the shoulder affectionately. "We'll slip away again later on, little girl," he said, "and have another jaunt just like this one. We've had a great time together here [illegible]"

THE CARE OF LAMBS AT WEANING TIME

The separation of the ewes and their lambs is simple in itself, but after weaning extra care comes just as it does when the pigs, calves or colts are weaned, writes J. C. [illegible] in Iowa Homestead. Separate them and run the ewes in some far field out of sight and sound. They need only sparse grazing now for a time, and if they are allowed clean drinking water and salt and their udders are milked out a little once or twice the first few days they will give little trouble. The lambs should get their usual share of feed and care and the extra care left over from the ewes. This is a trying time for the little ones, and unless they are induced to forget their loneliness by filling their stomachs they will grow [illegible]

Vermilion To Medicine Hat

Another Branch Line of C. N. R. to be Operated from Northern Alberta's Coming Metropolis. It Means Big Thing to Town

At the next session, the local legislature, the Canadian Northern railway will make application for five charters so as to enable the company to lay out, construct and operate as many lines of railways in this province. Among these charters is one from a point on the constructed line of the Canadian Northern railway between Lloydminster and Mannville, thence in a southerly direction to a point at or near Medicine Hat. The building of this road will of necessity, mean a good thing for Vermilion as no matter where the road branches off the main line, it will have to be operated upon from here. The new line between Vegreville and Calgary branches off at Vegreville, still it is operated from Vermilion, and a daily mixed service has already been inaugurated. With the increase in these services the company will eventually have to enlarge their yard facilities at this point, which means a big increase in the pay roll of the Company.

widened as she listened to his voice breathing life into the words. He sang with the ease and flexibility of an artist, his powerful baritone blending perfectly with her contralto.

For the first time she felt the man's personality, his magnetism, as if he had dropped his cloak and stood at her side in his true semblance.

He took a seat near the girl and continued to talk feverishly, unable to give vent to his thoughts rapidly enough.

...the ocean, they never touch food again, but of course their onward rush until they become bruised and battered wrecks drifting down from the spawning beds. Then the call of nature is answered and the stream is laid they die. They never seek the salt sea again, but cur at the rivers with their lances. When they feel the homing impulse they come from the uncharted depths heading unerringly for the particular parent stream whence they originated. If sand bars should block their course in dry seasons or obstacles intercept them they will hurl themselves out of the water in an endeavor to get across. They may disregard a thousand river-mouths one by one, but when they finally taste the sweet currents which flow from their birthplaces their whole nature changes, and even their physical features alter. They grow thin, and the head takes on the sinister curve of the curving bird.

LIQUID PORES.

An Entertaining Experiment With Alcohol and Water.

It is not easy to imagine liquids as having pores, though this seems to be the case as shown by certain familiar experiments. ... into warm water the water will dissolve the sugar and appear to absorb it without increasing its volume. ... when alcohol is poured into water the resulting volume is less than the sum of the two volumes.

... if fifty parts of water ... of alcohol be mixed together ... make only ninety-four parts ...

... two glasses, one filled to the brim with water and the other with alcohol. In order to show the effect to better advantage, color the alcohol with red ink. The glasses should not be over full—that is, the surface of the liquid should not bulge above the rim of the glass. When everything is ready, place a sheet of paper over the glass full of alcohol, and with a hand on the paper to keep it down on the rim of the glass invert the tumbler and the liquid will remain in the glass, owing to the air pressure on the paper. Now place the inverted tumbler over the glass full of water and carefully draw out the paper. This can be done without spilling a drop of alcohol, and yet as soon as the paper is removed ... Owing to the fact that it is colored it is possible to see the alcohol actually "soaking" into the water, while tiny air bubbles that were formerly contained in the "pores" of the water rise slowly to the top of the tumbler. This will continue for some little time until a considerable air space forms in the top of the tumbler.

ASLEEP AT HIS DESK.

Lincoln Was Worn Out, but Hadn't Forgotten His Caller.

One day a very energetic lady called on me to take her to the president and aid her to get a private soldier pardoned who had been sentenced to death for desertion and was to be shot the very next morning. It was late in the afternoon when we got there and the cabinet was still in session. I sent my name in to Mr. Lincoln, and he came out, evidently in profound thought and full of some great subject. I stated the object of our call ...

QUEEN MARY SETS A STYLE.

Short Waisted Effects and Sash Bows Fetching Tailored Models in White Silk Serge or Heavy Twill—Irish Crochet Lace For Wraps.

Irish crochet lace is used in making many of the smart summer wraps. The one illustrated here is of three-quarter length made entirely of the Irish lace. The body of the coat consists of wheels of moderate size connected with picot chains. A leaf motif is inserted at each corner. The border is of the rich macrame lace, a band of which goes around the skirt of the coat and is applied to each side. A wide lace collar with revers and turned back lace cuffs complete the coat.

The girdle and sash arrangement on this summer frock are especially pretty. The bodice is fused into a high fitted ... and ... the waist line, is a knotted cord with tassels. The hat accompanying this pretty summer dress has a crown made of green roses in three shades and a brim of catawba pink straw, which makes an artistic contrast with the delicate greens.

Another dainty voile frock is trimmed with eyelet embroidered ... Irish lace. ...

Queen Mary has set a fashion for elaborately embroidered gloves—in fact, for embroideries of all sorts ... The coronation gloves had gold embroideries representing the crown and other royal symbols, but with summer frocks of a lingerie character long silk gloves delicately embroidered in self color are just now the fad. All waist lines are ...

ICEBERG DETECTION.

New Marine Thermometer Records Sea Temperatures Accurately.

During the summer of 1910 experiments were made in the northern portion of the gulf of St. Lawrence with a new type of marine thermometer, the results of which promise to aid in the detection of icebergs in fog and at night.

By means of this new type of marine thermometer it is possible to record sea temperatures to one one-thousandth of a degree C. The thermometer is of the electrical resistance type, in which variations of the resistance of the metal wire serve to give a measure of the changes of temperature of the medium in which the instrument is immersed. The resistance of the wire is made so high that small variations in temperature produce comparatively great changes in the resistance.

The coil is made with a resistance of 125 ohms and consists of ... feet of pure iron wire with covered and wound on a copper cylinder about four inches in diameter and six inches wide. The cylinder is fitted accurately inside a second copper cylinder. The ends of the cylinders are carefully soldered and rendered water tight, while the connecting wires pass through the middle of the outer cylinder. A stout copper tube is riveted on to the outer cylinder, to which other copper tubes can be fastened. The wires pass through a lead cable to the chart room where they are connected to the bridge for obtaining a measure of the temperature resistance. Thus the absolute temperature as well as the small variations can be accurately measured. ...

PROFIT IN FARM BEEF PRODUCTION

To produce beef on the farm I believe that the farmer must raise his own cattle. There is too much hazard in buying cattle to feed. To raise cattle for feeding there are three major items for consideration—first, pasture and feed. These must be provided, writes T. G. Haney in Kansas Farmer. Pasture, when properly handled, is the most economical feed for stock and can be made to rebuild the soil at the same time.

Second consideration is the cows. To get together a profitable herd of beef producing cows I believe will be more difficult than getting a dairy herd and will take longer. A twenty-five cent pair of scales will tell you within a month or so after the cow comes fresh whether she will be a profitable milker or not. But with the beef cow the calf must be put on feed to determine whether she will be a profitable producer or not. With the beef cow the question of the proper type to cross to be made also enters. Also I believe that a cow may not produce her best calves while young.

Next come the bulls. Here again is a hard proposition. None of us will buy a poor flecked bull, and we cannot tell by looking at the fat bull whether he put the fat on easily or whether it took a skilled feeder months to put it on. Two years ago I bought six solid for our herd, most ...

To Keep Olives.

If you have olives in a bottle that you fear will spoil, seed and chop them and add to the sauce used for cream chicken. If the ripe olives are chosen the flavor is delicious. They are also good in chicken scallop. Mix the sauce with the chicken, put in a baking dish, cover the top with grated cheese and bake in a quick oven until the top is brown.

Homemade crackers. Sift together two cupfuls of flour, a level teaspoonful of sugar and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Work in with the fingers two level teaspoonfuls of shortening. Add enough cold water to make a stiff dough. Roll thin, cut out, place on a buttered baking pan, prick with a fork and bake in a hot oven until a delicate brown.

The man to be pitied is the man who doesn't profit by his mistakes.

A refreshing drink for hot weather is made by squeezing the juice from about equal amounts of red and black raspberries and currants, or cherries may be used in place of or in addition to these. Strain and add sugar to taste, then add the juice of several oranges and lemons. If put in a cool place in the refrigerator, it will keep for several days, and makes an excellent drink by adding some water and cracked ice. Some sprigs of peppermint thrown in at the last may be an improvement.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY

One dollar deposited in a savings bank that pays 4 per cent will amount to $2.19 in twenty years. This is simple compound interest. Now, if you deposit one dollar a week every year for 20 years, or twenty in all, the sum to your credit will have grown to $30.97. Any wage earner can put by $1 per week. That money deposited in a savings bank for twenty years will have increased to $1,612. A deposit of $5 a week will have grown to $8,000 and this at 4 per cent will be $320 a year. There is no secret about this. It is as clear as the cloudless sun and the method is just as clean and sane.

There are many sticky devices on the market that kill some flies, but housekeepers who have tested them know that Wilson's Fly Pads kill many times more and do not damage carpets and furniture like all sticky fly catchers.

To rob a swallow's nest built in a fire house was held in the olden times to be a more fearful sacrilege than to steal a chalice from a church.

When you buy anything beyond the actual needs of the farm home pay the money down on the spot. Running in debt for luxuries is the sure road to trouble.

THE SEARCH FOR JOY

Alas! the search for joy along the after line costs true manhood far more than the dollars expended upon the fond. It leads to blindness toward the real road to the joie de vivre. For my own help I always keep pasted up in my surgery where sometimes the continuous stream of patients coming to see the doctor calls for more sympathy than I have to give, and is apt to make one irritable and useless because unsympathetic, these old words:

He did kind things so kindly—
It seemed his heart's delight
To make poor people happy
From morning until night.

Dr. W. T. Grenfell

Faultless in Preparation.—Unlike ... Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of ... vegetable compounds calculated to stimulate the stomachic functions and maintain them in the normal condition. Years of use have proved their faultless character and established their excellent reputation. And this reputation they have maintained for years and will continue to maintain, for these pills must always stand at the head of the list of standard preparations.

A patch is often a badge of honorable industry and is never to be despised.

TAKING MINUTES OFF

Your true farmer's wife thinks there aren't any minutes to take off.

She keeps on trotting from kitchen to hen house, back by the dairy to the dining room, and around through the garden patch, from the time she gets wound up in the morning till the time she drops into the old-rush bottomed rocker at night.

Why? A woman wouldn't treat an alarm clock that way! She winds up her clock and when it has worked itself around to a certain point, it goes off—on time. But then it stops and rests and thinks what hour it is to be set for next.

Isn't your body more delicate than an alarm clock? I knew a farmer's wife once who kept winding herself up and ringing time all day long. Then when all the rest of us were in bed she would sit up until 2 A. M. reading in the back kitchen. Poor thing! She realized that somehow clock work wasn't life. She died early of apoplexy.

If you have never felt that luxurious feeling that comes from ... out flat on your back for ten minutes at 11 A. M. and 4 P. M. and drawing long breaths—try it!

A writer states that newspapers cut into squares can be used when shaving to wipe the razor each time after use. I wish to say that I know of two serious cases of blood-poisoning caused by using printed matter to wipe the razor. In both cases the face had a slight cut and the ink from the paper was deposited on the razor and thence again to the cheek.

ECONOMY IN FEEDING

Good pasture is sweet and fragrant. These qualities are deficient in dry foods, and they are essential to secure thorough assimilation and prevent waste of food. Food not fully assimilated sooner or later impairs the health. A GREAT MAN

We cannot look however imperfectly upon a great man without gaining something by him. Faint?

Have you weak heart, dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals? Or do you experience pain over the heart, shortness of breath on going up-stairs and the many distressing symptoms which indicate poor circulation and bad blood? A heart tonic, blood and body-builder that has stood the test of over 40 years of cures is

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

The heart becomes regular as clock-work. The red blood corpuscles are increased in number—and the nerves in turn are well fed. The arteries are filled with good rich blood. That is why nervous debility, irritability, fainting spells, disappear and are overcome by this alterative extract of medicinal roots put up by Dr. Pierce without the use of alcohol. Ask your neighbor. Many have been cured of scrofulous conditions, ulcers, "fever-sores," white swellings, etc., by taking Dr. Pierce's Discovery. Just the refreshing and vitalizing tonic needed for excessive tissue waste, in convalescence from fevers or for run-down, anemic, thin-blooded people. Stick to this safe and sane remedy and refuse all "just as good" kinds offered by the dealer who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing will do you half as much good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is more widely and successfully used than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

ABOUT HOME

Home is the place of the highest joys; religion should sanctify it. Home is the sphere of the deepest sorrows; the highest consolation of religion should assuage its griefs. Home is the place of the greatest intimacy of heart with heart; religion should sweeten it with the joy of confidence. Home discovers all faults; religion should bless it with abundance of charity. Home is the place for impressions, for instruction and culture; there should religion open her treasures of wisdom and pronounce her heavenly benediction.

Keep some ewes that have proved to be good breeders.

Death and love are the two wings which bear man from earth to heaven.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

White hair, like light gowns, need careful handling or it soon is ugly and ill-kept looking. Brushes and combs should be washed every day or so. A dusty brush makes white hair dull. As white hair is more brittle than any other, it must not be roughly handled. Do not tug and pull at it with a comb and do not use for drying washes or dry with too much heat. Ordinary shampoo mixtures are apt to make white hair streaky.

The best for it is made from the whites of two eggs mixed lightly with a teaspoonful of warm water. Rub the mixture well into the scalp, parting the hair in strands and also rub it into the long hair.

Rinse thoroughly with luke warm water, then cold. Spring distilled water should be used on white hair.

Many tonics used with good effect on golden hair are not suitable for white haired women. If carefully applied, crude oil can be used occasionally or a little white vaseline can be rubbed into the scalp. In using any grease keep it off the long hair as it acts as a dust collector and dulls the lustre of the hair.

V. C. C. SMOKER A HUGE SUCCESS

Some 150 Guests Did Honor to the Occasion

The concert and smoker held in the Royal George Theatre Friday evening under the auspices of the Young Men's Conservative Club of Vermilion was a marked success. Fully 150 people were present. It was a huge success from begining to end, and was attended throughout with the greatest joviality and enthusiasm. The political line was not drawn, with the result that scores of Liberals were present, and entered into the enjoyment of the occasion as much as the Conservatives did. Large delegations were present from Mannville, Islay and the country districts. Mr N. Murray, as president of the club, presided in a most acceptable manner. The affair was informal, and this very largely contributed to its splendid success. The Vermilion orchestra was in attendance, and rendered several selections during the evening.

Short addresses were made by Rev Messrs. Tyner, Bolt and Mortimer, and Messrs. McAllister and Brydon Mannville; Mr. Brokenshar, Islay, and Job Mace, Clandonald, and others from town. Mr H. N. Stephens moved, and Mr. R. L. Craig seconded, a resolution expressing the appreciation of the club of the splendid campaign made by F. A. Morrison in the late elections. While not successful, the movers felt that the Conservatives had a candidate of which they were justly proud, and who would in the near future be called upon to fill the seat of which he is only temporarily deprived. The resolution was carried amidst applause, and the singing of "He's a jolly good fellow." W. J. Phelps moved and Mr Job Mace seconded, a resolution expressing the confidence of the Conservatives of Vermilion in Mr R. L. Borden as leader of the party and premier of Canada. This resolution was also carried with rounds of applause. Excellent songs were rendered by Messrs. Tom Morris, A. West, H. Collins, R. L. Craig, [illegible] while Messrs [illegible] Murray, Craig and West "brought the house down" by a trio entitled "Reciprocity" an original composition which was heard more or less frequently during the campaign. The theatre was profusely decorated with flags and bunting presenting a pretty appearance. The decorations were placed under the direction of Mr. L. H. West, and were complete in every detail.

A large number of those present joined the club which now has a membership of over 80. Rooms have already been secured, and it is proposed to open them formally in the near future. It was expected that Mr. Morrison, the party's standard bearer, would be present, but unfortunately, that morning he was called on urgent business to Calgary, and had to forego his visit to Vermilion. The chairman read a letter of regret from Mr. Morrison, which at the same time thanked his friends for their valiant work and support in the late campaign.

Refreshments were served at eleven o'clock and the concert brought to a close about twelve with cheers for Borden and Morrison and the singing of the national anthem.

THE I. H. C. GASOLINE ENGINE
If a farmer expects to make money by using a power producer, he must have the most practical and economical one on the market. He must use the one that has produced profit for users before him. Such is the I. H. C. gasoline engine.
The I. H. C. engine is designed specially to meet the requirements of the up-to-date farmer. It has few working parts, all of which are easily accessible. It does not require any time to get ready [illegible] turn of the fly wheel being necessary to start the engine. [illegible] consumed by other kinds of power in getting ready is spent by the I. H. C. in working. Other excellent features of the I. H. C. engine are the small fuel consumption and the fact that it does not require an engineer. These features alone should recommend it above all other kinds of power.
International Harvester Company engines are made in the following styles and sizes:
Portable [illegible] 10, 12, 15 and 20 horse power
[illegible] Stationary [illegible]

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in Plain English; or, Medicine Simplified, 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations, newly revised up-to-date Edition, cloth-bound, sent for 31 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address: Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

WINCHESTER
Rifle and Pistol Cartridges

The advent of smokeless powder called for improved methods in the manufacture of rifle and pistol cartridges with the result that all cartridges are now made better than formerly. Winchester rifle and pistol smokeless and black powder cartridges are made in the most complete plant in the world, by experts, and can be depended upon to be sure fire and accurate, and of maximum shooting strength. They cost no more than many inferior makes.

An Unwelcome Visitor

So Was an American Traveler on the Czar's Premises

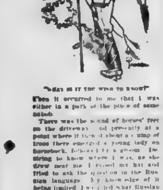
By EDGAR B. THOMPSON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When I was a young man I traveled a great deal and usually instead of riding about the places I visited I walked. Among other countries, I sojourned in the Crimea, the scene of a great war that occurred about the middle of the last century and where is Livadia, the favorite summer residence of the czar of Russia. I was out on a tramp the day after my arrival and, coming to a narrow valley with cliffs on either side, it struck me that from the summit of the one on the right I would get a fine view.

The ascent would have staggered any one but a good climber. I, however, had ascended a number of the Swiss mountains and this one did not feaze me a bit. The side of the cliff was mostly covered with timber, and since it was the summer season the leaves were out; therefore I could not lay out a route from below. I plunged into a thicket and fought my way through underbrush till I emerged on a rock. From there I took my bearings, then made my way through more brush to a ravine, by which I attained the summit.

Turning to enjoy the view, I saw a soldier below me leaning on his musket. To the right and the left were other soldiers strung along at open points from which they could see about them. I wondered what they were guarding and why they had not seen me, for had any one of them ...



"DOES IT PAY TO WISH TO KNOW?"

... his risk. If he tries to leave the inclosure without permission the consequences will be as bad or worse. If he is known to be here without permission, and I am seen talking with him the consequences will be as frightful to me as to him. Shall I ride on and leave him to whatever fate may have in store for him or try to help him?"

Then I saw a mental struggle in her fair face, and I knew it involved a decision with regard to taking the risk of putting into practice some plan she had in her mind. Suddenly her face was illumined with the light of one ready to take a great risk for a fellow being.

"Assist me to dismount," she said.

I did so and lifted her to the ground. She said something in Russian to her groom, who took her horse from her. Then bidding me come with her she walked with me to the edge of the cliff.

"Your least risk," she said, "will be to try to pass out between the chain of sentries as you came in. By noting their distance you may be able to fix upon a point between them where you will not be seen. Better, if you can remember your exact path coming up, by following it in the descent you may meet the same conditions. If my groom has seen me conversing with you and has seen me come here with you. If you are taken I shall be under suspicion of having been in league with an assassin. Even the empress may not be convinced of my innocence of such a charge. God grant that you may pass safely through."

"That you may not be compromised," I added, and, taking her hand, I pressed my lips upon it fervently.

My faculties were sharpened far more by the danger for her than the consequences to me. I proceeded warily, and it almost seemed to me that I could scent my own footsteps on my upward course so keen was I to proceed by the same route. I pushed forward, and I emerged upon the road within a few yards of the point where I had entered the thicket.

I looked up, and there, standing ...

PAPER BAG COOKERY.

Chance For Housewife to Throw Away Her Pots and Pans.

"Throw away your pots and pans, discard your broilers and roasting dishes and do your cooking in paper bags. Do not hesitate. Do not marvel. Do all of your cooking except maybe the brewing of your tea and the boiling of your soups in paper bags," so advises M. Soyer, chef of a smart London club and the inventor of paper bag cookery.

"Paper bag cooking for dwellers in flats and single rooms is the solution of many a difficulty. One of the chief drawbacks to date has been the difficulty of avoiding the smell of cookery. With the paper bag there is no smell. In the small flat kitchen there is little space for pots and pans. None is needed for paper bag cookery."

The chief does not claim that the use of his paper bag alone guarantees perfection in the finished product. Good cooking requires time, skill and a proper attention to the mixing of the concomitants whether one cooks in a saucepan or a paper bag. The use of the bag does not abrogate any of the rules for perfect cooking; it only simplifies and perfects the methods. To use the bag, grease slightly the inside of the bag except in case of vegetables ... when water is added. For beginners it is advisable. Butter, lard or drippings may be used.

When the food has been prepared for the bag place the same on the table and lift the uppermost edge of the bag while you insert the contents.

Fold the mouth of the bag two or three times and fasten with a clip. It is desirable to fold the corners of the bag so as to secure as near as possible a hermetical closing.

Any oven will do for paper bag cooking, the demonstrator asserts. There is little difference whether the oven be heated by coal, gas or electricity. To find out when the food in the bag is cooked all one has to do is to make a little hole in the paper and look in ...

GOOD LAWN BEAUTIFIER.

Its Foundation Is Only an Old Umbrella Frame, but It Is Most Artistic.

One does not need the services of an expensive landscape gardener to make one's lawn a thing of beauty. Of course thick, well tended and well clipped turf is the prime necessity, but there is needed some bit of color to accentuate the eye resting beauty of the long sweep of green.

Here is the way one ingenious woman secured a centerpiece for her sward, according to Popular Mechanics:

She dug up an old umbrella from the attic, cut away the faded silk covering, ... the handle deep into the ground in a small circle cut out of the sod in the middle of the lawn.

AN IMPROVED $5 BILL

The Canadian four dollar bill has been improved on. Now there is no possible chance of mistaking it for a one dollar bill. Before the deficiency was noticed by the government and rectified, many mistakes were made to the effect that these bills were handed out in change for one dollar bills.

On the new bill the word four has been printed in large type across the top in both corners while on the back the same change is displayed the word being printed across the figures 4 at both ends of the bill. The Lord and Lady Minto series is being used on the bills.

Big Rally Sunday Night

Drew Immense Crowd Marked Enthusiasm Feature of Meeting

Fully 1000 people crowded the Royal theatre theatre Sunday evening to listen to addresses in the interests of the local option campaign now being carried on in this district. All the churches, except the Anglican, were closed, thus enabling the respective congregations to attend the rally. A choir of about 80 voices led the singing. T. N. Stephens presided and R. B. Hanson on the platform were all speakers of the evening. Rev. Messrs. Tyner, Hodgins, Sumerton and Gould, field secretary, Edmonton did not seem to be any question as to the sentiment of the audience as it was decidedly with the cause of local option.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system.

THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of known composition. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most priceless possession—your health—may be your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

We helped a flat-footed horse one year by taking his shoes off after haying and letting him run in the pasture for a few weeks. He came in looking and feeling like a new horse.

Only the uniform endure the agony of corns. The knowing ones apply Holloway's Corn Cure and get relief.

FAITH AND COURAGE

There are times when it is well that you take the initiative, and not wait for others to set the good example. The proper spirit with which to approach the righting of a public wrong is that it must be put down, even if you must do it yourself. You are only one; but that seemingly insignificant minority, through your efforts and influence, may later increase to many, all as eager, energetic persistent as yourself. You are then assured that, when the real conflict comes, each one will do his full share toward changing that minority to a triumphant majority. But remember that it requires true courage to be a minority of one, and true faith to work on, against odds, with full confidence in successful achievement.

In farming as in all other vocations attention is vastly better than intention.

It is altogether likely that potatoes will be much higher in price this season than they were last year. The drought which prevailed over a large part of the country in the early summer cut the yield in half. Growers in parts of the country where two crops of a season are possible, were urged to plant a second crop.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

There is something lacking in the character of the youth who habitually refers to his parents as "the old man" and the old woman." Sometimes this habit is excused on the ground of thoughtlessness, but a ten should never be lacking in thoughtfulness for the parents who shielded their young feet from the stony places and have laid [illegible] upon them most unselfish [illegible]. Frequently we hear it charged that the children of our day are lacking in filial respect as compared with those of earlier generations. We are, however, disposed to question that declaration. There is perhaps less [illegible] on the part of the parents and a little more comradeship and familiarity on the part of the children than formerly, but on the whole there is no [illegible] decline in filial love. When we find this love and respect absent, we may be sure there is something amiss with the boy or the girl in the case.

Eczema Always Burning and Itching

Used Box of Cuticura Ointment and It Completely Disappeared.

"I have suffered from eczema for two years. The trouble began on one arm where there appeared a red spot of about a five-cent size, and it always [illegible] the time itching and burning. The first days I didn't care, but seeing that it grew in size I tried [illegible] ointment and [illegible] ointment but both without success. It was always burning and itching. Having seen in the newspaper the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies, I tried a sample, and seeing that it improved, I bought a box of the Cuticura Ointment. After having used one box my eczema completely disappeared. The Cuticura Ointment should be kept in every home." (Signed) [illegible] Gilligay, [illegible], Que., Jan. 14, 1911.

Reception Nov. 3
To be Given by V. C. Club at the Royal George—Rooms Secured
The Young Men's Conservative Club held a meeting Tuesday evening at the temporary club rooms and transacted considerable routine business. It was decided to engage the rooms at the rear of the Standard office in the Royal George Theatre building as permanent headquarters, to be opened about the first of November.
The Club will give a reception and dance at the Royal George on the evening of 3rd November, the occasion being the formal opening of the Club rooms. A committee, comprising several ladies and gentlemen was appointed to look after the arrangements, and it is hoped to make the affair one of the social events of the season. As soon as the Club is under way, it is proposed to take up the organization of athletic teams, comprising curling, hockey, and later on football and lacrosse. Teams will be entered in the district leagues at the opening of the season.
At the suggestion of Mr. Munro, [illegible] was appointed, and James kennedy appointed to fill the vacancy. A committee was appointed to look after the details in connection with the opening of the club rooms and their equipment with furniture and reading matter.

LET MOONEY DO IT

MOONEY'S BISCUITS

BISCUITS MUST BE FRESH TO BE PALATABLE

MOONEY'S BISCUITS ARE THE FRESH BISCUITS

Fresh enough to take the place of the bread and biscuits you bake yourself.

Because the MOONEY system is so perfect that every biscuit is shipped the same day it leaves the oven.

The big Winnipeg factory is so close that your grocer gets MOONEY'S in a few hours—no long haul—no deterioration.

Besides the demand for MOONEY'S—the popular biscuit—is so great that his stock is always changing.

MOONEY'S never grow stale on the grocers' shelves.

That's one reason why

are fresher, crisper and more appetizing.

CONCERNING MOLLIE

She Proves Herself Equal to the Occasion

By AGNES G. BROGAN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1912.

There was a dignified aloofness about Professor Craythorne's manner which forbade familiarity. This may have been accountable for the fact that he still remained a bachelor as the years of his thirties grew to an end. Maidens who admired his fine face and many sterling qualities retired disheartened from the field of conquest at his unapproachable demeanor, while the professor in turn regarded them one and all with pitying tolerance. They were pretty and amusing, no doubt, but impossible as interesting companions, while deep in his heart was a hope unconfessed that eventually he would meet one woman whose mind could follow his own down the difficult paths of learning, for he was convinced that the happiness of two people must always depend upon their sympathetic understanding. And when the professor had reached this conclusion he met Mollie. It was at an evening party given by the rector's wife, and the hostess, remembering her learned guest, introduced a historical conundrum game by way of entertainment. The professor, looking up with a thoughtful frown, met the mischievous gaze of Mollie's blue eyes.

"Did the last one?" she asked seriously.

"I beg your pardon?" His tone was coldly questioning.

"I would like to copy your answer to the last question," Mollie confided. "You see, I don't know what became of those dead and gone kings, and I'm sure I do not care, but one really ought to have one correct answer among the fifteen, and you—a flattering pause—"you know everything."

"I may be better able to solve the problem," the professor answered condescendingly, "when I shall have given it sufficient thought."

"That's right," Mollie encouraged; "don't be a quitter."

Professor Craythorne stared in astonishment at the disrespectful young person, but, quite unconscious of her offense, Mollie ...

...

"He will be at home tonight," Dick remarked ... as he turned toward the door.

...

"I come at your daughter's request," he said, "hoping that when you realize her future happiness is at stake you will not withhold your consent to her marriage with Richard Brandon."

...

"This is a great disappointment to me," he said at length, "and you will pardon my bluntness. I had hoped that my daughter's choice might have fallen upon yourself."

Armstrong & Walker have a bunch of mares at their stables for sale. Mr Armstrong brought the lot up from Calgary reaching town Monday night. Those looking for a good class of horse should have a look at these.

The W. A. of St. Saviour's church met at the rectory Wednesday afternoon and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. H. A. Taylor; Vice-President, Mrs. Mortimer; Treasurer, Mrs. Chas. Pilkie, Secretary, Miss Pinkney. It is the intention of the auxiliary to hold a sale of work in the near future.

The singing of the International Operatic Company will make you disdain your graphophone selections of Operatic and and other classical selections because the company will give you realistic selections. You will hear first class artists as they really are, you will see the characters as they should be, and you will perceive to the fullest extent of your musical intelligence, and to hear and see operatic art once will have a far more lasting value than the repetition of a record a thousand times. Why not be a true lover of music and patronize the International Operatic Company and get the feast of your life recorded on your memory at a price that bears no comparison to the value you will receive. Dont miss this unique opportunity at Vermilion on Saturday Oct. 28th.

FROCK OF RESEDA GREEN BROADCLOTH.

This dainty costume of reseda green broadcloth, which is braided in the same color, appears to be a smart suit worn over a lace blouse, but the "blouse" is merely a yoke and jabot of cream lace set into the bodice, and a circular lip tunic gives the coat effect.

A Queen's Pantry.

Queen Mary's pantry at Windsor is said to contain the most valuable collection of tableware in the world. Every reign since Queen Elizabeth's has contributed to the collection, which is stored in two rooms. The walls are lined with cases made of glass and mahogany, with similar cases occupying the center of each room. The most imposing thing in these two rooms is the dinner service of solid gold used only for dinners of the highest state. There is a table of solid silver three feet in length. A rose water fountain of silver has a dome supported on columns around which are grouped horses and hounds. A silver gilt flagon almost a yard high is said to have been saved from the armada. A pair of bellows mounted in silver and gold was once the property of Nell Gwyn. There is a massive pair of firedogs in solid silver made for Charles II., and a huge punchbowl was contributed by George IV.

Properties of Buttermilk.

Some doctors go so far as to say that there is no case of indigestion that cannot be cured by plain buttermilk. Perhaps that accounts for the present fad for it.

At any rate, it is a hearty food, and two glasses a day are enough for any one. It is said to take over an hour for it to digest thoroughly, and if more food is put into the stomach before it has disposed of what is already there, with a little time besides for rest, more harm is done than good.

So the best time to drink buttermilk is with the meals, and its mild acid acts beneficially on all the juices of the stomach. It is the acid which has such an excellent effect upon tanned, freckled and sunburned skin, and it bleaches as well as cools and heals.

Corn too old to be used for ... will still make good soup. Cut off the tips of the grains, scrape off the pulp and boil in a quart of milk slowly for almost an hour. Then put the corn through a colander and return it to the milk, throwing away the tough skins. Season with salt and thicken slightly with a tablespoonful each of butter and flour rubbed to a paste, or an egg stirred in just as the soup is taken from the fire.

CURED OF CONSTIPATION

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them.

PIN-PRICKS OF LIFE

The man who is mauled by a savage beast has something to talk about, and is an object of interest, even of admiration—assuming, of course, that he lives to tell his tale; but you are nothing of a hero when your face is swollen up, and look like a lop-sided balloon.

And so the pin-pricks of life are apt temporarily to hurt far more than big troubles.

What are the commonest pin-pricks of a boy's life?

Well, there is being poor. I don't mean real, desperate poverty, with not enough to eat, but comparative poverty, as, for example, not having so much pocket money as other fellows.

I have never been so familiar with riches as to have any contempt for them, but money is not everything in this world.

After all, if a fellow sneers at you because he is better off than you are it merely shows that he has precious little to boast about.

Money ... made anybody brave ..., manly, clever, a good sportsman or good at games.

I admit that it is rather vexing to have ... put up with a seven-and-six penny hat when other fellows are swaggering about with one guinea or twenty-five shilling willows.

It isn't the bat, however, but the way you use it that counts.

If you make thirties and fifties with your cheap bat, while the other fellows are qualifying to start a duck farm, all the greater and sweeter is your triumph.

Then there are shabby clothes; but as someone has said—I never can remember names—"clothes do not make the man."

DEHORNING DANGERS

There is a considerable amount of danger in dehorning both old and young stock. The dangers to the young are found in the careless or undue use of caustic or other burning material used to prevent the growth of the bony substances in the young animal. In many cases the burning caustic has penetrated the skull and caused death after convulsions and great pain.

AFTER 7 YEARS SUFFERING

I Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Wewoka, Okla.—"I had female trouble for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors treated me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. In a short time I had gained my average weight and am now strong and well."—Mrs. SALLIE STEVENS, R. F. D. No. 3, Box 31, Wewoka, Okla.

Another Grateful Woman.

London, Ont.—I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was so weak and tired that I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it.—Mrs. WM. A. BURPY, 946 Dame St., London, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has surely cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, and nervous prostration.

VERMILION AS A RAILROAD CENTRE

The stir which has been caused by the Canadian Northern Railway applying for a charter from Drumheller, through Vermilion to Medicine Hat makes this a time when a resume of all the railroad projects which have been launched for Vermilion would not be out of place.

Consider the Canadian Northern Railway charters for instance.

The line which is now running to Stettler and which is to be continued to Calgary in the near future has Vermilion for its terminus.

The line for which the Canadian Northern have obtained a blanket charter from Vermilion to Cold Lake will open up a country of immense wealth as all those that have been through the district which it will affect know well.

Then the chartered line from Vermilion to Wetaskiwin will again open up an ... fertile country, and the benefit ... line would accrue to Vermilion.

Finally with regard to Canadian Northern charters, we have the application for a charter for the first mentioned line which will apparently take the place of the former Whitford Lake line, via Drumheller, Vermilion, and Medicine Hat line.

Apart from Canadian Northern ... we have received information ... notices ... Pacific Railway ... the north country ... from Wakaw, ... Grand Trunk Pacific Railway are ... doing the same from a point in the vicinity of Wainwright.

... These contemplated developments when put ... Vermilion ...

... these roads will mean that Vermilion will become a ... importance and a ... point of magnitude ... the development ... taken place in ... the present time ... productive ... circumstance compared with that which will take place in the next few ... owing to the lack of ... transportation ... has been held back ... rapid settlement ... more favorable ... railroads, have been able to accomplish.

Who can forecast the brilliant future that lies before Vermilion? The excellence of the soil in this district, coupled with the railroad development which must take place ... of the ... Alberta. From ... men who have made ... conditions in Western ... occupation are ... Vermilion and the district surrounding it cannot but be prosperous, and they predict that the future of this point will exceed the expectations of the most sanguine.

After all when one considers the history of other districts in this fertile north-west, one cannot but be impressed with the knowledge that we have a heritage here unequaled by none, and that the future holds for this district prospects of unexcelled prosperity and production.

The development of this section will make Vermilion a city and a centre of no mean importance.

Municipal Matters

Several Busy Sessions of Council Held to Further Town's Business Electric Light Contracts Let

Besides the regular monthly meeting of the town council, no less than four special meetings have as well been held to date this month. A very considerable amount of extra business was entailed in connection with the awarding of the several contracts in connection with the municipal electric ... these have all been satisfactorily let and the town is engaged on the extensions to the pole line rendered necessary for the additional street lights that are to be added as well as reaching the many residences that are to be lighted by electricity. All work is proceeding favorably.

Jno. Welsh of Hensell, Ont., an electrician of ten years experience has been engaged by the town for one year. His salary until the plant is ready for opperation will be $75 a month and $80 per month thereafter. Mr. Welsh comes with the highest recommendations for the positions he is to fill.

The request of the fire brigade for a grant of $10.00 per practise and an additional grant of 50c per man if the number exceeds 20 was considered and a motion passed granting same.

Constable Oakley was authorised to enforce the By-law regulating chimneys and to see that defective chimneys are replaced.

It was decided to send the secretary to Saskatoon to complete the sale of the pole line from J. C. Dunkle to the town. In accordance therewith the secretary made the trip and was successful in completing the transfer.

The following tenders were awarded by the council in connection with the lighting plant:-

Westinghouse & Co. for electrical equipment complete as per specifications submitted for the sum of $1451.20;

Gorman, Clancy & Grindley for pump 5x12 as quoted, at $137.00.

Waterous Engine Works for engine, boiler, pump heater, etc., for the sum of $4559.00 (As per plans and specifications submitted.)

A contract for general supplies for one year was signed with Westinghouse & Co. which gives the town special price on all supplies which might be needed from time to time during the year.

A. Beecroft, town scavenger, was reengaged for another year at a salary of $100.00 per month, an increase of $10.00 per month over remuneration of last year.

At a short meeting held Tuesday afternoon the plans of the C. N. R. for a spur across Oliver Ave. from their main line to the ... and electric power house was sanctioned. The work will proceed immediately.

Why Should I Use Cuticura Soap?

"There is nothing the matter with my skin, and I thought Cuticura Soap was only for skin troubles." True, it is for skin and scalp troubles, but its great mission is to prevent skin troubles. For more than a generation its delicate emollient and prophylactic properties have rendered it the standard for this purpose, while its intense purity and refreshing fragrance give to it all the advantages of the best of toilet soaps. It is also unrivalled in keeping the hands soft and white, the hair live and glossy, and the scalp free from dandruff and irritation.

While its first cost is a few cents more than that of ordinary toilet soaps, it is prepared with such time and of such materials, that it wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of other soap, and making the hands soft and white, the hair live and glossy, and the scalp free from dandruff and irritation.

Cuticura Soap is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, but the truth of these claims may be demonstrated without cost by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. 78L, Boston, U. S. A., for a liberal sample cake, together with a thirty-two page book on the skin and hair.

BOY RUNS ERRAND
Nanny Skinner Tries to Do Kindness For Widow.
HAS ALL KINDS OF TROUBLE.
He Gets a Escort and a Jag and Tries to Deliver Them. Encounters Thirsty Man, a Policeman Soaking Rapscodia and Convicted Souls.

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

THAT Skinner boy was on his way to his aunt's to get her if she could come together for her bereavedish grater when a woman hi her gate halted him an' say:

"Heh, I want some one to do an errand for me."

"For'a," replied Humpy.

"He must be an honest boy."

"For'a."

"He must be a boy that will walk right along about his business instead of stopping to climb abode trees or chase cats."

"I'm such a boy."

"I hope you are. You look like a good boy. If I send you on an errand do you think you can feel the responsibility of it?"

"I know I can, ma'am. I'm on an errand now for my mother, and I feel all the responsibility of it. It is going to burden a horse-drawn grater."

"There's no responsibility in borrowing a thing like that, but I guess you will do. I want you to go to 34 Grove street. A Mrs Barrow lives there and is sick in bed. Tell her I sent you to get a dozen eggs and a pint of milk. Be careful not to break the eggs and don't spill the milk. Can you remember all that?"

"I can do it."

"Then here's a dollar bill. Get the eggs at Hanks' grocery and the milk at Bowers' dairy. Be careful not to lose the money. Now, start right along and don't stop to play with any boys you may meet. Come right back to me and I'll give you a penny for your trouble."

Humpy started off with a look of importance on his face that showed how much he felt honored by the trust reposed in him. He had gone about a block when he met Bill Hanks, a boy of his own age, and Bill called out:

"Hello, Humpy! Where you going?"

"I'm on an errand for my mother," replied Humpy, with dignity.

"What you got in your hand?"

"A dollar bill."

"Let me see it."

Humpy showed the bill, and Bill said:

"Say, I'll tell you what we'll do. You give me the bill and I'll go to the store and get the things, and you can go back and tell your mother I did it. Then you can keep the change and we'll go fishing with it."

Humpy started on and was around the corner in time. It was, however, to relate that he was seized by the collar by a policeman and was also seized by the collar by a policeman and was also seized by the collar by a policeman and was also

Petition For Early Construction

Active Steps Being Taken to Have Work on Grade from Vermilion-Medicine Hat Line Undertaken At an Early Date

Pursuant to the news of the Canadian Northern Railway applying for a charter for a line from Bethlehem through Vermilion to Medicine Hat, the progressive citizens of Vermilion have caused a petition to be circulated through the district. This petition calls the attention of the government and the C. N. R. to the benefit that would accrue to the district and the province in general from the building of this line, and ask that they will ensure the construction of it at an early a date as possible.

There is no possible doubt but that a line directly south would benefit this district enormously. Up to the present time, immigrants into this section have perforce had to come through Winnipeg and Saskatoon, or through Calgary and Edmonton. At these points they have been met by [illegible] and agents who have done [illegible] in locating them on farms in their district, [illegible]

The proposed line from Medicine Hat would change [illegible] United States [illegible] this district, and the completion of this line, backed up by a judicious advertising policy which would aim at making the advantages of this splendid district more widely known, would [illegible]

[illegible] prove that the settlers of this country appreciate the possibilities that this line will throw open to you.

It was nearly noon of the following day when the watchman at the Upell summer hotel at Nettle Island crept up slowly up the bay and was astonished to find in command of three white men in the last stages of exhaustion one of them, in fact, was unconscious and had to be carried to the house. He did marvel, however, that another of the travelers should begin to cry brokenly when told that the mail boat had sailed for Kodiak the previous evening.

"You had your chance and got in last night," said the watchman sympathetically. "Better luck next trip, I guess. Here, come on."

"It's not on account of that," sobbed the stranger. "I'm crying because I'm glad to get here. I'm glad it's all over. I'm glad I'm safe. I'm glad I'm alive."

"Alive?" echoed the watchman. "Why, what's been the matter with you?"

"Starvation, exposure, fatigue, hardship, suffering, misery, and—and—and—"

"Oh, I see," said the watchman, nodding his head wisely. "Been prospecting, eh? Well, you're not the first one that's come in here with a story like that. Why, I've seen—"

"Prospecting!" cried the stranger, sitting up suddenly. "Prospecting! Do you think I'd go prospecting for gold? Do you think I'd go through what I've been through for gold? Why, I'd rather—I'd rather—"

"Well, what would you rather?" asked the watchman, with a grin.

"I'd rather be dead," was the reply.

"Well, I don't blame you," said the watchman. "Now, you just lie down and rest up a bit, and I'll get you something to eat."

"Food!" cried the stranger, with a shudder. "Don't mention it. I'll never eat again as long as I live. I've had enough to last me a lifetime. I'm full to the neck and over the head. I'm—"

"Why, you're delirious," said the watchman. "Here, you'd better—"

"No, indeed!" the other answered quickly. "I will send you in raising that money. You know the peculiar style of the fishing business, and I don't."

Finally the steamer darted, and the three men put up at a hotel.

"You better train me up to wearing a dress suit before we get east," George warned, "or I'll make poor Lord Fitzhubert and spoil the deal. I could wear it on the cars and get away in it."

"My dear fellow, it takes more than a week to 'get away' in a dress suit," Boyd replied at the end of a month; "but the big fellow was merely a boy and was wonderfully impressed.

"Well, if there is a dawn east going I'll go there," he declared. "I'll go there and I'll practice on her," he insisted. The hand will usually enable us to think better.

"Well, I know from experience that the brain is not at its best after a heavy meal, and I have also found that the circulation of the trouble blood in the body is drawn away from the brain and the extremities to help in the work of digestion.

"For the same reason we should not think best after a period of intense mental application. Rest the brain and it is then that clerks do better work before going than afterwards.

Teachers' Convention

The convention of the Teachers Association of the Vermilion and Vegreville inspectorates, held in Vermilion Thursday and Friday, Oct. 26th and 27th, was a marked success. The programme was an interesting one and consisted of papers by different members of the association.

On Thursday evening Dr. Fairly of Alberta University, delivered a very interesting lecture on "German Education." Miss Bligh, of the Edmonton schools, read a very interesting paper on "Primary work."

The Convention wishes to thank the Town Council and Citizens of Vermilion for the way in which they provided for its entertainment, while in Vermilion.

Points for Mothers

Dr. Wiley's Advice.

Children under ten years of age should eat rot at the same time with tomatoes.

If mothers knew the enormous advantage to be derived from such a procedure they would welcome the idea. Children would then eat food properly mixed to children. Things would be cooked, and they would have before them just what they should eat.

As it is they see the food before them that is eaten by the grownups, and they demand it, cry for it, rant for it or refuse by any other method that the little one is hale to, and the food proved is too often prone to say, "Oh, let him have it this once." And there you are. You know the rest—the little fevered brow, the colic pains, etc.

But if with a bit of extra work the little ones were permitted to have only what is recognized as good food then their eyes would not be bigger than their stomachs, to the everlasting good of all concerned.

Children are very plentiful and are very fond of, only they ought not to be. Children unless the needs are satisfied. That is, they may be satisfied with pulp and juice only given to children. Seeds are indigestible. This is a possibility that they may have to the appendix.

In cases of the matter is that all factors take of the year are nonsense. Especially to child. Also out of the table, just as we do not know to eat it food properly. They swallow as soon as possible, and then bunch of fresh food are given to the child, which are unable to digest them. Especially in this the cooked fruits.

I would put a ban on nearly all cooked fruits for children. They probably cause more trouble than anything else, and 90 on account of improper mastication. But if fruits are cooked is another matter. It is, in every instance, far better for the children in summer season to be one of vegetables and fruits, and it should have advantage of.

In regard to infants I have one thing to say first, last and always, and that is a strict diet of pure milk, preferably mother's. If not this, then some healthy animal's.

As for the babe it is the one great food principle intended by nature, and nothing can take its place. Not even baby in the best weather great care must be taken to ground the risks. Milk is under with this milk is the only for consumption.

There is no a great mistake in much as it's the milk due for children. Remember that under the age of three years it should be the child's sole food.

Children's Dresses.

Every mother desires to see her little girl dressed attractively. She can accomplish this by making their frocks herself with the help of a sewing-machine. Materials can be bought for such small price now that every young girl may be provided with one or two new dresses to begin the school year, and to carry her over to the winter season, when cloth frocks are needed.

One pretty little model is made of a plain blue linen trimmed with bands of white eyelet insertion. It is a one piece model, closing at the left side and having a square neck. The neck is finished with a band of the insertion, and the sleeves have the same trimming. The material is gathered in fine fold and when in the back which fall straight from the shoulders. The sleeves are short and full, giving plenty of play to the little arms.

A frock of blue and white polka dotted percale has a shaped silk yoke of plain blue, which extends over the shoulders and is edged about with two rows of white braid. Deep straps of the blue hang full sleeves. The bottom of the skirt is trimmed with a two inch band of plain blue with the top edged with braid. The buttons to close the waist and hang the best plaited skirt are narrow bars of bevel trimmed blue. A shallow gamope having a high collar is worn with this dainty frock.

Either one of these three models would make a new dress for your little girl.

Among the Riddles.

A mother who likes to see her baby and small sons the home interested in some question told them the other day that she would give a quarter to the child who discovered for her or her the locate in which the following bird were mentioned. The dove, sparrow, swallow, duck, pelican, raven, hawk and eagle. Of course it was not difficult to see the connection. After the birds were "discovered" the mother told all the stories she knew about birds, and the children had decided to read, and the day, which was a rainy one, was one of the best spent of the vacation.

MOTHERS! DO YOU KNOW

That when you put a salve into your child's skin, it passes through the pores and mixes the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal ointment called Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of poisonous matter, and no poisonous mineral or drug matter. Pure and herbal, it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eczemas, rashes, itch, burns and boils as no other healing can. Nothing else is quite so good for piles. Rubbed into the nostrils it relieves at once and cures catarrh in time. Equally good for cuts, bruises, sprains, sores or cold, sores of all kinds. Zam-Buk is safe and most powerful. Ask those who have proved it.

All druggists and stores, 50 cents. Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

ZAM-BUK

SHOULD BE IN YOUR HOME.

FARMERS TO KEEP SNAKES

Agriculture! Sharps of Kansas Say Serpents Needed to Kill Gophers

Manhattan, Kan., Dec. 15.—Before the State Agricultural College here a number of farmers will keep a herd of prairie snakes on his farm and when "Bill" James starts "Bill" Jones or the rivers on Sunday afternoon to make war on them they will tell of the prowess of their reptilian allies and tale trade.

Snakes are valuable to the farmer who takes advice and they are not hard to breed and raise them he says. The snakes drive out the pocket gophers and make the most keen of rodents. Persons who have been in operating with snakes in the air say that the snakes will not bite unless they are driven across of all. Then a clear of gophers and make a and that they are worth at least $5 a snake in a sack of snakes.

The horticultural College has helped a lot in an snakes on the farm. It has been that a legislature has enacted protecting a certain kind of snakes and that they shall not be killed. Birds are protected. Maybe a snake warden, who rustle a bit deeper snake wardens, will be provided for and the politicians. The gophers and mice have been doing damage in Kansas valley fields that legislation has been called to remedy farming to the full extent.

Not the bull snake has been found to be far superior to poisons for killing gophers and so on. Most farmers have dogs and cats, but the snake experts assert that the bull snake would be more valuable. The farmer is advised to give the wriggling protector of shirts a wide berth if he does the hen and the rat family.

Bright and early every morning the farmer should gather his bull snakes, put them in a bag and harden on the gophers. Holes have the gophers and the mice will be no more.

"Whoop-la! There he goes! After him Jimmy Bull! Right down that hole! Bull Snake! Wiggle along there, now you old skinner! Fix 'em up! Make 'em hot! Bull! Bull! Bull! Whip 'em!"

That would be the farmer's cry when he and his dog and the bull snake got to work. Farmers with a few bull snakes might wish to keep a few rattlesnakes around, as they are said to be good mousers.

A RELIC OF EARLIEST AMERICA

United States Government Will Preserve Ancient Canoe.

Washington, Dec. 15.—The United States government will preserve as a relic of the earliest inhabitants of America the ancient dugout canoe found buried in the bed of the Potomac river by workmen engaged in dredging operations.

Probably 1,000 years ago, when the Indians were in the height of their power, and long before the white man had ever seen the shores of the New World, the canoe was used by the aborigines in their fishing expeditions on the Potomac. Then it was overturned in a storm and sank to the bottom of the river, where it remained undisturbed for centuries.

Recently workmen engaged in dredging the river for the purpose of deepening the channel for the passage of vessels unearthed the canoe. It was found to be in a remarkably good state of preservation, and the government has decided to place it in the National museum.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature R.V. Pierce, M.D.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

The splendid appearance of a "Fit-rite" suit is the result of the careful, honest way in which it is made. A handsome outward appearance is of no value, unless it has the sterling material underneath to back it up.

It is the care taken in this particular that makes the "Fit-rite" a good suit all through. The hidden parts are given the same attention the surface receives. It retains its shape because the shape and style are built right into it.

Look over a "Fit-rite" suit and examine the quality of the material and tailoring. It is an honest effort to supply good clothes at a reasonable price.

Good Roads Movement

Recent Meeting Most Important Step Taken in This Connection

New Westminster, B. C. November 6—The Good Roads convention held in this city on November 3 and 4 was the most important step ever taken in connection with the Good Roads movement in Canada. Before the convention adjourned the Canadian Highway Association had been formed, its object being to secure the building of a first class road from Halifax, N. S., to Alberni, B. C. and also to assist in the extension of the Pacific Highway, which now runs from Tia Juana, Mexico, to Vancouver, B. C. the plan being to eventually make this on the northern terminus of this road.

Over a hundred delegates from all parts of Canada and the American Pacific coast were in attendance, including some of the most prominent advocates of good roads on this continent.

Hon. Thomas Taylor, minister of public works for British Columbia, in the course of a speech replete with facts and figures bearing on road improvement and extension, made the important announcement that Federal assistance towards the construction of main roads in British Columbia was assured. On behalf of the provincial government he promised a sincere persistence of the Better Roads policy with which his name has been associated.

The following were elected officers of the Canadian Highway Association: Hon. President, Hon. Thomas Taylor; President, W. J. Kerr, Westminster; vice presidents for the B. C. [illegible] districts, A. J. McCandless, Vancouver board of trade, T. S. Baxter, Vancouver Auto Club, A. E. White, Westminster Board of Trade, T. J. Armstrong, Westminster [illegible]

[illegible]

Highway Association. Much of the credit for the success of the formation of the Canadian Highway Association is due to A. E. Todd, of Victoria, and W. J. Kerr of Westminster, who was rewarded for his energetic work by being given the first presidency of that ambitious organization.

ANNIE PLAYED GOOSEBERRY

And Miss Lettice Answered the Letter in Person.

By ETHEL BARRINGTON.

Blackberries hedged the road on either side as it wound higher and higher toward the Berkshires. Here and there some belated strawberries, tiny specks of crimson in the grass, joined their fragrance to the invigorating breath of the place. From an unpainted barn came the persistent click-clack thud-thud of a loom, where Miss Lettice was weaving yards of carpet from little balls of colored rags. A voice sharp enough to the verge of displeasure startled her.

"Will you finish tomorrow, sister?"

"I—it doesn't hardly seem possible"—

"'Twas promised. 'Pears to me you're uncommon slow. Surely you're not such a fool as to be thinking of William Henderson and such nonsense at your age."

Miss Lettice's hand involuntarily sought the fastening of her bodice, but the faint crackle of the secreted paper was too imperceptible to reach Mrs. Allen's ears.

"The letter was delayed. He's going away tomorrow"—

"Lettice Howard, he's no man for you. We settled that years ago. I'm ashamed for you—that you so much as think on him now."

"He's free again"— Miss Lettice spoke deprecatingly.

"Free, is it? If he wasn't good enough for you when he was young, a widower with three children certainly ain't no gain." With a toss of the head Mrs. Allen recrossed the road to her cottage.

Miss Lettice sat miserably uncertain, her hands idle in her lap. She forgot the loom and Mrs. Harris, who was counting on the finished carpet. Her thoughts were with the curly headed lad from whom her sister had separated her because he failed to settle in the town where he was born, but, like a rolling stone, was forever wandering, apparently gathering little of this world's goods. Now he had returned and wanted to see her. It seemed a cruel prank of fate to have joined forces with her sister and in the form of delayed mail prevent their meeting. A tear gathered beneath her lashes, but before it fell a pair of warm arms wound themselves around her neck.

"Aunt Lettice, you're in love, in love! Don't ask me how I know, because you are. You don't listen to what folks are saying, and as for the carpet"—

"Yes, dear, the carpet." Miss Lettice seized the shuttle and sent it flying through the shed of warp threads. Her feet mechanically worked the treadle shifting the heddles, then with the batten she bent the woof of rag into place again and again.

"We can't talk through that noise," she remarked plaintively.

"My dear, there is nothing"—

"There is, you darling. Come, 'fess up. I'm not to be put off. It's fellow sympathy." The crimson deepened in the laughing face and with soft wheedling she gained the desired end. Annie, and Miss Lettice surrendered her letter.

It was in no sense a love letter, yet it was the nearest approach to one that the spinster had ever received. Fumbling she read between the lines:

Dear Lettice—I am visiting my brother Jim till Wednesday. I want so much to see you. If I'd be welcome send me word. Yours, as ever, WILLIAM.

"I—I only got it just night"—

"It's too late to write now," her niece hurried on, "but you must go to Chatham to see him. Make believe ...

... a line of light beneath her sister's door.

"Seems to me you're a long time getting to bed," she admonished.

"I—I'm most ready," came the reply. If Miss Lettice's voice sounded less even than usual Mrs. Allen was not herself sufficiently calm to notice.

As was customary in the morning, Miss Lettice betook herself to the barn and the working of the loom broke familiarly on the quiet air. Shortly after 10 Mrs. Allen, attracted by the rumble of wheels on the road, saw that the carrier was making an extra trip. She spoke of it to Annie, who came in hot and tired to noonday dinner.

"Call your aunt," she continued. "The pork will be cold. I got it especially to tempt her. She's eaten nothing these two days."

"Rob's mother invited her"— began Annie nervously.

"What for?" Mrs. Allen turned sharply, dish in hand.

"She has some rags for carpet weaving. Rob told me about it."

Mrs. Allen sniffed, disgruntled. "Your aunt had to go traipsing off without telling me. Besides, there's none too much daylight to finish Mrs. Harris' piece."

In the afternoon she was too busy preserving to notice Annie's absence or give thought to her sister, but when the last jar of jelly was sealed she caught up her sunbonnet and crossed the road to relieve Lettice.

As she entered the barn the glare from the outside sunlight blinded her, but even when that passed she doubted her own sight. Rob was working the loom, while Annie, rosy and tender, hung over the back of his chair. Miss Lettice was nowhere to be seen, but the carpet was completed. Even as she entered Rob threw down the shuttle and caught Annie around the waist.

"Now my reward!" he cried, his lips seeking hers teasingly.

"Annie!" At Mrs. Allen's cry the young people turned, but Rob did not release the girl.

"Mrs. Allen, she's promised—that is, with your approval. I love her. I'll be as good to her as I know how."

"Say yes, mother. I'm so happy"—

There was a painful silence before Mrs. Allen reluctantly gave consent. Then her bitterness sought an outlet.

"Where is your aunt?"

"The carpet's done," explained Rob cheerfully.

"Done, is it? By whom?"

"Mis' Allen, Mis' Allen"— The carrier drew her horse up at the barn and on Mrs. Allen's appearance thrust a note into her hand and hastened on.

"Daughter, did you know of this?" Mrs. Allen's voice shook as she passed the paper to the girl, who read aloud:

Sister, don't be angry. I just had to see William, and he could not bear that we should part again. I'm very happy.
LETTICE HENDERSON.

"She's married, mother, dear. Now it's done won't you be glad too?"

But Mrs. Allen turned and walked silently over to the cottage.

"It's a bit rough on her losing you both the same day," admitted Rob, drawing the girl's hand into his, "but we'll make it all up to her in the future."

What's in a Man.

BOSTON'S EARTHQUAKES.

They Have Shaken Up the City Seventeen Times Since 1638.

Boston is generally regarded as outside the earthquake zone and therefore immune from shocks of this kind. People living in San Francisco believed the same of their city prior to the great quake of 1906, with as little reason.

As a matter of fact, Boston has been more or less seriously shaken by seismic disturbances no less than seventeen times since 1638, when the pilgrim colony, which had eighteen years before been established at Plymouth, was alarmed by an earthquake with vibrations that lasted twenty days.

The last time Boston had a shock was Sunday, March 21, 1904, when earth tremors radiating from St. John, N. B., to Hartford, Conn., jarred the city in a fashion that alarmed the residents.

Of the first earthquake, Bradford's history declares, it was "greate and fearful," and continuing says:

"It was in this place heard before it was felte. It came with a rumbling noyse or low murmure like unto remote thunder. As ye noyse approached nerer the earth begane to shake. It was observed ye somers for divers years togeather after this earthquake were not so hot and seasonable for the ripening of corn as formerly."

Of the earthquakes recorded many were of great severity. Some damaged houses and churches, ripped up fences, closed old springs and opened new ones. At times the earthquakes came with such frequency as to make it appear the early settlers of this region suffered an epidemic of them.

The earthquake that destroyed Lisbon in November, 1755, was felt here, curiously enough. As if this were not enough three other shocks occurred the same week, all of great severity.—Boston Journal.

The Rocking Chair

IT is joyful news to bird lovers that fashion, driven to it no doubt by their unceasing protective efforts, has abandoned the plumage birds to near extinction. Thus hope dawns at last, and no thanks to women who could long ago have united to save the birds.

The above is a comment by Caspar Whitney on an article on "Fashion in Women's Hat Plumage," by Annette Bradshaw in [illegible]. Mrs. Bradshaw says that, driven by the exorbitant price of bird plumage in Paris, the fashion makers have at last discovered that it is possible to make just as graceful artificial trimmings as any grown by birds.

In Paris the unmounted aigrettes cost one hundred dollars an ounce and added to this sixty per cent. duty, besides the cost of mounting them. May the price ever increase!

Fashion has always been the bird murderer, and it has been estimated that in England alone thirty million bird skins are used yearly, Europe uses one hundred and fifty millions and America fifty millions. Why it seems as if the women of these countries were fairly drenched in the blood of the murdered innocents. [illegible] this fearful slaughter the women could have stopped at any time by each one simply refusing to wear bird feathers, so that every woman who wears a feather not from domestic fowls is guilty in a greater or less degree of the wilful destruction of the more beautiful birds.

At one time women may have been excusable from ignorance for wearing feathers, the procuring of which entailed the greatest suffering to the bird and its young, but so much has been written and so [illegible] [illegible]

"Her Neice's Strategy"

(By Mary Grover.)

"Oh, Jim! what shall I do?

"This is from Aunt Maria to say she is coming to see us today on her way from Scotland. Oh! what shall we do?

"Do just listen:

"'My dear Neice,

"'As it is some time since I saw you and your husband, I am arranging to stay with you for three days on my way to Devonshire. I leave Edinburgh at 10.10 and get to Grantham at 4.17.

"'Kindly have a closed conveyance to meet me.

"'Your affectionate

"'Aunt Maria.'"

Poor little Dots looked quite white with anxiety and certainly Jim looked almost as worried.

"What a wretched nuisance," he said. "What shall we do? The 10.10 from Edinburgh! Then it's too late for a telegram to reach her, or I'd wire to say we were both dead."

"Oh! Jim, don't joke! How can you. Oh! isn't it dreadful! If only he wasn't here it would have been so nice, because I know Aunt Maria would like you, if she saw more of you, and we'd have everything so nice, and then she wouldn't be vexed with me any more."

"And then your fortune's made, eh! little girl?" said Jim. "As it is, she's bound to know, and she'll be in a perfect fury at the mess I've got you into, and she'll take you off with her, and, oh! hang it all! What a brute I've been to you!"

"Now, Jim, not another word of that. You know quite well that if I died in the workhouse I should still be glad I had married you, and that nothing would induce me to go and live with Aunt Maria—not all her fortune seven times over."

"Well! I'll go and see Ferguson this morning," Jim said. "I'll see if he can let me have some of that money he owes me. If so, I'll run back at once and pack the bailiff off before Aunt Maria comes. By the way, how are you off for house money?"

"I haven't a halfpenny left, Jim. I do hate to bother you, but what can we do? Aunt Maria is too substantial and matter of fact to live on air."

absence of things dear to her son—only for his sake—only that he did not change.

After that it was a deeper, stronger tie that bound them, and somehow both of them looked younger and better for the clearing away of all the misunderstandings.

• • • • •

All the same, things were very trying this morning, and Jim went off decidedly ruffled, and mentally muttering anathemas against himself at the "confounded hole he'd got her into."

However, he disposed of a small sketch and with enough in his pocket to give Aunt Maria a decent feed, at least before the game was up, he went home to give the necessary to Dots, and then hurried off to meet the dread visitor.

As he tore away again Dots whispered eagerly, "And it's all right about him, Jim, I've told him all about it, and he's promised to stay in the box room, and I've made it quite comfortable for him."

"Good," was Jim's rejoinder, while his face lost some of its harassed look.

Aunt Maria was a character, and Jim had much ado to preserve his quiet courteous bearing.

First he was accosted with "Well, young man, and how are you? I hope you've been treating her well. I've come to see."

This in the caustic-exponent tone you would adopt to a professional wife beater, and this, too, in the hearing of several people with whom he was familiar.

However, for Dot's sake, he would be all he should, and after all, he was feeling rather conscious of the fact that an armchair by a little fire—just above Aunt Maria's head—puffing clouds of evil-smelling tobacco. Would any of the fumes reach the delicate nose lying just underneath? So wondered poor Jim, as, after having been assured by Dots that Aunt Maria was safe for the night, he cautiously mounted the top stairs armed with a tray with cold meat, bread and cheese, and a glass of beer.

The next morning Aunt Maria was pleased to say she had slept well, and expressed herself very satisfied with the tour of inspection which she and Dots made after they had seen Jim off safely for the day.

They went for a drive after that, and, to Dots' amazement, the old lady, in peremptory tones, bade the coachman stop at a tobacconist's and get down and purchase a box of the "best cigarettes." "For your husband, my dear," she said, passing the box on to Dots.

"Don't thank me—it's for my own sake. Anything to prevent the odious tobacco smoke that found its way into my room last night."

"But, Aunt Maria, Jim never smokes ——" Tobacco, she was going to add, but stopped short, as a ghastly thought entered her head.

"Never mind, old girl," said Jim, to whom with trembling lips she had confided her fears that Aunt Maria would find out.

"After all she won't now, there's no chance. Ferguson gave me his cheque to-night, and as soon as the bank is open I'll get it cashed."

And peacefully and thankfully they slept.

Not so Aunt Maria, there was no horrid tobacco smoke to-night, but creak, creak, creak overhead, and then a low mumbling noise, and the banging to and fro of a casement window. She lay awake for a couple of hours, and then she could stand it no longer, and donning her wrapper and slippers opened her bedroom door. She listened. Yes it was from the room over hers, a box room Dots had told her it was. She was sleepless and annoyed. Whatever this ...

yourself as scarce as possible—that's for yourself."

And Dots said, very prettily:

"Yes! thank you so much for staying up here. You see it's my aunt—she is here for a day or two, and she would not understand."

"No, mum! she don't look 'xactly the sort who would—I could tell as 'ow she were a real lady for all she'd got so little on," and at the recollection he chuckled. "She was up 'ere last night —'eard the winder rattle—but I never let on who I was—no fear! Why, I'd give you my word I wouldn't."

Poor things—after all their trouble! It was hard!

"That's what has upset her then," said Dots. "I knew something was wrong."

But they could get no more out of their attic friend, except winks, and a knowing "I did 'er—she didn't never suspect—not she!"

So they hurried him off and awaited developments. The first development was Aunt Maria, enveloped in a dark veil of mystery.

The next development arrived half an hour later, in the form of the leading solicitor in the town.

He knew Jim personally, and was very apologetic, but repeated the tale Aunt Maria had told him.

Jim made a clean breast of it to him. He said it was the first time ... it had happened ... rent and that ... He was ... really both men had to have a hearty laugh.

Mr. Lawrence saw Aunt Maria ... She had never heard of a bailiff man before.

The solicitor not only explained the whole episode to her, but he told ... about Jim's sterling qualities and the way he was admired and respected by all who knew him, adding that his work was very good, and that he was considered to be a rising artist. And when Aunt Maria had got over the first shock, the little accident did the young people no harm.

First Annual Was A Successful Function

The Young Conservative club of Vermilion gave their first annual "at home" at the Royal George theatre on Friday evening the 3rd. of November. Over 200 people were present and the function was highly successful. The hall was very prettily decorated for the occasion. The ladies' dressing room was changed from the robing rooms underneath the stage to the front rooms while the gentlemen's dressing quarters were in the gallery. The change was much appreciated. The guests were received by members of the ladies' reception committee comprising Mrs. Mackinnon, Mrs. MacNab, Mrs. J. Dawson Stephens, Mrs. Mackenzie, Mrs. McIvor, Mrs. Winters, Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Harlin and Mrs. Craig. An informal programme was rendered the first part of the evening consisting of musical selections by the orchestra, songs by Mr. Morgan, and Miss Johnston, recitations by Miss Witherbee, songs by Mr. Morris and a piccolo solo by Mr. Collins, all of which were greeted with hearty encores. Dancing was the main feature of the evening's entertainment and included some twenty numbers. Luncheon was served in the club rooms which are located at the rear of the Standard office. Messrs. Witherbee & Uhlick were the caterers and they furnished a splendid menu of sandwiches, cake and coffee. The gowns worn by the ladies during the evening added much to the attractiveness of the scene.

The country districts were largely represented as well as several from Islay and Mannville. The affair was voted by all as the most enjoyable held in Vermilion, it surpassing all previous efforts for elaborateness of costumes, decorations and attendance. Special credit must be given to the work of the Vermilion orchestra. The town is to be congratulated upon having such a fine body of musicians. The committee in charge desire through the columns of the Standard to express their appreciation of the assistance rendered them in the making of this function the great success it was by the members of the ladies reception committee.

CHAPTER II
Convincing a Cook

I'm as wild as any comet when I first swing out o' my regular orbit, an' I rode on an' on, sometimes puttin' up for the night at a ranch house an' sometimes campin' out in the open, where I'd lay till dawn gazin' up at the stars an' wonderin' how things were goin', back at the Diamond Dot. I mooned on until at last I wound up on the Pan Handle without a red copper, an' my pony sore footed an' lookin' like what a crow gets when the coyotes invite him out to dinner.

I drew rein one night along side a mean lookin' camp fire. I had noticed the herd when I came along in, an' they was dandies, big solid five year olds, hog fat, but they wasn't content ad—kept fidgetin' around. When I struck the fire, a fair-haired young feller was readin' a book, two Greasers an' a half-blood Injun was playin' poker with an old bunch o' [illegible] that wasn't a ridin' man at all while the cook had turned in without washin' the dishes.

"If anybody's at home," sez I, "I'd like to ask permission to set down an' rest."

"Why, certainly, make yourself at home," sez the fair hair. The balance of the bunch only give me the side eye.

"Would you need any more help?" I asked, most respectful.

"No thank you," sez the young feller, "I think we'll make it all right."

"You have a nice bunch here," sez I, "an' I thought perhaps you might want to get 'em to market in good shape. I am referrin' to the cows"—I continued, kind o' takin' the cover off my voice.

"We expect to get them to market in good shape," sez the fair hair, resumin' his dignity. I rolled a cigarette.

"What makes you think we won't get them to market in good shape?" sez he.

"'Cause your cook's got a sour temper, an' the' ain't no one bossin' the job—'at knows how," sez I, mild an' [illegible] lookin' into the fire, an' saw a pained look on the fair hair's face, while the auto-up bunch was grinning wickedly an' waitin' for my finish. Me lookin' younger an' easier at that time than I really was, proved a big thing in my favor. Well, as soon as the mongrel cook had cussed himself clean an' dry, he yells at me, "Who in the hell are you an' what in the hell do you want?"

"I'm the new foreman," sez I in a school girl voice, "an' I want my supper."

He wasn't prepared for it an' dropped his gun to his side while he began to narrate false an' profane eulogies about my breedin' an' past history. He took a few steps toward me so as I wouldn't lose none of his remarks, an' all of a sudden I swung half around an' kicked him in the jaw with my heel, which was a trick I had learned from a French sailor. It took me forty-five minutes to come to, after I received my first an' only lesson, an' I wanted a full year huntin' for that sailor. Any time durin' the first six months I'd have ventilated him completely, but after that I wanted to thank him, 'cause I had learned an' tried the trick by that time, an' it was worth all it cost.

But this cook was no wax figger, an' he only lay quiet a moment before he began to roll around an' groan. I picked up a neck yoke what was handy an' I went for him. I hit him in the butt o' the ear an' on the back o' the neck an' in the centre o' the forehead—I tried him out in all the most stylish places, until finally he dozed off.

"Bring me a lantern—you man with the whiskers," I called out.

He riz to his feet like a machine. "It ain't filled," he said.

"I don't know much about filin' lanterns," I remarked to him kindly, "but I have had some experience in fillin' other things. Bring me the lantern filled an' lighted, and don't keep me waitin'."

I then noticed two fellers a-hem back. "Do you belong to this outfit?" sez I.

gave his chuckle. A feller couldn't help but echo when that fair hair chuckled. "I heard the cook say he knew you an' he called you Kid—I suppose you are the Pan Handle Kid!" he asked.

"I didn't know the' was a Pan Handle Kid, but they're pretty common an' they're all a good bit alike. Forced to begin killin' before they're able to put the right value on life, an' once they begin, no way to stop. Now I'll tell you confidential that I'm not the Pan Handle, nor any other kind of a kid, although I once was the makin's of one. Still, it will make matters easier if this bunch thinks I am, so we'll just let it go at that. My name is Happy Hawkins; what might I call you?"

"Happy?"—he opens his eyes like saucers an' then he laughs like a boy. "Well, I watched you goin' after the cook with the neck yoke an' I never in the world would have called you Happy."

"Well, you'll see the trail in this bunch o' beef cattle smooth an' contented an' every man jack rollin' fat an' dimpled in the knuckles. They've had their last fuss. I'll feed 'em an' I'll work 'em from now on, an' you won't know 'em when we hit the market. Where you headin' for, K. C.?"

"Yes. My name is Mister Jamison—James Jamison."

"This is a warm climate," sez I.

"Yes," he sez sort o' surprised, "it is."

"It has an awful wiltin' effect on names," I continued.

He chuckled again. "I'm mighty glad you arrived, Happy," sez he. "What do you suppose'll happen to my name?"

"Well," I sez, "if you get yours before they learn to like you, it'll probably be James Jamison on the head board, but if you make good, it'll be Jim Jimison on Sundays an' just plain Jim for every day."

"That suits me," sez he. "I'm scared for the whole race an' I'm glad to get off as soon as possible."

Supper's ready, [illegible] when I gave [illegible]

tho' higher than look, 'cause it was a perfect demon of a night.

The pony dropped from a lope to a walk an' then he put his nose to the ground an' fairly shuffled along. I was wearin' sheepskin with the wool on, but after a time the needles began to creep in an' I grew numb as a stone, while my flesh seemed shook loose from my bones, an' it hurt me to breathe. Oh, Lord, but it was cold! If I hadn't 'a' been for the kid I'd have gotten down an' walked alongside the pony, but, as it was, he was out o' the wind an' sleepin' peaceful, so I just sat an' took it.

At last I sort o' drowsed off myself. I didn't sleep, but I wasn't awake. I seemed to be back at the Diamond Dot an' playin' in a little sheltered dell with Barbie. She had made up a game called Fairy Princess; sometimes she was the Fairy Princess an' sometimes I was, an' it was a mighty amusin' sort of a game, but different from most o' the games I was familiar with.

Well, that night it was the Texas blizzard I was playin' that game with little Barbie, an' [illegible]

[illegible]

Dress for the King

While so much has been said in recent times, and perhaps not unnaturally, about the panoply and magnificence of kingship—and more will be said as the time for the Coronation draws near—it has happened here and there that there have been some curious inquiries as to the taste and habits of King George in the matter of his clothes and uniforms, the extent of his wardrobe, how it is managed, and so forth. This curiosity, after all, is not so idle as some may fancy, for with King Edward it was certainly the case that in many important respects he set the fashion for men in England and not in England [illegible] when he was abroad at the German spas and also when he went to Paris the people of those places [illegible] with great closeness what he wore [illegible] the best of their and the [illegible] The fact is that King Edward [illegible] rank in several of our own. King Edward had no fewer than thirty-three such appointments, and if his successor has not as yet so many, it must be remembered that time and circumstances have so far hardly been adequate to allow of his completely filling the position occupied by the late monarch in these matters. In the [illegible] the chief foreign naval and military appointments, it may be mentioned [illegible] four uniforms—that is to say, full dress, undress, mess kit, and overcoat—are usually necessary. Then there are the full robes of the Knights of the Garter, His Majesty belongs to various home and foreign orders of chivalry, for each of St. Patrick, and of the Thistle, and of which there are special collars and decorations.

Taking care of a kingly wardrobe of such proportions is naturally a very big business, and the two valets who have charge of it, acting under the [illegible] of the superintendent of the wardrobe, have enough to do in brushing [illegible] and arranging the different [illegible] from time to time, and seeing that they are always properly pressed and ready for wear. It has been said of King George as it was of the late King that he never wears the same suit twice, and just as this was untrue of King Edward it is considerably [illegible] in the present case. His Majesty [illegible] a distinct partiality for certain [illegible] that have lost most of their newness and sometimes gives them up [illegible] on an average, perhaps from twenty to thirty suits of one kind and another are discarded in each year and their places taken by new ones. Some of the old suits are given away [illegible] where they will be much [illegible] for the service they will [illegible] for the more obvious reasons [illegible] would not be advertised. Such as are not given away in this manner are generally regarded as the perquisites of the valets.

Annual Meeting Curling Club

The annual meeting of the Vermilion Curling Club was held in the waiting room of the rink Monday night and was characterized by more than the usual amount of enthusiasm accompanying such gatherings, the attendance was also large as as twenty-five being present. The chair was occupied by V-Pres. R. G. Dunsmore. After the reading of the minutes of former meetings of the club, the election of officers for the season 1911-2 was proceeded with, resulting as follows:

Hon. President, - W. Telford.
Patron, - Hon. A. L. Sifton.
President, - F. C. Long.
V Pres. - S. E. P. Cooper.
Executive Committee- C. E. Slater, P. Long, J. Walker, Jas. McKone and J. Law.

Messrs. Slater and Law were appointed representatives to the Royal Caledonian Club, Winnipeg.

It was decided to again affiliate with the R. C. C., Winnipeg, and secy was instructed to forward the necessary fees covering same.

Dr. Ryan, A. E. Jones and J. McKone were appointed the ice committee.

Twenty two joined the club for coming season and it is expected that this year's membership will exceed 45, necessitating some 12 rinks.

The membership fee is $1.00 and ice fee $10.00, the latter being payable to the Rink Co.

The main business to appear in the schedule of items was that all those desirous of skipping a rink, hand in their names together with those of their rink, to the Secy of the club by Saturday night, when the draw for the Pres. and V-Pres. competitions will be made.

Several rinks have signified their intention of taking in the various Bonspiels at outside points this season, and already a couple of box cars have been chartered to bring back the Trophies.

Council Has Busy Session

Delegation to Go to Winnipeg A Warning re Ashes Town to Take a Census - Many By-Laws Revised

The regular monthly meeting of the town council was held Tuesday night in the council chamber in the town hall, Township Mayor Dunsmore in the chair and Councillors Rosebrough, McKone-Brimacombe, Mackenzie and Cooper present. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

C. E. Morris of the Alberta Townsite Co., who is largely interested in Vermilion and is firmly convinced of the great future which lies before the town and district, waited on the Council and asked that that body take active steps to direct the C. P. R. Wilkie-Saskatchewan River branch of that line for which a charter is being applied for, through Vermilion. It is noted that at present the plans of the company as shown by their application and private information, were to an uncertain stage as the route to be taken through this portion of same, special effort might determine the route in favour of Vermilion. After a general discussion a motion was put and carried appointing the Mayor, Comm. Brimacombe and the Secy-Treas. Delegation to go to Winnipeg and interview both the C. P. R. and C. N. R. authorities in respect to the proposed lines.

H. P. Long was appointed to take a complete census of the town with the object of having the same accepted by the census bureau of the Dominion, his remuneration

THE PHANTOM PIRATE

A Harmless Mistake

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Abel Watkins sat out at the end of the long pier fishing for mackerel.

The noon whistle from the mill cut the stillness, and Abel pulled in his lines and bent to grasp his basket of fish. He'listened down the pier toward home. Then it was that a voice hailed him from the anchorage.

"Hi, there, Abel!"

Abel stopped and leaned over the rail. Standing in a small, clean cut, cabined motor launch was a short, stout man, red of face and blue of eye and very bleached as to hair and mustache. His visored cap had a nautical tilt, and a single brass button dangled from his blue pilot coat.

"Come down here after dinner if you haven't got anything else to do. I've got a job for you."

"What is it?" asked Abel suspiciously. He had been a victim of Myron Fladd's enthusiasm in the past, and he resolved to proceed with caution.

"Been reading the papers lately?" demanded Mr. Fladd impatiently.

"Of course."

"Read about that feller that's been playing pirate down in the East river? I thought maybe you had. Well, there's a reward out for his capture—$300. Want half of it?"

"I don't mind if I do. You going down after him?"

"I don't have to; He's hanging around the harbor here," grinned Mr. Fladd, with sudden amiability.

"Here?" gasped Abel wildly. "Why, have you seen him?"

The other nodded.

"I was coming in last night just at dark. You know there was a fog, and I could scarcely see a boat's length ahead, when all of a sudden I heard a launch coming up astern. Her engine was muffled, and if it hadn't been for the faint 'spit spit' of her exhaust she might have passed me without my catching a glimpse of her. She whizzed by, and I had a look at the chap that was running her." Myron Fladd paused to stuff a pinch of tobacco into his [illegible].

Abel drew a deep breath. "What was he like?" he asked in an awed voice.

Myron scratched a match on a barnacled timber. "He had his back to me, so I couldn't see nothing," he replied calmly.

"I want t' know," fumed Abel impatiently. "If you didn't see him how'd you know who he was? Mebbe it was me in my launch."

"Was it you?" asked Mr. Fladd inquisitively.

"I wasn't out yesterday," admitted Abel sheepishly.

"I know it was him, the phantom pirate, because the description fits the launch that passed me, and the way he come in was sneaky—there wasn't a sound, and he didn't even look around. He made right for the creek that runs in among the cedars, because I followed him till he disappeared there. Today I strolled around there on top of the bluff, and I could see him down there in the creek." Mr Fladd paused dramatically.

"Well, what you going to do about it?" demanded Abel.

"I'm going to keep watch of the creek all the afternoon and evening, and when she comes out I'll capture her. I'll need you. When can you come down? Of course you've had your dinner."

The word "dinner" galvanized Abel into sudden recollection of the meal that was awaiting him and of the accumulated wrath of Deborah when he appeared at last. "Gosh, I haven't had my dinner—I forgot it," he said in an uneasy tone. Just then the 1 o'clock whistle shrilled over the water, and he picked up his basket of fish and hurried away.

"Come right back again," yelled Myron Fladd.

"All right," replied Abel, although he knew he had promised Deborah to take her rag bale over to the carpet weaver that afternoon.

Deborah Watkins was "on her ear."

"Went fast asleep on the pier, I suppose," she said sharply.

"I wasn't asleep," protested Abel hotly. "I've caught ninety three young mackerel for you to pickle, and—I've got a chance to make a hundred and fifty dollars!" he ended triumphantly.

"You've got a chance to go without your dinner!" snapped Deborah as she tramped into the cell room and slammed the door.

For one instant Abel paused, then without a word he turned and left the house, making his way down to the pier, where Myron Fladd's launch still bobbed against the piles. Myron hailed him gladly.

"Good for you, Abel. You made a short job of it. Get aboard now, and we'll run down the east shore and harbor in the lee of that old wreck. If we see that pirate coming out of the creek we can run out and capture him easy as pie."

Abel let himself down the gangway to the float where the launch was tied and joined Mr. Fladd in the tiny cabin. He looked hungrily around.

"I haven't had any dinner," he announced wearily. "Deborah was so all fired mad because I was late she cut out the rations. What you got aboard?"

Without a word Mr. Fladd set forth a pot of cold coffee, a can of pilot bread, some rancid butter, a cold boiled egg and half a mince pie, and in silence Abel Watkins stowed away the victuals. By the time this ceremony was concluded it was after 2 o'clock.

The wind had changed to the southeast, and the sky was overcast as they shot out from under the shadow of the long pier and headed across the bay. It was three miles to Cedar creek, where the phantom pirate was supposed to be in hiding. They made the wreck near the creek's mouth and made fast to her rotting timbers. She loomed big and black above the natty little launch and afforded a measure of protection from observation. Abel and Myron Fladd lounged in the cabin and took turns watching through the tiny portholes for some sign of life near the mouth of the creek.

There was nothing save an occasional kingfisher to disturb the solitude. Hour after hour passed in tedious waiting.

"Maybe he went while you were across the bay," suggested Abel Watkins.

"There wasn't five minutes I didn't have my glasses trained on that creek," said Myron sharply. "Confound him! Why can't he come out?"

"Let's go after him," suggested Abel. "We might as well catch him in there as to chase him all around Little River bay."

Myron Fladd agreed, and just as the day was fading they putted into Cedar creek and made for its upper reaches. There drawn on a little pebbly beach and half hidden in the tall salt grass, was a narrow, dark gray motorboat. Lounging on the deck was a long limbed young man, who shot to his feet as they approached.

"Well, what is it?" he asked sharply as Fladd's launch grounded in the soft mud.

Myron Fladd stepped ashore and crashed through the grass to the side of the gray launch. He drew a short barreled shotgun from underneath his pilot coat, and, throwing back the lapel of the garment, he flashed a brief glimpse of [illegible] fireman's badge and cried authoritatively:

"Hold up your hands, in the name of the law!"

The stranger threw up his hands. With one he caught the gun barrel and twisted the weapon out of Myron's hands; with the other he lifted that stout gentleman to the deck of the craft by way of a strong grip inside the collar of his coat. With lightning-like rapidity he snatched up a rope and tied the ambitious pirate hunter with a dozen hard knots.

Then the stranger leveled the shotgun at the vanishing form of Abel Watkins and [illegible] with a long and crooked forefinger. "Come here!" he ordered [illegible].

Abel went and was trussed quite as neatly as his friend. Together they watched the strange young man dive into the cabin of [illegible] launch, come forth with a suit case and sling himself into a warm over coat.

"I'll borrow your boat for awhile, and I'll leave mine for security. I had a breakdown, confound it! I'll send somebody after you. [illegible] I can't take you along, but I've got an important engagement with a [illegible]." He waved a mocking farewell at his [illegible], pushed Fladd's boat out of the mud, jumped nimbly aboard after his suit case and was soon chugging quietly from sight in the gathering mist.

When all was still again Myron Fladd turned uneasily to his companion.

"Abel, did you recognize that fellow? Seems like I've seen him before."

"I don't know. Looks like a chap that was boarding over to the hotel last summer. I took him out fishing once, and he gave me $10. I heard he had lots of money. I don't believe it's the same. What would he be doing around here this way?"

"He's the pirate all right," uttered Fladd gloomily. "But he looks confoundedly like that chap that used to come and see my daughter Mabel last summer. I told her I wouldn't hear of no city chaps for sons-in-law, and so I give him to understand. He was staying to the hotel too. His name was Turner."

"What's he got to do with that phantom pirate and $300 reward?" demanded Abel [illegible], working at his bonds.

There was the sound of oars and voices of men, and presently a light blurred through the fog, and a boat came [illegible] the creek. Ten minutes afterward Abel Watkins and Myron Fladd were free men and several of their neighbors were breaking the news to Mr. Fladd that his daughter Mabel had eloped [illegible] with a young man [illegible] Turner and that Mrs. Fladd had said she was glad [illegible] Mabel [illegible]

[illegible] Abel and Myron [illegible]

[illegible]

It was a silent [illegible] home [illegible] the [illegible] flat bottom boat. Myron Fladd was planning all sorts of revenge upon his [illegible] son-in-law for his [illegible] while Abel [illegible] solation in his disappointment and fatigue by recollecting that a frightened Deborah would gladly prepare a bountiful meal when he returned to her.

At last one of the men spoke. "I see by the paper that they caught the phantom pirate away down to Harrogate light, Myron. I wouldn't mind having that three hundred reward, would you?"

But Myron only grunted [illegible] in reply.

COAST DEFENSE.

Concrete Forts and Big Guns That Protect Our Sea Line.

The modern concrete fort is a battery whose guns are protected in front and flank with enormous monoliths of concrete, covered, in the sides exposed to the fire, with sand enough to deflect projectiles before they reach the concrete, says the Engineering Magazine. Deep down in the interior of these huge masses of stone are placed the magazines and operating rooms required for the service of the batteries. They are simply caves in stone, artificial, to be sure, but as permanent as the everlasting hills. It is weird and uncanny to reflect that in one of these caves, scintillating with the highest resources of science, men stand over a drawing board on a table and practically see and plot on a chart every movement and position of the ships of a hostile fleet and flash forth to the gunners in the open such instructions for pointing their guns as enable them to make consecutive bullseyes on a target 6,000 yards away or from groups of great twelve inch rifled mortars to make 47 per cent of hits with flocks of projectiles on the deck of a moving target anywhere within range.

It is vastly important that such rooms be made as comfortable as possible for the strained human intellects working out their country's defense within them. But to make them comfortable is a difficult problem. In the United States the first modern batteries were completed during an exigency caused by the war with Spain. But since their completion during the warm and humid months of summer and early fall their galleries, magazines and service rooms reek with moisture. Water stands in great beads upon the walls and ceilings, from which it drips down to form great pools upon the floors, and they are not safe places for either human beings, ammunition or material of war. To remedy the evil many expedients have been tried and much valuable experience gained. But the problem is beset with difficulty.

FALLS ONLY TO RISE.

An Experiment Which Shows a Sort of Perpetual Motion Effect.

A novel experiment in the demonstration of perpetual motion is to be performed simply. A glass beaker about six inches high and four inches in diameter is filled with water to the height of about four and a half inches, and two and one-half to three ounces of commercial aniline are added, which will sink to the bottom of the vessel.

The temperature of the beaker and its contents is now raised to 170 or 175 degrees [illegible] by means of a burner, when it will be observed that the aniline will rise to the surface of the water, [illegible] in a mass of [illegible]. Almost immediately [illegible] and begins to alter its shape, and [illegible] a large drop [illegible] in diameter [illegible] from the mass and falls through the water.

SCALES OF THE EEL.

They Are Very Minute and Resemble Herringbone Brickwork.

In the ordinary acceptation of the term the eel is a scaleless fish. But it is due to the fact that its scales are very minute and imbedded in the skin. They form, as pointed out by a correspondent, very interesting and beautiful objects for the microscope. In size the scales of the eel vary from one-twentieth of an inch upward, according to the age of the fish. They are formed of two layers of a clear, horny substance, the upper of which is studded with crystals of calcium carbonate. These are so transparent as to look like empty cells. The scales vary in shape from a blunt to an elongated oval and are sometimes almost kidney shaped.

This is how the scales of the eel tell its age. On each may be observed at intervals several more or less clearly marked lines parallel to the margin. These mark lines of growth, one for each year of the life of the fish. Three years, however, must be allowed for the innermost ring, as the eel has no scales until the third year. The scales do not overlap to any extent and are arranged in series of small groups at right angles to each other, so as to resemble what is known as herringbone brickwork. Conger eels, however, are said to have no scales.—London Field.

BALKED THE BURGLAR.

It May or May Not Have Been a Low Down Game, but It Won.

The man with [illegible] collar turned up and [illegible] pulled down over his eyes who was [illegible] along in the shadow of the building suddenly beckoned to the man on the other side of the street. "Here's an easy one, Pete," he [illegible] hoarsely.

"Where's an easy one?" snarled Pete.

"This here house. It's like taking guns from a stenographer that's [illegible] her hair. Some chump has gone away an' left his latch key in the door."

Pete took a swift look at the house and began to back up. "You can go to it," he said. "I don't want to butt [illegible]."

"Are you nutty?"

"Naw, I ain't nutty. But de feller wot lives here is a low down sneak wot's no fren' o' nobody, an' I don't want nothin' to do with him. No, I don't know him, but I'm next to his game. He sticks that key in there to catch suckers like you. Dere's a wire on dat key an' a million volt battery attached to dat wire. I wouldn't touch it if you'd gimme de First National bank. But go ahead—I'll be across de street watchin' wot happens."

Nothing happened.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ancient Inkstands.

An inkstand that was probably in use 3,000 years ago is exhibited in a Berlin museum. It is of Egyptian make and is supposed to belong to the eighteenth or nineteenth dynasty, or somewhere about 1500 B. C., although its age can be judged only approximately. It is made of wood and has two compartments, an upper one provided with two holes, one for black and one for red ink, and a lower one for holding reed pens. The black and red ink are [illegible], for some still remains in a dry condition, within the receptacles. Another ancient inkstand is supposed to have been intended for the use of a [illegible]. It would certainly [illegible] enough for a school [illegible], for it has no fewer than four ink holes. Both inkstands were found at Thebes.—London Globe.

Eased His Conscience.

Dean [illegible] at Westminster used to tell a curious story of a brown paper parcel which he received one day [illegible]. After many wrappings had been [illegible] he found a small block [illegible] of oak about an inch and a half long. The writer of the unsigned note accompanying the parcel [illegible] he was a boy many years [illegible] chipped the splinter [illegible] as he grew [illegible] and he asked the dean [illegible] to restore the splinter to its place.—Pall Mall Gazette.

PERFECT STEEL BALLS.

They Have Never Yet Been Made, Even in the Laboratory.

One of the needs of the day is a perfectly spherical steel ball, and yet it has never been made even in the laboratory, much less in the shop for commercial uses. When we consider the importance of ball bearings for automobiles, motor [illegible] and other machinery the imperfections in steel balls must appeal to all as of the greatest moment. Of course we make vastly good steel balls, which could not have been manufactured a few years ago. So far as the eye can discern they are perfectly spherical, and ordinary measuring instruments will not be able to detect any difference in them, but nevertheless they are not perfectly spherical.

A steel ball for automobile bearings must be perfect within [illegible], and they are made even more perfect than this, but mathematical perfection in this respect seems to be [illegible].

Steel balls [illegible] made more perfect in shape than ever before, but they are harder and tougher. As there is a tendency to fake, only special steels can be used in their manufacture, and these tough hard steels are all the more difficult to work with to secure perfect roundness. The chrome steel [illegible] most balls for bearings are made is one of the most difficult of steels to cut or shape, and the work of [illegible] it has developed special tools and much use made of even harder materials.

While we have not yet made the perfectly spherical steel ball and perhaps only never succeed, the point of perfection reached is little short of wonderful. The approximately perfect steel ball is a matter of vital importance wherever [illegible] machinery are made and used. The application of the ball bearing system is extended to new lines of industrial use each year, and [illegible] of all kinds of apparatus are taking advantage of the perfection reached by the manufacturers of these little spheres of tough steel.—Harper's Weekly.

At the Presbyterian manse on the 21st inst. by the Rev. Wm. Simons, Alexander G. Galloway of Vermilion to Margaret Lambert Cairns, late of Edinburgh, Scotland.

At the residence of Hugh McLean, First St. South, on Saturday evening November 18th, by the Rev. R. J. Hodgins, B. A., Lance Neddry McLean to Emily Elizabeth Johnston, both of Vermilion.

NOTICE—The next meeting of the Alberta Union Club will be held at Mrs. Tattersall's Wednesday, Dec. 13th at 2 p.m. All members try and be present and bring a new member with you, as we want to make some arrangements for a Christmas tree.—Bertha Brown, Sec-T

Took The Royal Arch

A Royal Arch Chapter of Masonry was opened at Battleford on the 19th. inst., Jas. McCauley of Moose Jaw, and Russel Hartney of Saskatoon, were the organizing officers. At this meeting three members of the Vermilion Masonic Lodge took the Royal Arch Degree. They were Dr. G. H. W. Ryan, Jas. McKone and Geo. W. Wright.

Within two years, the number of the kinds of wood used for laths has been doubled. This increase is illustrative of the extent to which lath production is becoming an adjunct to lar or wood industries. Small quantities of lumber of odd sizes, slabs and what would otherwise be mill waste are conserved and used to advantage in this way. The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior has compiled statistics for 1910 showing that twelve species of wood were used in the production of the eight hundred and fifty-two million pieces of lath produced in 1910, worth one million, nine hundred and forty-three thousand dollars. The first six species in importance were spruce, white pine, cedar, douglas fir, hemlock and tamarac which also are the woods used for some time in the manufacture of laths. The remaining six: jack-pine, Red-pine, yellow-pine, poplar, basswood and larch are the new species increasing in importance. Spruce and white pine laths, the two most important species, show a decrease in 1910 from the year previous, but together form nearly seventy percent of the annual output. Some million and a half more pieces of cedar were cut in 1910 than in 1909, and the amount for this species of seventy million pieces made up one-twelfth of the total. Prices ranged from $1.25 for yellow pine to $3.18 per thousand for poplar.

Union S. D. Notes

Jerry Atkinson and his mother, Mrs. George Atkinson, are visiting Mr. Charlie Atkinson at Red Hill, Sask.—Mr. De Delly was very lucky with his well, striking a big flow of water at 12 ft. A very pleasant little party was held at Mr. Fountain's last Friday evening, consisting of games and dancing. Mr & Mrs. Featherall were host and hostess.—E.B. McClusky has returned to Edmonton for the winter. Ira Brown is in charge of his ranch. Everet Hadley has put another story on his house. Joe Burk is having a well drilled also is putting an addition to his house. Geo. Hadley left for the East last Friday. To our friend that replied to wedding bells' last week we are glad he thinks he has the only girl in U. S.D., but C.S.D. bachelors have found one or two others, well was no hit for you but are glad to know we are welcome to a piece of cake.

Vermilion Seed Fair

Owing to a change in the management of the Seed Fairs from the Dominion to the provincial government, our seed fair this year will be somewhat later than it has been in previous years. The Agricultural Society are however in communication with the Seed Branch department at Edmonton and hope to have the date of the fair fixed in a few days. Secy. Taylor will be pleased to send prize lists to anyone wishing to exhibit if they will drop him a card.

for the same to be $25.00. As the census taken two years ago gave the town a population of 844, and as the growth in the last two years has eclipsed that of any similar period in the history of the town as is both known and recognised by everyone, it is deemed inexpedient that the meagre official return of 625 heads should not go unchallenged. Vermilion is more than a quarter as large again than it was two years ago, yet the census returns would show a decreased population of no less than 219 an impossibility under the conditions. The town wants its own and only its own and the Standard will make the assertion that Vermilion has a population of at least 1000.

The request, received by letter, from W. F. H. Thompson for a reduction of 50 per in his taxes, was not granted.

A motion was passed that Constable Oakley be instructed to enforce the Fire Limits by-law, and that the ratepayers be notified through the Standard.

Fully two hours of the time of the Council was spent in passing amended and new By-Laws, in which time nearly half of the revision work was accomplished, a special session will be called to finish them up.

Engineer Bowring reported the work of outside wiring of the pole line as completed, and other work in connection with the municipal electric light plant as progressing favourably. It is expected that about six weeks will pass yet before the light will be turned on.

ST. VITUS DANCE

CURED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

Cures, or as it is more generally known, St. Vitus' Dance, is a disease that usually attacks the young child between the ages of five and fifteen years. Mothers with girls approaching this critical period of their lives should watch carefully for the first symptoms of twitching of the face and hands. As the disease progresses the twitching takes the form of spasmodic jerking of the arms and legs. Nervousness is also developed here. The child may first lose control of the muscles of the left leg or arm, and then the other is affected. The child's condition could not be described more graphically than as "all nerves." Any treatment that only partially relieves the trouble is dangerous, as the disease is sure to return. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure St. Vitus' Dance, and cure it promptly and permanently. Mrs. Thomas Hall, of Fourteen Mile Creek, Ont., says: "My daughter Ethel was afflicted with St. Vitus' Dance, and for a time was unable to walk. She was very nervous, and could scarcely go out of the house, having spells of twitching. As the disease progressed the twitching became more violent, and she developed bad habits. First her left arm was affected, then the left leg, and finally the right arm and leg. She could not hold anything

Harry Bowtell, general merchant of Frog Lake, spent a few days in Vermilion this week. Mr. Bowtell brought down a good allotment of fur in spite of the youngness of the season. Among the lot were 1275 rat pelts, 80 ermine, 4 bear and a number of smaller skins. Rabbits being thick this year the lynx are plentiful and in the next consignment Mr. Bowtell expects to have a large number. The Govt. Survey party passed through Frog Lake with 2? pack horses to headquarters at Onion Lake. The party worked as far as Fort McMurray surveying out river lots as squatters are numerous all through that country, and they reported all kinds of good things of the country which is exceptionally rich in mineral and natural resources.

Ratepayers Meeting

Was Well Attended - Satisfaction Expressed with Work of Council

The annual ratepayers meeting of the town of Vermilion was held in the council chamber of the town hall Monday night, all the members of the Council were present and some sixty of the largest and most representative ratepayers of the town, which was an evidence of the interest taken by the citizens in the administration of their business affairs from a town standpoint.

On motion of H. N. Stephens-Mackenzie, Dr. G.H.W. Ryan was voted to the chair, and immediately called for a report of the work done during the year from his worship Mayor [illegible]. The review of the year's work by the Mayor showed both a lengthy and good list of [illegible] having been served upon the council, in fact the year had been a busy one for the members of the board and the work undertaken of vast importance to the ratepayers. In the absence of the Secy-Treas. at Edmonton, the Mayor [illegible] the financial report for the [illegible] months of the year to Sept. 30th.

Very little criticism was offered and the meeting passed off harmoniously, closing with a hearty vote of thanks to the Mayor and council for their services to the town.

TUSSLED WITH A TUNA

MONTREAL MAN HAS CAPTURED A FABULOUS FISH.

J. K. L. Ross, Son of the Dominion Coal Magnate Took In With Rod and Line Last Summer the Largest Fish Ever Caught in Canadian Waters—He Did the Trick From a Rowboat at That.

There have been tall fish stories before now. This one, which is entirely true, concerns probably the tallest fish ever caught by hook and line in any sea of the known world.

The capture was pulled off last August, down in St. Ann's Bay. And it was a tuna eight feet long, weight 800 pounds, that for four and a half hours was chased by Mr. J. K. L. Ross, of Montreal, aided by "Captain Bill" of his sailing yacht, and for a good part of the time dragged the rowboat and the fishermen with Mr. Ross at the end of the line, and the boat heading wherever the tuna had a mind to go. This sounds like miniature whale fishing. But the story is absolutely true; and it has taken years to bring it about.

"So Jack's landed his tuna at last!" said a friend of the sportsman when he heard of it. "Well, well! By Jove! He's been after that son of a gun for years; at it last summer when I was down there. Glad to hear it!"

Never before was a Cape Breton tuna caught with hook and line. This summer Mr. Ross landed a 400-pounder with a harpoon, after nineteen hours of a struggle. But he yearned to do the trick with an ordinary sportsman's outfit; and he did it—from a rowboat.

Many famous fishermen have tried for the Cape Breton tuna. Last summer Col. Conn, of California, and Mr. F. G. Aflalo, an Englishman, both of whom are wearers of the well-known blue button from the Tuna Club of California, tried for this trophy in Cape Breton waters. The Canadian tuna was too much for them. It remained for the first Cape Breton tuna ever caught without a harpoon to be landed by Jack Ross, of Montreal.

Mr. Ross is a son of Mr. James Ross, of the Dominion Coal Co. The Ross summer home is on St. Anne's Bay. The Ross yachts are known in all the eastern waters. The name of Ross is well-known to almost every man, woman and child in the Maritime Provinces. But there never was a financial or industrial coup pulled off by the Ross clan in Eastern Canada quite so sensational as this daring capture of an eight-foot, 800-pound tuna, caught with hook and line from a rowboat by J. K. L. Ross last August. It was the biggest sporting event of the season. The bare recital of the facts sound like a fable. If Mr. Ross could relate his sensations during that four and a half hours when he tussled with the tuna in St. Ann's Bay, it would make one grand chapter in the literature of real Canadian sport.

A Geographical Possibility.

Scientists assert that additional islands are now forming in the China Sea to the southward, extending toward Australia. It is a notable fact that all the continents of this earth extend to a point at the southern extremity with the exception of Australia. Australia tapers southward beneath the surface of the sea. Who can say but that Australia will some day become the southern point of another large continent, with the Philippines and Borneo forming the trunk?

Immigration Increases.

There were 212,884 immigrant settlers arrived in Canada during the first five months of the current fiscal year April 1st to Sept. 1st, of whom 140,881 arrived at ocean ports, and 71,000 were from the United States. These figures show an increase of 38 per cent, as compared with the figures for the corresponding months of last fiscal year.

During August there were 30,115 arrivals, including 17,000 from the States, as against 24,777 for August last year, of whom 10,000 were from the States.

Who Introduced It?

The distinction is claimed for the Duke of Buccleugh, who recently celebrated his eightieth birthday, that he introduced the cigarette into English society. As Lord Dalkeith, the duke was attached to the special mission of Lord Granville to attend the coronation of Alexander II. in 1856. Cigarette smoking was then habitual in St. Petersburg, but had not made its way into London. Lord Dalkeith introduced it.

SPEEDING UP.

When a Torpedo Boat Destroyer Shows Her Paces.

The thought of trouble at sea is always apparent. Certain British Government yards have received imperative orders to speed-up, though glib politicians profess peace and love with much open-heartedness and more politeness.

Behind those grey docks there's a clanging and ringing: sweating smiths and riveters hurrying ceaselessly; great cranes swing in weird sweeps; whilst yonder a gaunt, automatic coaler rattles alongside a long cruiser in a never-ceasing din, blackening the very atmosphere.

From the great workshops behind comes a hurried thud! thud! of mighty hammers, dull red flames spurt up, lighting all crimson; for while men talk of peace, we think of war—red war.

It is the grey of evening; almost from the dockside spreads the vast space of the open sea.

The great gates slowly open. Now a bell clangs warningly; a tug lets forth a shrill hoot. A crowd of mechanics, blue-garbed, are clustered on a long dark destroyer—a dirty, grey monster, as yet unpainted, with but one dwarf mast, but many heavy funnels. High in the bows, low in the stern, she is a vessel of clever lines, but a wicked, vicious shape in the gloaming.

A great throbbing, a dull, heavy hoot from the long, rakish mass, answered by the whipper-snapper call of the tug. Then an expert in naval uniform leaps lightly over her greasy, rusty plates, and joins the group of engineers on her throbbing deck. Slowly she moves, wisps of thin, light, oily vapor trailing behind.

And now comes the first real test. Gradually the throbbing hum grows louder. It is almost deafening, the water churned a creamy white. Down below, in her stifling depths, her keen engineers watch every vital place—her great, whirling shafts, her ingenious hydraulic casings, her steam gauges.

A sharp ring. She slides forward; wharves, landing-stage, everything slip past. Though hardly a strip of white shows under her sharp bows, yet a huge liner, plowing the channel into great white waves, and belching heavy clouds of smoke, is left as if standing.

Her funnels vomit great waves of trembling, light vapor, her long body crouches in the seas. You can almost feel the roar of life within her as she [illegible] you see her reflected as a red yellow glow in the sky, always going on and on.

Will she be wanted? Will she be in time? You do not know, but, as a friendly navy man says, "She can lick anything at running, and when she gets on the job, things will hum."

The Word "Crowd"

Do you know how many words in the English language mean "crowd"?

To a foreigner, anxious to master the language, it was explained that a crowd of ships is termed a fleet, while a fleet of sheep is called a flock. Further a flock of girls is called a bevy, a bevy of wolves is called a pack, a pack of thieves is called a gang, a gang of angels is called a host, and a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a herd, and a herd of children is called a troop, and a troop of partridges is called a covey, and a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde, and a horde of rubbish is called a heap, and a heap of oxen is called a drove, and a drove of blackguards is called a mob, and a mob of whales is called a school, and a school of worshippers is called a congregation, and a congregation of engineers is called a corps, and a corps of robbers is called a band, and a band of bees is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd.

The Highest Mountain.

A short time ago a scientist holiday making in Asia made a private and individual exploration of the mountain region of North Kashmir, India. He returned with a story of finding a mountain, which he made of such great height with the simple means of calculation at his disposal that he deemed it wise to reduce the figures before announcing his discovery. The accuracy of his figures are unexpectedly about to be scientifically tested. British and Russian geographers have decided to unite in taking the ordinance surveys in the Pamirs, and as the mountain mentioned lies in this region and will be subjected to accurate measurements, it will soon be known whether the private explorer has really found the highest mountain in the world.

An Emergency Role.

It was the recent railway strike which was responsible for the following incident. Mr. Justice Grantham, who had broken his journey at Newcastle, had his luggage carried for him by a Newcastle solicitor, capped as a porter. The judge offered "the porter" a tip, and the latter remarked, "This is my first tip to-day and I am glad it is from one of His Majesty's judges. Then he raised his cap, and the judge recognized him. "What are you doing here?" he exclaimed. "I am here to help my lord," was the reply.

Mushrooms Want Much Room

An illustration of the remarkable lifting power of mushrooms has occurred at Bristol, England.

An asphalt pavement in the St. Jude's district recently began to bulge upwards, and soon afterwards the heavy mass split in several places.

The cause of the upheaval was found to be growing mushrooms, of which some two pounds were gathered from a small space beneath the pavement.

I. and nephew of President Schurman of Cornell University. The [illegible] was a quiet one, only the immediate friends and family being present. The bride looked [illegible] She carried a bouquet of white roses, and was supported by her sister, Miss L. M. Thompson, of Prince Rupert, while Mr. Percy McGi[illegible], of Toronto, acted as best man. After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, 808 Mary Street, Victoria West, and partook of a dainty wedding breakfast, the table being profusely decorated with white roses and chrysanthemums. The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome gifts. They left on the afternoon boat for Vancouver, where they intend spending a few days en route to Edmonton, in which city they will take up their residence.

Reflections on Recent Elections

This great north land sent a message, with no uncertain sound, to Washington D. C., on Sept. 21st, last. There are certain people on both sides of the line who are trying to make it appear that the annexation bogey was the cause of the downfall of the Liberal Party here in Canada. During the campaign, for two months previous to the election, a friend (who travelled over most of the province of Ontario) tells me that "the talk up there by Liberals as well as Conservatives, was vote against reciprocity and conserve and protect our good home market." Some of the American papers call us ignorant for defeating the pact over here. This is certainly going some, as though we had not a perfect right to use our own judgement in the matter. All we ask in regard to our trade arrangements with Uncle Sam is to play the game fair, and we are willing to take our chances.

We have been pin-pricked and pinched ever since the abrogation of the treaty by the Americans away back in 1864. In the retaliation talk, McKinley Bills, Dingley Bills, Etc., and the more of that stuff they put up to us, the more independent we became, till at last we have become able to hoe our row against all comers. They have likely come to the conclusion by this time that they are not dealing with the Philippines, Cubans, Mexicans or Panamans.

The balance of trade has been against us for over forty years. Take last year's trade for instance. We purchased from the Americans goods to the value of $225,000,000 it being approximately $28 per head for every man, woman and child in Canada, whilst their 80,000,000 population purchased from us goods to the value of $100,000,000 being $1.25 per head of their population. Had they purchased from us at a rate [illegible] per head of their population we should have sold them goods to the value of $2,240,000,000 instead of $100,000,000. The Americans must [illegible] that in order to do business with Canada or in fact with any nation, they must meet them half way in tariff matters. They cannot expect that Canadians are going to continue to buy at the rate of $28 per head from Uncle Sam and at the same time only sell at the rate of $1.25 per head without putting up a kick.

Mr. Taft says that England is the only foreign customer they have that buys more of their goods than the comparatively small population of Canada and that on side of the [illegible] many, with [illegible] population, buys Canada buys [illegible] than that great nation. He also states that if Canada continues to grow, what may we expect [illegible] if we reduce the tariff [illegible] [illegible] between us and such a [illegible] market as she [illegible] That's the point exactly [illegible] Americans to [illegible] tariff down to our 25 per cent. rate and give Canada a chance to trade on an even basis. Surely after 50 or [illegible] protection [illegible] meet us [illegible]

Many [illegible] of Canada are [illegible] a matter of [illegible] moderate [illegible] If, during the past year, our tariff had been 50 instead of 25 per cent. against our neighbors, they would probably not have sold us one-[illegible] of the $225,000,000 worth that we purchased from them. The Americans should know by this time who their best customers are. If [illegible] British Empire, they would hear something drop.

I do not think that there are 8,000,000 people in any part of the world that have the purchasing power of Canadians and millions of the cash that we send to the Americans for goods, comes from the British Isles for products that we ship over there.

Mr. Taft, no doubt sees the writing on the wall, and the black eye that reciprocity got over here, may, [illegible] be the very best thing that could have happened him and the Republican Party. They will do some tall thinking during the next few months, and the next move they make to cut the ground from under the Democrats will, no doubt, be a much better one for both countries than the [illegible] cabinet ministers and gave the Republican Party a black eye with something to guess about for a while.

All we ask [illegible] fair field and no favor. Lower your tariff against us, dear Uncle, as low as ours is against you, play the game fair. Give us a square deal and we will take our chances with uncle Sam or any other nation.

WONDERFUL FURNACES.

Those Located at Niagara Are the Hottest in the World.

"At Niagara are the hottest furnaces in the world," says a writer. "Here clay is melted in vast quantities to form aluminium, a metal as precious a few years ago as gold. Here lime and carbon, the most infusible of all the elements, are joined by intense heat in the curious new and useful compound, calcium carbide. Here graphite, the cousin of the diamond, is made. Phosphorus is made in large quantities, and carborundum is manufactured. It has been prophesied that it is merely a matter of time before diamonds will be made at Niagara.

"These marvelous new things in science and invention have been made possible by the 'chaining' of Niagara to the wheels of industry. The power of falling water is transformed into electricity. Science has found that the form of energy known as electricity can be changed into the vibrations known as heat. Accordingly thousands of horse power are conveyed as electricity over a copper wire, changed into heat and light between the tips of carbon electrodes and there work wonders.

"It is scarcely twenty years since the first electrical furnaces of practical utility were constructed, but if the furnaces today in operation at Niagara Falls alone were combined into one they would, one scientist speculates, make a glow so bright that it could be seen from the moon. One furnace has been built in which an amount of heat energy equivalent to 700 horse power is produced in an arc cavity not larger than an ordinary water tumbler."

Not Purely Curiosity.

Among the passengers in one of the cars of a train running between Springfield and Boston was a nervous little old man who evinced a keen interest in a sinister looking person who took a seat beside him.

"How do you do?" said the nervous little old man to the sinister looking person. "Now, what might your name be? Do you live in Boston or beyond?"

"What business is it of yours where I live or who I am?" growled the other.

"Strictly speaking, it ain't none of my business," admitted the old gentleman mildly, "but it's just like this: I've got a cousin in this part of the state that I've never seen, and I've always thought I might come upon him some time just by asking folk their name and so on."—[illegible]

[illegible]

Instead of being obsolete and simply an interesting relic the hourglass in various forms is a twentieth century necessity. For such purposes as timing, hardening and tempering heats in twist drill manufacture, where seconds or minutes must be gauged accurately, nothing serves like the hourglass with the right amount of sand. What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medical forest plants. AFTER SUFFERING YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fox Creek, N.B.—"I have always had pains in the loins and a weakness there, and often after my meals my food would distress me and cause soreness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, my digestion is better, and I can walk with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it, as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. William Bourque, Fox Creek, N.B. Canada.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of [illegible] have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

Summary Of Year's Work

As Given by Mayor Dunsmore at Ratepayers' Meeting

To the Ratepayers of Vermilion:

On behalf of your Council I beg to submit a summary of the work performed during the year 1911, and will therefore do so as nearly as possible in order in which the work is done. One of the first acts was to secure the Registration of lot 13 & 14 in block 5 on which the Town Hall building stands, although I must admit the Council of 1910, had already made material progress in accomplishing this result, we also secured a Transfer from Messrs Mackenzie & Mann of lot 21 in block 9 in consideration of the Town grading a road east of block 10, between Second street north and Vermilion Street, this matter however I will touch upon later in my report, in the acquisition of property we have added lots 25 & 26 in block 18 on which the Electric Light Plant stands, this brings me up to the subject of the Electric Light Plant which was one of the most important acts of the Council during the year, we all know what an unsatisfactory service was rendered by the Vermilion Electric Supply Co. during the last year and a half of its existance, as a going concern you also know how the Council of 1910, assisted Mr. Fyle in a financial way, and this assistance was continued for a time by the present Council, finally however we began to realize that it was apparently a hopeless effort, and in an endeavor to arouse Mr. Fyle and his associates to assist themselves we sent a notice to them on the 20th of January stating that unless an improvement of service was inaugurated within [illegible] week franchise would [illegible] owing however to stress of weather we extended the time until the end of [illegible]

An Instructor In Painting

A Tale of Orr's Island

By TOM F. BROWN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1912.

During the summer of 19— Constance Phillips, an art student, chose the coast of Maine for a field in which to paint pictures. There is an island on that coast which has been made prominent among its neighbors by a celebrated authoress, who located one of her stories there. Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Pearl of Orr's Island" has been read by millions of her fellow countrymen, thus familiarizing them with at least the name of the locality.

Miss Phillips, being alone, stopped at a small hotel near the house in which Mrs. Stowe wrote her story. In the morning after breakfast she would take her artist's paraphernalia and start out in search of a scene to transfer to canvas. But she found nothing of the marine order that pleased her more than the view looking eastward from the lower end of the island. Descending an incline, she found herself just above a rocky shore overlooking a strip of Casco bay. There she set up her easel and, embracing in her subject a bit of the rocks and a bit of the ocean, began her work.

Constance painted all the morning, but unfortunately her ability to transfer to canvas what she saw was not of a high order. Like many aspirants for success in art, she felt it, but was unable to express it. What she had placed on the canvas disappointed her. She was looking at her work ruefully when she heard a step behind her and, turning, saw a man descending through the wild grass and weeds. As he passed her he lifted his cap and, casting a glance at her picture, paused, looking from it to its subject.

"You have selected quite an attractive view," he said. "Your discrimination in this respect is proved by your having chosen the best there is here."

"I fear it is all discrimination," said Constance, viewing her work lugubriously.

"You mean that you are not gifted with the artistic touch?"

"I fear I am not."

"A good deal depends upon that which for the want of a better word I shall call the trickery of art. There are all sorts of methods of producing effects which, though in themselves mechanical, tend to successful painting. Judging from this bit of work, I fancy you have something to learn in this respect."

"Lots."

"For instance, this bit of rocky cliff is depicted against that wood across the water. The cliff is of a dark brown, the wood a dark green, two dark substances, the one directly behind the other. You must make one of them of a different shade from what it is. The rock, being in the foreground, is the most important. You have got its color to perfection. The wood, being distant, would bear more blending with its neighboring objects. It will bear lightening, which will darken the rock."

Constance mixed some colors on her palette, gave the wood beyond the rock a dab and was quite pleased with the improvement. The rock stood out boldly, while the wood appeared at its proper distance.

"Are you a teacher of art?" she asked.

"I have taught art, but I do not teach now. I am interested at present in regaining my physical strength, which is somewhat run down."

Constance noticed that he was pale and thin. His eyes, which were large and expressive at any time, seemed more so in his invalid condition. She thanked him for his suggestion and, removing her canvas, folded her easel and her stool, put her palette and paint in her box and was starting away when the stranger said:

"Have you to carry these things far?"

"To the village, about a mile up the island."

"Do you come back to paint this afternoon?"

"I expect to."

"Then it is not necessary that you should lug them both ways. I have a shack on the crest, between here and the road, and you can leave them there."

"That would indeed be a saving of labor."

He took up a part of her belongings while she carried the rest, and they walked together up a little path to one of those summer cottages containing only beds, chairs and cheap tableware which city folk rent either for a few weeks in summer or for "the season." There was a broad porch on three sides of it, and its occupant, setting down the artist's materials on the porch, said:

"They may remain here till you return in the afternoon, and if you don't come again today I will take them inside and keep them for you till you need them."

"You are very kind," Constance replied. "Do you live here all alone?"

"For the present. I go back to the city early in September."

"I will relieve you of my belongings about 2 o'clock this afternoon."

"If it is not necessary that you work all day I would advise you not to do so."

"Why?"

"Well"—he looked up at the sky for a reason and found one—"in the morning we are fresh and can do our best work. Besides, when we have just finished a bit of work we are liable to either undervalue or overvalue it. If you leave what you have done this morning without looking at it till tomorrow you will be able to put a much better estimate upon it than now, just after working upon it."

"And if I leave it here I can't see it, can I?"

"No, you can't. And in the morning when you are fresh you will know just what it requires. You see, the course I advise is beneficial in more ways than one."

Constance left him and, striking a diagonal road through the pines, walked away toward Harpswell village. After dinner instead of going back to her work she took a siesta and later a tour of observation in search of objects to transfer to canvas.

The next morning was clear and crisp. Constance walked to the cottage where she had left her belongings and, approaching, saw her easel set up on the north porch and her picture resting on it. She was far better pleased with what she had done than she had been the day before. Just then the stranger came out, and she said to him:

"You are an admirable teacher. Last evening I was disposed to throw my work into the fire. This morning I am very well satisfied with it."

"Perhaps it is because you see it through rested eyes."

Constance took her picture down to the position she had occupied the day before and began her day's work. She was again disappointed. It seemed to her when noon came that her picture looked much as it had done the day before. She carried it up to the stranger's cottage. He saw her coming and went out to meet her.

"I fear that I have spoiled it," she said to him. "This morning it was fine; now it is worse than it was yesterday."

"Put it away from you again," he said, "till tomorrow morning."

"I will leave it with you till tomorrow morning if you will kindly keep it, but I know that during the day I have injured it rather than improved it. I am heartsick over it." Growing confidential: "I am very poor and have hoped soon to be able to make my living in this way. If the more work I put on a picture the worse it is, what chance is there for me?"

"We must all meet discouragement," he replied, "but when we are in its toils there is a kind fairy called rest that unwinds them, and when we are refreshed we take hold again with renewed vigor."

So Constance left her picture with her new found friend, went to her room and lounged the rest of the day. In the morning she found her picture again set up in an advantageous light, and again her dissatisfaction with it of the day before was changed to comfort.

Day after day Constance worked on her picture, every morning comforted by its appearing to her to be improved from what it was the day before, every noon fearful lest she had lost more than she had gained. The stranger taught her many a "trick," as he called it, by which objects were brought to their relative position and striking effects produced. One thing she knew—taken altogether the picture was really growing into something beautiful. She believed that what she was doing was due entirely to a subtle influence her instructor exerted over her.

During this time the summer was fading into autumn. The water and the sky took on a cold hue, and the cottage residents of Orr's island began to return to their permanent homes. Constance finished her painting and was delighted with it. She was surprised at her talent.

Constance's instructor told her that if she would take her picture to a prominent art dealer in Boston he thought she would get a good price for it. He said he would meet her there on a certain date and introduce her. On the day named she took her work to the store, but her instructor failed to meet her. She showed the dealer the picture, and he studied it carefully.

"Did you paint it?" he asked.

"Certainly. Why do you ask that?"

"Because I would have sworn that was a Frank Elliot."

Taking up a small microscope, he brought it to bear on a lower corner.

"It is an Elliot," he said.

"What do you mean?" exclaimed the astonished Constance.

The dealer handed her the microscope, and she brought it to bear on the picture. There she saw "F. Elliot del."

"Who is Frank Elliot?" she asked.

"Our principal American marine painter just at present."

"Where does he live?"

"Nowhere. He's been trying to regain his health at Orr's island, I believe."

Constance was dumfounded.

"What value do you place upon the picture?" she asked.

The dealer pondered a few moments, then said:

"It is worth about $1,200."

"Goodness gracious!" exclaimed the girl, her breath quite taken away.

At that moment Constance's instructor walked into the shop.

"Hello, Elliot," said the dealer. "Been trying to fool me again, have you? You can't do it. I'd know your work in a dungeon."

The sequel to this story is very brief and very prosaic. Frank Elliot and Constance, his wife, now in summer occupy the cottage at Orr's island, where he painted the picture.

SELECTIONS

GILA MONSTERS.

Their Bite is Sometimes Fatal and Always Dangerous.

In a recent issue of the Scientific American an article appeared written by D. Allen Willey describing the Gila monster. The statement was made in the article that scientists had questioned whether its bite was fatally poisonous, as has been supposed. W. C. Barnes of Las Vegas, N. M., claims to know of two cases, in one of which death resulted. Mr. Barnes writes as follows:

"The first man was in Tombstone, Ariz. The Gila was tied by the leg in a saloon as a curio, and a drunken gambler named Brown was teasing it. He carelessly stuck his first two fingers into its mouth, which instantly closed down on them and could not be released until the reptile's head was cut off and the jaws cut apart. Brown suffered horrible agony for almost two days, and in spite of all efforts he died.

"The second case was in the fall of 1888. Walter Vail started from the Empire ranch, near Benson, Ariz., to ride into town on horseback, some fifteen miles. A short distance from the ranch a monster was sluggishly dragging its way across the road. Thinking to take it in for a friend, he got down and killed it, or at least he thought he killed it. To carry it easily he tied it on his saddle behind him, using his saddle string for the purpose. As he loped along he thought to assure himself it hadn't dropped off by reaching around behind him with his right hand and feeling for the monster.

"It was there and not nearly so dead as he thought. His first finger went into the reptile's mouth clear to the knuckle, and instantly those jaws with the long, sharp, daggerlike teeth closed on Vail's finger. With his left hand he managed to get his knife out and cut the saddle strings and then had to dissect the head and jaws to get his finger from their grip.

"Vail then spurred his horse into Benson and found an engine in the yards. A hasty exchange of telegrams with the division superintendent and Tucson took place, and in a few moments he was on the engine and racing over the road for Tucson, where an eminent surgeon resided at that time. Vail lay at death's door for two months and that finger today is useless and shriveled up from the effect of the bite."

A Denatured Alcohol Test.

A careful test of denatured alcohol was lately made by the driver of an automobile, who drove his machine from New York to Philadelphia on alcohol fuel. He found advantages and disadvantages in the use of it. The auto consumed three times as much alcohol as it would have consumed of gasoline, but a part of the excess was due to carelessness. The speed was ... than gasoline would have given, and the power developed was less. ...

Police Court News

A bunch of some 15 Galicians and their ringleader, a Scotchman named Nicholson, assaulted the cook on a construction train returning from Entwistle, and badly mauled and cut him up, were placed under arrest by Constable McPhail, R. N. W. M. P., Monday night in the railway yards. The men were beating their way in a box car after being paid off at Entwistle, where they had been working all summer on the grade, during the stop here they visited the cook car and demanded bread. On the cook informing the bunch that he had none, Nicholson pushed open the door and a Galician pulled Dervey, the cook out the whole gang proceeding to make mincemeat of him. They were rather a surprised lot when Constable McPhail took them in tow and confined them in the cell at the Barracks. The same night they were tried on a charge of vagrancy and found guilty by Magistrate Barber who imposed a fine of $1.00 apiece and costs or a total of $72.00; this was promptly paid. The next morning they had to answer to the charge of aggravated assault to which a plea of guilty was put in and a fine of $10.00 apiece and costs imposed. The amount of fines and costs was about $320.00.

The men were all well-heeled having cheques ranging from $200.00 up to $250.00 on them. They purchased transportation to Winnipeg Tuesday night. Dervey, the injured man, was also able to proceed to Prince Albert Tuesday night.

J. A. Roseborough MAYOR for 1912

Members of Town Council and of School Board Elected by Acclamation

Nominations for the town council and members of the School Board were held according to law Monday from the hours of 10 to 12 o'clock noon. At closing time the slate was full and consequently all those nominated were declared elected by acclamation.

Owing to Mayor-Elect Roseborough resigning his seat at the council board to stand for the chair, it was necessary to elect four councillors. Two members of the old board offered themselves for re-election, viz., Coun. Cooper & Mackenzie, and they were not opposed; J. A. M. Craig and K. D. McLay, both strong men, will be new members at the council table.

In the person of the new Mayor, the town should have an able representative, and there is no doubt that he will discharge the onerous duties of the office with the same degree of ability as shown by previous occupants of the Chair.

The new members of the School Board are Dr. G. H. W. Ryan, F. C. Long and LeRoy West, all good men and true and it is safe to say without fear of contradiction that Vermilion has one of the best educational boards in the province.

The great Castle Square Entertainers, the best known and most popular male quartette and humorous entertainers before the public, will appear at the Royal George Theatre next Thursday night, Dec. 14. Mr. Stiles has secured this treat for the people of Vermilion and district and in placing them on the boards here he is to be congratulated. It is an entertainment which pleases all classes and is a rare entertainment given by male voices. The variety of the programme is the keynote of the great success which greets the Castle Square Entertainers. This is a guaranteed entertainment and will be the treat of the season.

easily identified any season of the year, and a book has been opened up with plan of the Cemetery and from which titles are issued as graves are alloted.

I now come to the matter of Well Boring the machine which was purchased in 1910, did not turn out to be as satisfactory as the 1910 council or the present council anticipated, we sunk the well to a depth of 470 feet operations were continued all winter a first flow of water was struck at about 100 ft. or a little less, a second flow was struck about 65 ft. further down and still another flow was struck at a depth of about 250 ft. from this down the formation was practically blue clay and without any indication of water, at this point it was considered for reasons already mentioned to discontinue operations which we did very reluctantly we then proceeded to drill a well in the west another in the Pilkie Sub-division and a third well near the rink building these three wells cost on an average of $1.07 a foot for the drilling with casing pump and platform these wells have cost us on an average of about $220.00 each or a saving of about $150.00 on what the same work would have cost if hired done by contract we also leased the drill for a time and on this work made a profit of about $175.00 thus making the total money earned as a profit about $325.00 these figures do not of course refer at all to the well for which the drill was bought and a total cost of that well cannot be accurately determined until the books have been closed for the year, but I am afraid that the cost of repair and purchase of tools for the drill will more than eat up the profits made by the drill since we discontinued drilling the deep well however, the drill was sold by the Council for the original purchase price paid viz $1000.00, but I hope that Vermilion will [illegible] be in a position to take up again the matter of sinking a deep well with a powerful machine capable of doing the work, but for the present and for some time to come the matter will have to [illegible].

The following tenders have been received:

the plant of the Vermilion Electric Supply Co. and of connecting the same with the Municipal plant altering the High and Low tension wiring from the plant [illegible] of readjusting transformers and generally putting the pole line in shape which will cost in the neighborhood of $2000.00, and to this will have to be added the cost of foundations for smoke stack foundations for engine and dynamo cost of flooring the engine room in the power plant, coal bunker extension $1500.00 Brick for Boilers, fire clay, cement [illegible] for supporting stack, wiring plant and sundry interior and exterior equipment, cost $220.00

Engineers fees, travelling expenses etc $800.00

This makes a total of $12 [illegible] leaving a balance of $2000.00

Other work done during the year comprise the building of the Sidewalk on first street North between Alberta and Railway Ave. and extension of Walk from south of West Bros. warehouse and from north of Vermilion Hotel [illegible] and connecting with the sidewalk on second street North already referred to, several of the crossings were also replaced with a more permanent crossing and some culverts were laid and crossings were graded up with cinders. First street North was graded between Railway and Alberta and a road was graded [illegible] second street North and Vermilion [illegible] and considerable filling and grading [illegible] in order to build the [illegible] road will have to be widened [illegible] year, we also graded a [illegible] from Olive Ave. west to the [illegible].

The By Laws of the [illegible] were ordered amended on the 15th February so a number of the old by laws [illegible] to conform with the present Municipal Act of the Province and others had been discovered defective, but I think [illegible] that all the By Laws are now in a [illegible] shape.

In the Town Hall the Secretary's office was moved down stairs and divided into two rooms making it much more convenient both for the secretary and the public, a thirty barrell tank was installed in the basement giving water supply for the heater and for the Chemical Engine, this being filled with rain water it will pay for itself in about a years time by eliminating the costs of supplying water in tanks, besides this the tank takes care of the water which was [illegible] of the Town Hall and thereby weakening them. In connection with the Fire Department we [illegible] with the Chemical [illegible] several lengths of hose and the clothing of Messrs Weaver and Wesley. This accident will have cost the Town in the neighborhood of $250.00.

We altered the Chemical Engine from [illegible] system [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible].

FOR SALE.- 1 Team of 3-yr old grey Geldings, weight about 1800 lbs, well broken everyway and well matched, are being sold to satisfy a mortgage. Terms cash, unless otherwise arranged with Craig & Falkins. To be sold on Saturday, Dec. 16.

The annual meeting of the Vermilion Agricultural Society was held in the Town Hall, today (Wednesday,) Dec. 6th. at 2 p.m.

There are now 134 phones connected with the Vermilion Office. The new rural line through the north into the Coyote Valley district was put in commission last week and is a great boon to the settlers residing 20 miles out. An all night service is about to be inaugurated.

A suspected case of arson at Landonville is being investigated by Con. McPhail. Space will not permit a detailed report of steps taken by the officer up to the present time. The case in point is the burning of 75 tons of hay, the property of Christopher Anderson.

Pleasant Valley

On Thursday Nov. 30th. a jolly crowd gathered at Pleasant Valley School House for the first Box Social of the season. The programme commenced with a pleasing selection of instrumental and vocal music with readings, the artists being Mrs. Bothwell, Miss Bottomley and Messrs. Hockensher, Joe Catts, Smith, Dan Gilchrist. Mrs. Bothwell kindly acted as accompanist. At the close of the musical programme Mr. Bowe auctioned off the boxes which were numerous and varied in color and design. They were all most tastefully decorated and did credit to those who had expended such great care with them. The bidding was fast and not without excitement, one box tied with a pretty piece of blue mousse ribbon seemed to catch on and went up as high as $10.

Before supper it was announced that the result of the sale of boxes totalled $75.75 and would be devoted to the Pleasant Valley Skating and Hockey Club.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Auctioneer and all those who so kindly helped out with the programme. The nights entertainment concluded with a dance.

The Pleasant Valley Skating Club is giving a moonlight Skating Party on Wednesday night Dec. [illegible] on the river near the School house. Refreshments will be served at [illegible] [illegible] and shelter for teams will be provided [illegible]

LOCAL NEWS.

The country still enjoys fine favorable weather, mild and fair.

A short session of the town Council was held Monday night.

A. F. Lavigne returned from Camp... B. C. Monday

Among Vermilion people to visit Edmonton last week were Mayor Duncanson, W. W. Shafer and J. W. G. Morrison.

A sack containing a quantity of laundry has been left at this office. Rightful owner may have same by calling.

E. Oxley is leaving shortly for Moose Jaw where he will take charge of the business of his son during the latter's absence in Europe. Mr. Oxley will be away till spring.

The International Harvester Company of America give notice of sale in this town of certain chattels. Date of sale, Dec. 21 at 2 p.m. J. Langdon, Auctioneer

T. McLean of the north, lost a valuable horse on his way into town the other day. The animal fell breaking its thigh and had to be shot. The loss is a severe one to the owner.

An offer for the $17000.00 worth of debentures has been received by the town from Norman Murray in behalf of a client. The offer was par with a bonus of $150.00. Although a good offer, the Mayor was of opinion that the town could do a little better.

On Saturday next, Dec. 9th at 2 o'clock p.m. Craig & Falkins will sell by public auction the Alberta Hotel property. This is a judicial sale. On the 22nd, the same firm are advertised to conduct another judicial sale of farm lands, notice of which appears in this issue of the Standard.

Magistrate F. H. Barker had one of the heaviest police court dockets last Tuesday since he has been on the bench. He disposed of 17 assault cases, 17 charges of vagrancy and one case for non payment of wages in less than 2 hours. If this continues his worship will almost require to devote all his time to the bench.

The auctioneers Craig & Falkins report two of the most successful sales this fall, one north and one south of Kennedy. At these sales mares sold as high as $260.00 and a 2 yr old grade heifer touched the high water mark of $72.50.

W. J. Fountain, formerly road master of Edmonton Street railway, but at present a resident of the ... District, is taking a 3 months trip to Toronto, his old home. En route he will visit a son at Edmonton and his daughter Ethel, who was married some three months ago, at Calgary. Mr. Fountain has made many friends here and all wish him a safe journey also a Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year.

How to Preserve the Teeth

There are a number of good dentifrices on the market, but the following is a simple and inexpensive home remedy which is very effective:

Powdered orris root, 1 ounce; powdered castile soap, 1 ounce; powdered myrrh, 1 ounce; powdered peppermint, 1 ounce; precipitated chalk, 1 ounce; mix well together. Use a teaspoonful of this powder in a tumbler of water, and rub the teeth with a soft brush. Rinse the mouth with the water, and then rub the teeth and gums with a dry brush.

AN AERIAL WARSHIP

Zeppelin Airship Co. Turning Out Monster for German Army

A great aerial war vessel is being built on the German military aeronautic station at Friedrichshafen, on Lake Constance, according to reports received from neighbors which has overtaken almost the wildest dreams of every descriptive writer. The German War Office is reticent regarding its purpose, but it is understood that an aerial navy which will give Germany the undisputed command of the air and the new cruiser will be but the first of many such vessels. The new craft will be built on the Zeppelin principle, but will be much larger than the Zeppelin airships already constructed. It will be built on the water instead of over it.

The main difference will be the absence of the long, cigar-shaped balloon which is swung amidships on the Zeppelin, and which on the military vessel will be dispensed with. The new vessel, which is of enormous size, is said will be utilized to carry the heaviest guns and ammunition, and will be capable of remaining in the air for a month without coming to earth. The preliminary trials of the new vessel are expected to be taken in the air in the next few weeks.

Uses Only Cuticura Soap for Prize Baby

"I have always used Cuticura Soap for my baby and find it the best baby soap I have ever used. I have used it from the time my baby was born and it has never failed to keep his skin and scalp in perfect condition. I have used it for a bath in the water in which I have boiled Cuticura Ointment, and my baby's skin is as soft as velvet. I have used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for a mouth wash for my baby with perfect success, and I have used it for shaving my husband with it, and find it the best shaving soap I have ever used. I have also used it for a shampoo with good results. I have used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my baby from the time he was born, and I have used no other soap on him. I have won a prize baby with Cuticura Soap, and I will always use it." (Signed) Mrs. A. Allen, Apr. 6, 1910.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each, with 32-p. Skin Book, free. Address: "Cuticura," Dept. T, Boston, U.S.A.

The kidneys are often the first or cause of many kinds of suffering. Their work of filtering the blood is usually performed by the kidneys alone, only by the use of highly seasoned foods and drinks.

As advanced age comes on most people suffer from some form of kidney derangement or the kidneys. With advancing years the kidneys grow weaker, with others Bright's Disease develops and the end comes.

Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills are specially prepared to act directly upon the kidneys, and by their use the kidneys are enabled by their own natural action to perform their work actively.

This medicine is entirely different from ordinary kidney treatments and is admitted by the highest authorities in Medicine to be the most successful treatment ever introduced to the public.

Mr. Richard Preston, Usborne Line, Lansdowne, Ont., writes:—"I have to testify to the wonderful curative properties of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. Seventeen years ago I was taken with a bad kidney trouble, from which I suffered so much that I used to sleep on the floor because I could not lie on the bed. I got medicine, but these pills entirely freed me from the trouble, and I have never since taken medicine for the kidneys. I am now 70 years of age, and am well and hearty and can do a good day's work."

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished and that his whole body is improperly and feebly nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and health-restorer. It makes sick people well, solves to body, entire to mind and soul to independent.

The Discovery, as pure, glycerine extract of American medicinal roots from alcohol and all injurious habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrapper. It has no secrets to conceal. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in the schools of medicine of all the different systems, as possessing the greatest medicinal value for the cure of the diseases for which it is recommended. Any one who will send a postal card to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., can have a booklet of 1008 pages sent to your home free of charge. Send for it today.

The Farmer's Workshop.

Have you ever stopped in your work to consider the importance of a good light on the farm? It may have not occurred to you that there are many times when you brush an important piece of work aside in order to get to the house and most likely retire for the night, when if your eye were right at home you could finish it in a few minutes and be ahead at any small cost.

Many farmers will tell you that it is impossible to get a good light on the farm; that is the reason they have to go to bed so early. Others will tell you that they have tried lamps and lanterns and other contrivances and have had no success with them. Having had experience with all these things and knowing how hard it is to get a good light on the farm, we have put on the market a lamp that we guarantee will give a light better than gas or electricity. We have placed this lamp in hundreds of farm homes in Canada and the United States, and in every instance it has given entire satisfaction. We want you to have one of these lamps on your farm, and will make you a special proposition whereby you can get one free. Write us for particulars. Address: The Sunlight Lamp Co., Dept. 1, Toronto, Ont.

Sewers of Manchuking

Manchuking is a dangerous headquarters. Since the fall of the Manchus the light workers often burn their own houses down. An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a home.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

The Cheever Twins

They Were Concealed In Their Pretzel Johns.

By CHARLOTTE FISHER.

Copyright by American Press Association.

When the Cheever twins chose to dress alike, they had only their mother's connivance and when Enoch engaged his gold and ring for Joseph's diamond, then their wives could not tell them apart, much to the mirth of the joke loving brothers. Of course the twins were accustomed to having strangers confuse their identities under the most ordinary conditions, but when they were clever enough to provoke the two women who knew them best they rejoiced accordingly.

"Bet you," grinned Enoch one day as they marched together to their work, "bet you," returned Joseph, with a significant wink.

That night Mrs. Enoch Cheever met her husband at the door to greet him fondly and removed his proffered kiss. Instantly the twin knew by her coy conviction that this was her brother-in-law, but her love did not betray her discovery.

He hung his hat on the tree and came into the brighter light of the dining room. He stood there a moment, rubbing his hands with the nervous energy was a marked characteristic of his brother's. For a moment Mrs. Cheever wavered in her opinion, the gratuitous rubbing was odd, and he did sing, but they were all just as her husband had worn them in the morning.

"You planned, my dear," observed Joseph as he sat down in Jo-seph's chair and tickled the nose.

"I am," returned Judge with heightened color and much spirit. "You mention, Mrs. Enoch Cheever, who called the other evening?"

"Brother Joseph," replied Joseph vaguely. "Oh—ah—yes. What about him?"

"Other—oh, yes, my effect" repeated Joseph uncertainly. Then with a desire to drop the subject of the unknown hat, "Enoch Cheever, I'm going Boston almost to tomorrow."

"WHAT'S THE MATTER ALBERT?"

"That is to wedding this evening, Enoch," protested Madge insecurely.

"What be the desire to be wedding here tonight for? I'm no engagement at the lodge—got to fulfill a few at Joseph Cheever's house at home tonight with calm precision, serving Madge with paper thin slices of roast beef.

"You know I like it well done and quite thick, Enoch," she complained, but she did not permit him to change it. His evident perturbation was reflected in the interest with which he listened to the subject of lemons.

"It doesn't seem to me you're fond Joe quite right in that Boston matter, Enoch," declared affirm at last Mrs. Peason. "The very idea of your furnishing that man capital to go into business with! I'm surprised at you, I am sure! It's all very well for you, because you're such a thrifty man, but no other way, but what about poor Joseph?"

"I'm," echoed Joseph, wide eyed, upon discovering a chance for an ally.

"Enoch Cheever!" shrieked Madge suddenly. "You are not saying tomorrow after all that's the matter with?"

"Tilly" muttered Joseph testily. He was afraid of his brother's wife for only Peason, who had once been their head salesman, and who was anxious to start another shop in competition with his former employers.

"Peason!" cried Madge once more. "The very idea of your speaking to me in that manner! If you do not apologize at once I shall telephone to father to come over!"

"Why—why, what did I say?" demanded Joseph, considerably aroused at the other's attack, and realizing that he could not fare, unthreatening. "I'm sure I don't know, Mrs. Cheever's father."

"You yellow," said you never need such an expression before in your life as you've used to me this evening. Joseph Cheever, I'm ashamed of you!"

Joseph Cheever turned pale with astonishment. Then a great light broke over Joseph, and after much explanation and coaxing Madge consented to be calmed.

"Then I shall let you go, Joseph," she declared, "but I shall never forgive you for this."

"Sorry—sive—ever—married un—" Joseph raised poor Joseph, against.

"You know she had lots of character to do later," observed Mrs. Enoch Cheever complacently. "Joseph is so quiet and he never says a word if he didn't look so much like you Enoch, I don't believe I could tell, and you know Ada adores cheerful people."

"I suppose so," submitted Ada's husband resignedly but humbly.

"That Ned Lauriston—you remember the fellow who was so wild since Ada's dark love affair? Well, you have to be went on the stage after she refused him, and he has become a great actor. I don't suppose Ada has ever told Joseph about the affair, because I think she still feels a sort of—of—of interest in him, but I'm sure Joseph Madge smiled fondly at Joseph, who shrugged a sigh with response.

"I dare say she does," he said glumly. "Sort of sickener, willowy thing. I suppose." Then he brightened perceptibly at the sentiment, with thinking of Madge.

"Sent to the bend!" he exclaimed. "What do you mean? I'd like to know what do you think I'm sending you to college for? I want to the bend! Why aren't you at the bend, where you ought to be?"

At this the son was much crestfallen, but upon his return he went about his work with such exhilaration that at the end of the term he found himself in the reversed place. When he trod home that year he felt very proud. It would be good news to tell dad anon.

Then the announcement was made the father contemplated 9th son for a new selection in Boston, then with a charge he remarked:

"At the head of the class, eh? Well, that's a fine commentary on Yale university!"—Lippincott's.

To Fur Yet.

Minister (arriving late)—I wanted to barber's chair—All through yet?

Barber—Yes, sir; all through but the hair.

Minister—Then I must have been in a trance. I have been to sleep.

Barber—Ye was that, sir.

Minister—I hope I was a good cut sail so well as?—He passed sleepily.

"Half so well as—what?" demanded Joseph impatiently.

"Half as well as you trust son, Enoch," said Enoch's wife with whimsical pride. "You would not think to look at Joseph I am sure that—"

"Think I'm what?" I'll read him a lesson he'll not soon forget." And Joseph Cheever, Jr., sprang from his easy going ways, shot out of the door and down the street before his father, tripped over a car and went to the ground with a thud that left his brother at their side.

After the first relaxed behind him Mrs. Enoch Cheever threw herself down on a couch and laughed until the tears rolled down her cheeks. Then she went to the telephone and called a number.

In the meantime Mrs. Joseph Cheever had prepared a surprise scene with her brother-in-law, for she had received an anonymous letter, the oldest describing from her sister-in-law Enoch, and the latter was to be present at the time.

"Well, Ada," a very much patronized Enoch was the first to greet her, "I'm glad you've called upon to pay my brother's wife a visit. I'm sure you've never been to be a happy woman."

"Not of course, Enoch Joseph, I have never known of her tenderness for Ned Lauriston, the actor. I've Madge! I can so sorry for her. And to those seem too bad, Joseph, that you should be called upon to face that question-like deal with Brunson at this time, for it isn't fair to you, so I will inform, and—"

"Woman," interrupted Enoch solemnly, "if there is any peace in the world to hold your tongue! I am going to settle several matters and will not get excited."

His disappeared as rapidly as his brother had done in another apartment a short interval later, and stepped on her for his club. There he met Joseph in one of the smaller and also one of the rooms, which had never disappointed him.

"Joseph," he began, "I am going to ask you," retorted Enoch. "And do you know what Joseph's answer was?"

They stared at each other keenly for a moment, and then Joseph broke out

Miss Teetgen Banqueted

A banquet was tendered by the Islay Board of Trade on Tuesday night to Miss Teetgen, on her departure for England with her sister, Mrs. G. A. Lively. The affair came off very successfully in Masse-Hall, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. About a hundred guests sat down to a table adorned and spread in a fashion which reflected much credit to the energetic committee in charge, Mesdames Beckenshaw, A. Hilchcliff and Pyle, as well as upon the ladies of the town and district generally.

Under the direction of Mr. Beckenshaw the musical basses were prepared and honored with the closest attendance of which the whole affair partook. Miss Teetgen was presented with an address and a cheque, not as being in any degree an acknowledgement of her great services in getting the Hospital for Islay, but merely, that she might get on it something that would be a little souvenir of the place and her strenuous summer's campaign here. Miss Teetgen responded and with her accustomed grace in words and modesty, thanked the people of Islay and made mention of her appreciation of their action on this occasion. A short musical programme followed, Mrs. Lively and Miss Teetgen contributing two patriotic songs by the Canadian song writer, Mrs. Lemon, who is a friend of the ladies. An enjoyable time concluded the evening's entertainment.

The Hospital building is now well under way, the wall being up and the roof on. Standing on the hill to the west of the town, it adds greatly to the appearance of that part of Islay.

Asking for Public Building

At a largely attended meeting of the Young Mens Conservative club held Monday evening last it was unanimously decided that steps be immediately taken to memorialize the Dominion government for the erection of a public building at Vermilion. The resolution was moved by J. W. G. Morrison and seconded by R. L. Craig and the opinion was expressed that with the growing importance of the town, the large receipts from the post office and the customs, the request would undoubtedly meet with the approval of the government. Public buildings have lately been erected at Vegreville and Lloydminster and there is no reason why one should not be built at Vermilion.

Electric Light Rates Discussed

Basis of Charge Reached-No Further Capital Ac. Expenditure till Spring

A special meeting of the Town Council was held Monday night, all members of the board present, to consider Engineer Hastings' and Electrician Welsh's report.

An estimate of the cost of connecting poles into the Pelican Lake district, and included in the light power, was submitted in section. It included 12 street lights 1 lamp each. An estimate of the locality to the electrician showed that only some 40 house lights were wanted.

A motion was moved that all parties coming in the new district should pay a proportionate share of the cost of connecting the buildings of the municipality coming under the by-law to be submitted to the ratepayers.

The amount of the wiring of the rates to consumers of electric light was discussed at length. [illegible] Following [illegible] Hastings' estimate of rates [illegible] high to be placed too small [illegible] Glover Heating and Electrician [illegible] opposed the rates [illegible] opinion on the same.

The following is the list of rates for all consumers within the Power or lower lights the standard.

Lights	Rate per month per 16 cp. light
1	$1.25

After per every extra lamp.

32 c.p. lamps to count same as 2 16 c.p. lamps.

20, 25 & 40 watt Tungsten or half lamps are same as 16 c.p. lamps and 60 watt same as 32 c.p. lamp.

1/2 c.p. Metered rate - 15 cts per k.w. hour.

Minimum rates under meter rates:

No. of lights	Min. rate per mth
1 to 5	$2.00
6 to 10	$3.50
11 to 20	$6.00
21 and over	30 cts

All meters installed by town to be charged a rental of 25 cts per month. Consumers now installing meters purchased from Municipality at cost, without any rental. A commercial rate to be established on all commercial lights over and above the standard, provided the consumer uses a meter checked up annually by the town electrician and pays for the same.

It was moved that this be the rates and that [illegible] be published [illegible] ratepayers [illegible] report thereon.

BURIED TREASURES

You remember the story of the old man who when he was on his death-bed, called his sons to him and told them that a great treasure was buried on the farm.

After he died the sons dug that farm deep, from one end to the other finding no gold or silver. they planted and in the Autumn they discovered what the old man meant. The treasure was there, but its name was Digging and planting.

Then you, no doubt, remember another story of an old man who on his deathbed, called his sons to him and told them to try to break a number of sticks that (in the story) lay near the bed. They could not do it, but when the old man told them to untie the bundle and try each stick separately, they broke them without trouble.

And the story goes on, making the old man say,

Now boys, if you work together no one can overcome you, but if you quarrel with one another and separate ... easy to break you as it is to break one stick from the bundle." Which, in its way, was a fortune for the boys.

II

Now, there is another story which you have not heard. It is also about ... three sons. The ... man was not on his death bed. He was a lively old man attending to business every day.

From the time his boys were old enough to understand, he talked to them about the Great Gold Mine. At first the boys did not know just what he meant. But he told them wonder... ... be found. Then he gave him some money, and a blessing and told him to go away and dig in it.

When the second boy was twenty-one he took him aside and told him the same thing.

And when the youngest boy was twenty-one he told him the secret ...

The prize of $1,000 in gold offered by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the best 100 pounds of hard red wheat, grown in America and shown at the forthcoming land show at New York in November is ... interest among the Western Canadian farmers. The show, will be the biggest of its kind yet attempted and is being supported by all the leading land and irrigation interests in America as such is bound to be a success. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's prize of $1,000 is not the only one of that magnitude that has been offered, but it is relatively the most important as whereas the American prize givers have been careful to limit the competitors to United States farmers, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has shown his firm confidence in Canadian products by throwing the contest for his prize open to all farmers of the continent of America. From the stand taken by United States leading donators of prizes, it is very evident that they are afraid that the Canadian farmer might capture all the prizes which would be a severe blow to the United States agriculturalists ... United States farmers, ... being barred. Evidently this is a free admission that Canadian farm products are superior to those of the United States and that the Americans are afraid to meet the Canadian farmers in open competition. By offering a prize of this magnitude Sir Thomas Shaughnessy is doing a great deal to encourage the Canadian farmer to grow clean, healthy crops and word received recently ... that as the time for competition of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's piece of work and it could hardly be ... shown by the farmers in the land show. The farmers realize that the contest is of an international nature and that Canada's reputation must be upheld. ...

Lady Parson

One of the embarrassments of the lady parson, who is now quite familiar in America, is illustrated by the following story:

A young lady who was the parson of a small town in a Western State was called to the door of the parsonage one day and saw there a much embarrassed young German farmer.

"They say de minister lifed in dis house," he said.

"Yes," replied the fair pastor.

"Vell—I vant to git merrit."

"To get married? Very well, I can marry you," said the ministeress encouragingly.

"Oh, but I got a girl already."

The Lamp That Saves The Eyes

Children naturally never think of possible strain on their eyesight when poring over a fascinating book.

It is up to you to see they do not ruin their young eyes these long evenings by reading under a poor light.

The Rayo Lamp is an insurance against eye troubles, alike for young and old.

The Rayo is a low-priced lamp, but it is constructed on the soundest scientific principles, and there is not a better lamp made at any price.

It is easy on the eye because its light is so soft and white and widely diffused. And a Rayo Lamp never flickers.

The Murfree Case

A Woman's Faithfulness Saved the Day

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The assistant district attorney pushed back his chair with a gesture of weariness. "Is that all, Jackson?" he asked of the clerk at his elbow.

"Here are the papers in the Murfree case, Mr. Chalmers," replied the man, thrusting a sheaf of papers before his superior. "Mr. Lantry was working on them when he was stricken, and he made memoranda of all the most important"—

"Very well; leave them on my desk, and I will go over the matter this evening."

When he was alone Chalmers arose and paced the floor with quick, impatient strides. His broad shoulders hunched despondently and his genial face was graven in lines of care as he went to and fro.

The day had been full of disagreeable happenings. He had returned that morning from a long trip abroad to find his chief stricken with apoplexy on the eve of a great legal fight. The principal malefactor in this case was a rich man, James White Murfree, and it happened that Murfree was the man who had run a race with Chalmers for the hand and heart of Alice Leigh, and Murfree, with the money, had won.

Suddenly the outer door of his office swung open and closed. A tall man, clad in a richly furred overcoat, walked swiftly to his desk and looked down at him with the patronizing stare of James White Murfree.

Chalmers motioned toward a chair and challenged the other's errand with frank inquiry in his brown eyes.

Murfree's long, pale face did not change color under the scrutiny. His ...

"HAVE YOU SEEN THE PAPERS?"

... said, worked his way up from a penniless boyhood to the honorable position he now held.

Would he exchange his by no means large income for the million? If he fought Murfree and Murfree won in the end, then Murfree could "break" the assistant district attorney.

It was a tempting proposition, and Chalmers hesitated. His head dropped lower until his face was quite hidden in his hands. There was no sound save the ticking of the clock and a distant roar of traffic from the street far below.

He was a lonely man. He lived at his club, and it was his lot to spend long evenings there, and his wistful eyes would often follow the careless and reluctant home going of easy natured men.

The inner door opened softly and his secretary stood on the threshold. She was young and straight and slim, with soft, steady dark eyes and a mist of dusky hair which emphasized the pallor of her cheeks and the scarlet of her lips.

She looked at the bent head of her employer with strange intentness; then with a quick movement she leaned forward and removed the parcel of documents in the case of the state versus James Murfree et al.

Instantly she regained her own office, sat down before a desk and folded and addressed letters with careful precision. Her cheeks were flushed now, and a pulse beat quickly in her pretty throat above the frill of white ruching.

After awhile the outer door opened again and Murfree's harsh voice broke the silence. The girl listened breathlessly.

There was the sound of a scraping chair, a long interval of silence and the door opened and closed behind the assistant district attorney. His face wore a look of acute anxiety.

"Miss Wainwright," he asked, "have you seen the papers in the Murfree case? It is very singular. They were on my desk a few moments ago, and now they have completely disappeared." He eyed her keenly. He had long depended on her to straighten out the tangles in the daily routine of his office, and now he came instinctively to her for help.

The girl arose to her feet and faced him. She leaned against the desk as if for support, and her hands were clasped tightly together. Her lips parted and her breath died away in a frightened little gasp.

"Have you seen the papers?" he repeated.

"Yes," she said. "I have hidden them."

"Hidden them!" he cried with displeasure. "Please return them to me at once."

"I will not," said the girl deliberately.

"What?" he flashed round at her.

She clung desperately to the desk, and when she spoke there was an obstinate note in her low voice. "I ... not return them to you, Mr. Chalmers. I hope you will forgive me. I couldn't help it—it all happened so quickly. I overheard what he said in there an hour ago"— She nodded toward his private office.

Chalmers regarded her ... "Well?" he said defiantly ... that you did overhear what was not intended for your ears. ... that you were justified in —" He hesitated.

"I was afraid," she stammered breathlessly—"I was afraid you would give the papers to him!"

The assistant district attorney ... harshly. ...

Dangerous Story.

A Yale undergraduate has been having a fairly lively time of it during his summer vacation and when the show ... has not been keeping schedule time.

He was invited out to dinner with his mother, and he was seen to get a bit nervous when she began one of her favorite stories. This concerned the burning of their home, on which occasion the son's watch, left on a bureau, was found ticking in the ruins after the house had been destroyed.

At the conclusion of the story the college boy jumped up abruptly and left the room with his handkerchief over his face as if suddenly seized with nosebleed. He did not return for several minutes, by which time the conversation drifted.

After dinner the "undergrad's" chum asked the significance of the move.

"I'll tell you, but nobody else," said he. "When mother told that story I was afraid she was going to ask me to show the watch."—Chicago Post.

Conservative Convention

J. G. Clark the Candidate

At a largely attended convention of the Conservative party for the district of Vermilion held at the Royal George Hotel on Friday the 15th, John G. Clark of Innisfree was unanimously chosen as candidate for the next provincial elections. Mr. Clark's name was received with an outburst of applause which lasted several minutes and when he arose to accept the nomination there was another storm of enthusiasm. He thanked the delegates for the honor they had conferred upon him, but felt that had he consulted his own best interests he would find it necessary to decline. He could not however, overlook the unanimity with which his name was chosen and he would ask for the aid of the Conservatives and endeavor to do his very utmost to be worthy of the honor bestowed upon him.

There were over 100 delegates in attendance many of whom had driven 50 and 60 miles to be present. Dr. Creelman Mr. Watson were over 70 years old and came all the way from Innisfree to cast their vote at the meeting. The convention of business and the nomination of the candidate was the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Patrons, Mr. F. McIlmoyle and Mr. J. A. Munson.

Honorary President J. L. Mc Allister, Mannville.

President, W. C. Craig, Vermilion.

1st. Vice. H. H. Kennedy, Kinsella.

2nd Vice. J. Montgomery, Innisfree.

Secretary. J. W. C. Morrison, Vermilion.

The executive committee will comprise the presidents of the different local associations organized in the district.

"What's that got to do with it?" demanded "Fingerless" Fraser.

"She pulled the old fellow's leg, that's all," explained Alton.

"If I thought she had done that," said Emerson slowly, "I wouldn't touch a penny of the money."

"I don't care where the money came from or how it got there," rumbled Balt. "It's here, that's enough."

But Boyd clung to his point with a stubbornness which he himself found it difficult to explain. The arguments of the others only annoyed him. The walk to Cherry's hotel afforded him time for reflection, which, while it deepened his doubt, somewhat lessened his impatience, and when he was shown into her presence he did not begin in the impetuous manner he had designed.

"What makes you think I had anything to do with it?" she asked after he had spoken.

"You were with Hilliard last night."

She nodded slightly. "We closed out negotiations for the copper mine last night."

"How did you come out?"

"He takes it over and does the development work," she answered.

"That means that you are independent, that you can leave the north country and do all the things you want to do." [illegible]

SATURDAY NIGHT SERMONS

BY REV. SAMUEL W. PURVIS, D.D.

THE GOD OF THE LUCKY.

Text, "The Lord was with Joseph, and he was a lucky fellow" (Tyndale's translation).—Genesis xxxix, 2.

His name was Joseph. He rose from the slave pen to the throne. The Bible says he was "a lucky fellow." As the other slaves saw him rise they said, "What a lucky fellow!" Of course he toiled while other slaves slept. He looked after Potiphar's affairs, while the other slaves looked after themselves. He busied himself bettering the prison, while others [illegible] or [illegible] trying to break out. There are plus and minus people. Joseph was plus. Still God and man said Joseph was "a lucky fellow."

One ought to define "luck." "That which chances to a person for [illegible] or ill." But when you say "chance" you confess ignorance. The very flip of the coin is governed by nerve, [illegible] thumb and brain that flip it. If you could calculate the mental and [illegible] forces between the coin's leap and return you could buy the world. But you can't. And it's just that bit of ignorance we call "chance." If a [illegible] hated to saw wood, and of the load of pine, hickory and beech most of the pine fell to his brother's side, and the hard, knotty wood fell to him, he would say he had bad luck. Nevertheless there would be a cause for the wood so falling. If, however, the boy's father had so stacked the wood that the pine fell to one and the hickory to another, because one was better fitted for his lot than the other, the word "chance" would have no place there. If one sawed wood while the other taught his dog to balance a chip of wood on his nose there might be still another reason.

The Luck of Having a Job.

Joseph's good luck was in having an opportunity of demonstrating his fitness for doing large things by faithfulness to small things. He had the luck of being a servant. That was his chance. Every fellow who has a job has a chance. Don't think for a [illegible]

RELIEF IS QUICK, BUT CURE IS SURE

NAPOLEON VAILLONCOURT SPEAKS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

They soon cured his Kidney troubles, and in six months there is no sign of their coming back.

St. Anne des Monts, Gaspe Co., Que.—(Special.)—It is six months since I was cured, and I have had no return of my trouble." In these words Napoleon Vaillancourt, a well known resident of this place, gives evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills not only give quick relief to sufferers from Kidney Disease, but clean that disease out, root and branch, and cure it permanently.

That Mr. Vaillancourt had Kidney Disease everyone here knows. That he is cured is also established beyond a doubt. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it.

"My back bothered me, also my heart and my kidneys, and my limbs would cramp," Mr. Vaillancourt states in giving his experience. "Now all that is gone and he is a sound healthy man. Do you wonder that he [illegible] Dodd's Kidney Pills?"

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure quickly and permanently because they go right to the root of the trouble. They act directly on the Kidneys. They never fail to cure.

Colored Teeth

Pearly teeth are not the fashion everywhere. Firms of artificial teeth manufacturers who have an export trade have to keep in stock molars of every shade of color from white to black. There is a steady demand for black teeth in Siam, Java, Batavia and Burma, where the natives chew the betelnut, which blackens the teeth. For Persia, the teeth must be absolutely milk white. Recently an order was received from Bhavnagar, in India, for some bright red, and blue artificial teeth. Smokers' teeth are regularly supplied to dentists in shades to match those which have been destroyed by nicotine.

To have the children sound and healthy is the first care of a mother. They cannot be healthy if troubled with worms. Use Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

Marriage in Burma

In Burma marriage is civil, not religious and is regarded as a simple partnership which, if not happy, may be dissolved at any time. After marriage there is no outward symbol like a wedding ring on the Burmese woman. She does not even adopt her husband's family name, but retains her own. The husband has no right over the property which his wife possesses before marriage, nor of the property which she might acquire after marriage. The Burmese woman can appear in law courts to represent her husband. In contracts with a third person, she and her husband sign their name together. They can borrow money on joint security. Both husband and wife can sign deeds and [illegible]. And when there is no [illegible] love between a married couple they can get a divorce [illegible].

Shipwreck Today

"Captain, is there much danger?"

"Not a particle. A moving picture outfit will soon be along and rescue us after [illegible] have taken a few films."

Through indiscretion in eating green fruit in summer many children become subject to cholera morbus caused by [illegible] that act [illegible] of the intestines. Pains and dangerous purgings ensue and the delicate system of the child suffers under the drain. In such cases the safest and surest medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It will check the inflammation and save the child's life.

"That fellow is a perfect joke. [illegible] a relative of your wife or holding a better job than you?"

The Doctor's Fee

There came a let-up in the rush of patients, and the doctor opened two small envelopes lying on his desk.

"It's all right," he said. "I wasn't sure. Without offending I couldn't open the envelopes in the presence of the persons who gave them to me. They contain the fees left by two Englishmen who called close on each other's heels. English etiquette is rather embarrassing for a physician who is used to patients who hand over the money without the denomination right on top, American fashion. In England it would be considered an insult to give a physician his fee unwrapped. You can't insult an American physician that way, but newcomers credit him with an excess of sensibility and give him a good many uneasy moments wondering if he hasn't been underpaid."

Minard's Liniment cures garget in cows.

Penn Very Much a Londoner

William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania, was born at Tower Hill on October 14, 1644, was christened in All Hallows Church, became a student of Lincoln's Inn, and then, joining the Quakers, he abandoned the law and preached along with George Fox in a meeting house of Lombard St. He once occupied a house in Norfolk St., Strand, chosen on account of its closeness to the river, which facilitated escape from duns, and he was imprisoned both at Newgate and the Fleet. So Penn was, after all, very much a Londoner.

Away with Depression and Melancholy.—These two evils are the accompaniment of a disordered stomach and torpid liver and mean wretchedness to all whom they visit. The [illegible] and steadiest way to combat them is to use Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are [illegible] on the stomach and bring [illegible] have proved their usefulness to thousands of cases and will continue to give relief to the suffering who are wise enough to use them.

Sherlock Holmes

It is said that the late Dr. Joseph Bell, of Edinburgh, was modestly proud of the fact that he was the original of Conan Doyle's "Sherlock Holmes." He is described as walking into his drawing room one winter evening to find a group of women absorbed in reading and discussing [illegible].

With his habitual spirit of inquiry he asked what they were reading and they told him that it was the "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," the story of a most entrancing [illegible] they only wished [illegible] to meet in real life.

A Poor Weak Woman

As she is termed, will endure bravely and patiently agonies which a strong man would give way under. The fact is women are more patient than they ought to be under such troubles.

Every woman ought to know that she may obtain the most experienced medical advice free of charge and in absolute confidence and privacy by writing to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for many years and has had a wider practical experience in the treatment of women's diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-famous for their astonishing efficacy.

The most perfect remedy ever devised for weak and delicate women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG. SICK WOMEN WELL.

The many and varied symptoms of women's peculiar ailments are fully set forth in Plain English in the People's Medical Adviser (1008 pages), a newly revised and up-to-date Edition, cloth-bound, will be sent on receipt of 50 one-cent stamps to pay cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address as above.

A Warm Bathroom

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Every mother should be careful that the children take their baths in a warm room. The chill of a cold room is dangerous after coming out of the hot water.

A Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater in bathroom or bedroom is just the degree of warmth you want in five or ten minutes. All you have to do is to touch a match.

The Perfection Heater burns nine hours on one filling and is always ready for use. You can move it anywhere it is needed. There is no waste of fuel and heat warming unoccupied rooms. Just the heat you want, when and where you want it.

The Perfection is fitted with an automatic-locking flame spreader that prevents the wick being turned high enough to smoke and is easy to remove and drop back when cleaning.

Building Review For 1911

Vermilion Shows a Splendid [illegible] of Business [illegible] Property

Grand Total $78,600

With its last issue for the year the Standard gives a review of the buildings erected and the improvements made to property during 1911. The magnificent showing needs no comment from us, for the list speaks louder than words of the great progress which has taken place. The returns have all been verified from the Municipal building permit list and are as near as possible correct.

During the year a Customs Office was opened at Vermilion; a new lumber yard, making the number three; two additional Livery Barns; a real estate office; a second bakery and confectionery; an Opera House; Wener Trading Co., general store building and a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada. In addition to these, the government Demonstration Farm for this portion of Alberta was located at Vermilion, joining the Pilkie sub-division of the town. This remarkably good showing is a demonstration of the enormous trade increase in the town.

A DOUBLE PART

It Was Played by a Russian Revolutionist With Serious Results

By PETER VALOVITCH

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I began my career as a revolutionist by acting as a pretended spy for the government. Working in secret on two sides I found to be doubly perilous. On one occasion I made a narrow escape from being put out of the way by the very men I was serving. I was working in the interest of the prime minister or pretending to work in his interest and at the same time was a member of a secret revolutionary circle. In order to guard against danger from the circle I chose one of its members, Michael Orloff, for my confidant, trusting to him in case

WHISPERED IN HIS EAR.

I became known as a government agent to assure my comrades that I was working a deep laid scheme in the interest of the revolution.

I laid a plan which I felt sure would give me the entire confidence of the minister. I told him that I had discovered the meeting place of a circle whose members were conspiring to assassinate him. My intention was to have him send a force to arrest the circle, of which I was a member, while they were in session. But I intended that the force should arrive after the meeting had broken up. At the proper moment I would announce to the circle that I was a pretended spy for the government and inform them of the plan I had laid. They would disperse, leaving documents to show that the place had been used by revolutionists, but nothing to incriminate any one of them.

It was a hazardous scheme, but I felt that if it were successful it would give me a footing with the government on which to found a still greater benefit to the revolution. But I dare not tell the members of the circle beforehand what I was about to do, for I was not sure but that some one of them was a government spy, such as I pretended to be. Such things now and then occurred.

On a certain day I told the minister that the revolutionary body whose members were conspiring to assassinate him would meet at a certain place at 11 o'clock at night. If he would send a force there at half past 11 he would capture them. The meeting hour was really 10 o'clock, and I intended by 11 to have warned my associates. I charged the minister to have the force at the meeting place at the exact hour and minute I had given him, else the plan would go amiss. And so it would, but for the circle instead of the government.

Though by keeping the matter a secret from my comrades till the last moment I headed off any one of the members who might be a government spy, there was another danger, but it did not occur to me. Suppose one of our number should secretly be playing the same game I was.

Our circle met at the appointed hour, 10 o'clock. I waited anxiously for Orloff to come in, since if my scheme should react upon me my life would depend upon his evidence. But the president called the circle to order, and Orloff had not arrived. Half an hour elapsed while we were in session, and still he did not come. Then suddenly something happened which filled me with consternation. Peter Yensky, one of the circle, came in hurriedly and said:

"We are betrayed."

Every man started from his seat, but the president directed that we remain where we were.

"By whom?" he asked.

"One of our number."

"Which one?"

"I do not know."

Fortunately the eyes of the members were concentrated on the man who gave the information, so that no one noticed the pallor that spread itself over my face when the words "I do not know" were spoken. I remembered [illegible] as the traitor. But, heavens, how I longed for Orloff!

Every possible precaution had been taken since our first meeting to insure against surprise and to deceive any force which might come upon us as to our real character. There were several scientific [illegible] might, and certain instruments and books used by them were kept on hand to be produced in case of emergency to prove that we were a society intended for the advancement of science. These devices were brought out and all incriminating documents burned.

We had barely got things in order when there was a sound of footsteps without, and a man wearing a heavy beard that concealed his mouth and chin and with his hat drawn down over his eyes entered.

"You are my prisoners!" he said.

"Why so?" asked our president.

"You have been accused of plotting the assassination of a minister."

"We are men of science met for its advancement."

"You cannot deceive the government by any such trick."

"Surely we will be given an opportunity to prove what we are."

"You will be given an opportunity to prove nothing. You will be marched from this room to Siberia."

The man who arrested us, backed by a force whom we could hear moving about in the hall, ordered us to stand up in line preparatory to being marched away. It seemed to me that the only thing for me to do was to declare myself a spy for the government. I beckoned to our captor and [illegible]

[illegible] has made the arrest is Schierloff, one of our number, and those in the hall are other members of our circle."

Schierloff pulled off a false beard, and I recognized him at once.

"Comrades," continued the president, "it is necessary to put the traitor out of the way at once, for we must leave this place within a very short time. We will draw lots as to which one of us shall stab him to the heart, a method of execution that will be without noise and attract no attention."

But one person could interpose between me and death—that was Orloff. Why he was not at the meeting I knew not. I had charged him to be there, but had not told him why it was essential. I hurriedly told the circle every circumstance that had led me into my present position, but not one of them believed a word I said.

"If this is true," cried one of them, "you are at least a fool not to have made some arrangement by which you could prove your case. And a fool among us is as much to be feared as a traitor."

"Orloff's my confederate," I said, "and he is not here. Send for him."

"We have not time. Before he could reach us the hounds you have set upon us would be here."

"Come," said the president, "prepare the lots."

The secretary hurriedly scratched the name of every man present on a separate piece of paper, and they were placed in a hat. Then I was required to draw the name of my executioner. I put my hand in automatically, for it seemed that the currents of my feelings neutralized one another, and drew out one of the slips. The president seized it and read out a name, but I was too nervous to hear what it was. I saw my executioner take off his coat and roll up his shirt sleeves. Then one of the circle handed him a long dagger. I was seized by two others, led to one end of the room and turned about. I saw as if in a haze my executioner standing at the other end looking pale and sick at heart at the work he was about to do. Then, at a word from the president, he advanced toward me.

There was a sound of footsteps without, the door was opened and Michael Orloff strolled in leisurely. Seeing me standing where I was and one of the circle advancing toward me holding a knife in his hand while the others looked on, some vengeful, others shrinkingly, Orloff's face took on an expression of surprise.

"Orloff," I cried, "save me!"

"Hold!" said the president to the executioner. Then to Orloff, "Are you a depository for a secret concerning this man?"

"Yes."

"What is it?"

"Shall I tell?" Orloff asked of me.

"For heaven's sake, yes, tell all."

"He has been pretending to play the part of informer for the government. His heart is really with us."

"Can you prove that he has really been acting for us?"

"Yes."

"How?"

"By documents he has left in my possession."

"Very well. Let us go at once. Within twenty minutes our retreat will have been cut off."

We left the apartment at once, but I was kept in the center of the others and carefully guarded until it became possible to examine the documents that I had left with Orloff, after which I was exonerated from the charge of being a spy. [illegible]

A Bright and Prosperous New Year to ALL

Seventy up on the Eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains was early again by the setting aside of 16,000,000 acres as a permanent park in forest. In order that this area may be protected from fire, and be made accessible to lumbermen, settlers, ranchers and all others who wish to use it, and in order that it may be so developed that it may serve its continually greatest ecological timber it is necessary that a great deal of improvement must be undertaken. This work, both the construction of roads, trails, fire guards and telephone lines, and the handling of timber sales will be conducted by the Dominion Forestry Branch.

NOISE OF THUNDER.

Theory as to the Cause of the Crackle, Roar and Rumble.

It has usually been thought that the noise of thunder is caused by the closing up of the vacuum created by the passage of the lightning, the air rushing in from all sides with a clap. But [illegible] of the noise is rather [illegible] suggested thunder is due to the intense heating [illegible] the gas of water vapor along the line of electric discharge and the consequent conversion of [illegible] moisture into steam at enormous pressure.

In this way the crackle with which a peal of thunder sometimes begins might be regarded as the sound of steam explosion in a small [illegible] caused by discharges before the main flash. The rumble would be the overlapping steam explosions and the final [illegible] to the [illegible]

[illegible] the clap is loudest at the beginning. Trowbridge gave evidence to these suppositions by causing electric flashes to pass [illegible] through terminals clothed in soaked cotton wool, and he succeeded in magnifying the crack of the electric spark to a terrifying extent.—Exchange.

Charlotte Corday.

Charlotte Corday, the slayer of Marat, was, according to the [illegible] authorities, of noble lineage. Unlike the Maid of Orleans [illegible] blood flowed in her veins. She was well educated, and not a whisper was ever breathed against her moral character. It does not appear that she ever manifested the slightest signs of insanity or fanaticism. Her action in killing Marat was attended by nothing like madness or hallucination. Taught to believe that the Paris butcher was the one man who hindered the right [illegible] she quietly went down to the great city and in a very unostentatious manner dispatched the man she believed to be her people's greatest enemy.—New York American.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Camilton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods and never was regular and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, [illegible] cured me and I did not have [illegible] the operation at all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. [illegible] Camilton, Ontario.

But Think of the Giraffe

In her pretty new frock Sister Mabel felt quite proud as she sat on the front step and watched some boys playing on the sidewalk.

After a time one little boy came to talk to her and admire, in his rough little way, her bright, shiny shoes and pink sash.

"See my nice little square-cut waist," she crowed, "and my nice coral beads. Don't you wish you was a girl?"

"No, siree," replied the boy. "I wouldn't want to be any girl at all, because look how much more neck you have to wash."

Bullets of solid gold were used by Yaqui Indians in fighting against Porfirio Diaz in the recent Mexican revolution, according to passengers arriving at San Francisco from Mexican ports. C.P.R. FLORAL DEPARTMENT

Splendid Work Being Encouraged and Accomplished.

The C.P.R. Floral department is planning bigger things for 1912 than it has ever heretofore done. In 1911 this department distributed $1,500 in gold cash to the prize winners along the main and branch lines of the Road. Prizes for the "best" gardens have also been given, photographs being placed before judges who apportioned the rewards according to their best judgement. Indeed the public itself has taken upon itself the property of judging those miniature gardens which so enliven the roadway and cheer the travellers over the great highway from East to West.

Every year thousands of packages of seeds and thousands of bulbs are distributed free of charge to the employees of the road, and the result is that there is scarcely a station or section house or depot from New Brunswick to Victoria on Vancouver Island which has not been transformed by the [illegible] blooms which so beautify the line. This is what might be called a profitable pleasure for one thing it gives the traveller the idea that Canada is not a money making [illegible] it gives the man of [illegible] pleasant recreation [illegible] a proof that the great corporation of Canada considers something else besides road building, and that is character building, for no man can work amongst flowers without feeling some touch of nature awakening within his heart. This also goes for the betterment of the man, be he working man or man of leisure.

The work of the Floral department is effective. It is practical. It is beneficial as well, for a love of the beautiful implanted in the mind does much to regulate the heart. No set of employees in all the world perhaps [illegible] and as high as the men engaged along the line of the great Transcontinental [illegible]

[illegible]

The tiny beauty spots of the C.P.R. have become as much a factor of Canada itself, and other railways abroad are said to be following in the footsteps of the man who first thought of planting a flower along the wayside. The credit of this thought belongs to a man who twenty years ago was an Agent of the Road. He set out a few garden seeds which seem to have increased at such a rate as to have made a chaplet which today crowns the heights and decks the valleys of the East and West. [illegible] become the monumental things of life.

In the matter of tree planting, flower culture and the encouragement of the artistic, the C.P. Railway stands unique. It is a big railway and yet it stops to consider the little things of business life. To this Road is due the thanks of all Canada for making the bare spots of this world a little brighter for the passer-by.

Odd Shaving Habits

It is said that of the men who shave themselves not one in fifty can use the razor with both hands. An American well known in commercial circles in New York has confessed that he always shaves himself standing in a corner of the room and facing the wall. When he was a poor country boy he bought a razor on the sly. There was no mirror in his bedroom, and rather than let his people know what he was about, he faced the wall and scraped away as best he could. Once accustomed to that method he never needed a glass. Another person, a [illegible], formerly a [illegible] many years shaved [illegible] on a milking stool and [illegible] reflection in a bucket of water. [illegible] and he says that he combs and shaves standing up.

Eyes May Change Color

The possibility of a man's eyes changing color as the result of a mental shock or physical ill treatment was the subject of an interesting discussion recently by a number of surgeons in the eye ward of one of the great London hospitals.

One of the surgeons stated: "It is common knowledge that great physical hardships may suddenly turn the hair white. The loss of color here follows on certain chemical changes due to disturbances of nutrition, taking place in the tiny particles of coloring matter which give the hair its color.

"All infants at birth have blue eyes. In some babies immediately after birth pigment granules begin to develop in the iris. Thus they become brown or black eyed. In others, however, no such pigment formation takes place, and the eyes remain blue or gray throughout life.

"If this at present blue-eyed ex-convict is really the missing brown-eyed banker, a reasonable explanation of the discrepancy in the eye colorings would be that under the stress of physical and mental shock the coloring matter which had in early life developed in each iris had atrophied or disappeared, leaving the eyes the original blue coloring present at birth."

Itching Eczema's Cause and Cure

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Eczema is common to rich and poor, old and young, and is neither contagious nor an indication of uncleanness, as some suppose.

Teething, improper food, indigestion, vaccination, poisoning by clothing or from ivy, etc., are named among the causes.

There is inflammation, redness, heat, swelling, discharge, formation of crust and all the time annoying troublesome itching and burning which often becomes so torturing as to be almost unendurable.

This ever present itching is what makes eczema so dreaded, and it is this feature to which Dr. Chase's Ointment gives relief from almost the first application.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is not only delightfully soothing, but is a wonder as a means of healing the skin. It is not long before the raw, itching sores are thoroughly cleansed, the itching subdued and the process of healing begun. Persistent treatment will then bring about a thorough cure.

This great ointment is also a beneficial to the skin, making it soft, smooth and velvety, and, besides being the most effective treatment known for the cure of eczema, is useful in every home in a score of ways.

CASH HAYWARD

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of W H Hayward, Esq, when his sister Edt. May, was united in marriage to Wm. Cash of the Alberta Western Lumber company. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Lyner.

At 2:30 p.m. the bridal party entered the drawing room to the strains of Lohengrins wedding march played by Mrs. H.N. Stephens. The bride, who looked beautiful in white messaline silk with tulle veil, was attended by her maid of honor, Miss Oliphant.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding supper was partaken of by the guests, after which the happy couple left by the midnight train for Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle and other points.

Posters announcing the sale of the Wener bankrupt stock will be out next week. As this stock has been bought at a very low figure on the dollar, real bargains are assured.

Don't forget W. E. B. Wilson's auction sale on Friday, Jan. 12. Some fine horses and cattle to be sold. Sale starts at 1 o'clock.

After further date I will remove warts and moles. Glen B. Courtright

A leading business man has received the following letter and not wishing to play hog on such a certain money-making proposition, gives it to the investing public through the columns of the Standard.

Frog Lake, Alberta, Dec. 30.

[illegible]

Knowing that you are always [illegible] for an investment [illegible] good live business proposition, I take the liberty of presenting to you what seems to be a most wonderful business proposition, and in which, no doubt, you will take a lively interest and perhaps size up the amount of stock that you wish to subscribe towards the formation of the Company.

The object of this company is to operate a large cat ranch in or near Frog Lake, where land can be purchased cheap for that purpose.

To start with we will collect, say 1,000,000 cats. Each cat will average 12 kittens a year. The skins run from 10c each for the white ones to 75c for pure black. This will give us 12,000,000 skins a year to sell at an average of 30c a piece, making our revenue about $10,000 a day gross.

A man can skin 50 cats a day for two dollars. It will take 100 men to operate the ranch, and, therefore, the net profit will be at least $9,800.00 a day.

We will feed the cats on rats, and will start a rat ranch next door. The rats multiply four times as fast as the cats. If we start with one million rats we will have, therefore, four rats per day for each cat which is plenty.

Now then we will feed the rats on the carcasses of the cats, from which the skins have been taken, giving each rat a fourth of a cat.

It will thus be seen that the business will be self acting and automatic, all the way through. The cats will eat the rats and the rats will eat the cats, and we will get the skins.

Awaiting your prompt reply and trusting that you will appreciate the opportunity that I give you of a sound and profitable investment.

Yours very truly,
Feline Western Limited
Per Harry Horse.

Thompson.—The death occurred yesterday at the Royal Jubilee Hospital of Emily Gertrude Thompson, beloved wife of W. F. H. Thompson, late of Vermilion, Alta., aged 46 years. The deceased was a native of Heckinton, Lincolnshire, England. The funeral will take place on Saturday at 2.30 p.m. The body will be interred in Ross Bay Cemetery.

Hon. Robt. Rogers' Private Car Met Serious Accident

Minister Badly Shaken Up but Not Seriously

Car Abandoned

Winnipeg, Jan. 8. Word was received in the city today that a serious accident had happened to Hon. Robt. Rogers' car, which was attached to the express going east Monday night on the way to Ottawa. So serious was the accident that the car had to be abandoned. The minister received a shaking up but was not hurt seriously.

Sure Signs Of Kidney Trouble.

If your urine is thick and cloudy or your passages [illegible] and painful, your kidneys and bladder are out of order. Neglect quickly brings on rheumatism, diabetes, lumbago, sciatica and etc.

Mrs. John Wagner of 110 Hollis St., Halifax, N.S., says: "Dull shooting pains would catch me across the small part of my back and extend into my shoulders and neck, often causing me to suffer with severe headaches and spells of dizziness. Spots would dazzle before my eyes and everything would turn black. I would fall to the floor and be unable to get up again without assistance. A friend told me of Booth's Kidney Pills and I began their use. The first box gave me relief and I am now well and strong.

Breaking It Gently

A lady who had recently moved to the suburbs was very fond of her first brood of chickens. Going out one afternoon she left the household in charge of her eight year old boy. Before her return a thunderstorm came on. The youngster forgot the chickens during the storm, and was dismayed after it passed to find that half of them had been drowned. Though fearful of the wrath to come, he thought best to make a clean breast of the calamity, rather than have it discovered.

"Mamma," he said, contritely, when his mother had returned, "mamma, six of the chickens are dead."

"Dead," cried the mother. "Six! How did they die?"

The boy saw his chance.

"I think—I think they died happy," he said.

"Splendid trout fish," the advertisement said and Smithers who fancied himself a fisherman, went down for a day's sport. He hired a villager to accompany him and together they walked along the banks of the stream.

"... dam are troublesome," complained Mr. Smithers.

"Aye sir," remarked the man, "but that ain't the worst of it."

"... are very thin, I can't ..."

"Aye, sir, but that ain't the worst of it."

"It strikes me that I was an idiot to pay two guineas for this fishing." "I don't believe there are any fish here."

"Aye, sir, but that isn't the worst of it."

"Hang it all, man, then what is the worst of it?"

"If you want to know the worst of it, there never were any fish here, sir."

They Knew His Back

Colonel John S. Mosby, the fire-eating guerrilla chieftain of the Confederacy, walked into a Washington bank one morning, slapped down a check in front of the aged cashier, and demanded the money for it. "I will have to find some one to identify you," said the cashier. "This check is made out to John S. Mosby, but identification is a rule which we must observe." About three million shafts of blue lightning were darting from the colonel's one eye, when another employee of the bank hurried up and said he knew Mosby. "That old man should have known you, colonel," said the acquaintance, while the old cashier was counting his coin. "He was an officer in the Union army." "Now that he stands with his back to me I recognize him perfectly," said Mosby, hotly. "I remember having seen it twice during the war."

Work Both Ways.

"Mr. Wombat, I must leave you to get married. I know a great many girls leave the firm to get married. Still, I hope you can fill my place."

"That will be all right. We have a waiting list of ladies who left us to get married, are now tired of their husbands, and would like to come back."

He gazed tenderly into her eyes as she spoke.

"Life," she murmured dreamily, "is after all nothing but a romance in which we are the characters, the author and you as the supreme A... bor of our being directs."

"And in the novel of your life," he said, tenderly, "where do I come in?"

"You?" she answered with a smile. "Oh, you are—let me see—one to three—you are Chap Seventeen."

His Future Plans

"By steamer from Djerba to Tripoli is only one night along the coast, and when I went on deck the next morning at sunrise we were anchored about two hundred yards from the shore, inside a line of dangerous looking rocks which just showed above the water. In the hands of any other nation this reef would have been turned into an excellent harbor, but under Turkish rule it remains a serious menace to shipping and in rough weather often forces steamers to pass without stopping at all.

"But the black rocks held my attention only a moment. Along the water's edge lay the most truly eastern town I had ever seen. Before its snowy domes and spearlike minarets Algiers, Tunis and even Constantinople paled and were as nothing. Tripoli could not lay claim to the splendors of those others but here was no mixture of east and west, no blending of styles. It was the purity of the line and the complete absence of European architecture which made one feel that here at least was the true Arab east.

"Away along the coast to the southeast stretched the oasis, framing the white town with its dark green, while in the centre, bathing its grey portions in the sparkling water, towered an old Spanish fort, half in ruins, but still used as a prison and residence of the pasha. The rest was a maze of white, flat roofs, with here and there a splash of red, where the cloths of the bath houses fluttered in the sun."—John Horne, in Travel and Exploration.

In the Physical Atlas, Berghaus declares of the emperor of China: "It is difficult in China to say to what religion a man belongs, as the same person may profess two or three. The emperor himself, after sacrificing according to the ritual of Confucius, visits a Tao See temple and afterward bows before an image of Fo in a Buddhist chapel."

As a vermifuge there is nothing so potent as Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, and it can be given to the most delicate child without fear of injury to the constitution.

Joy of Possession

"When we were poor," remarked the prosperous business man, "we looked forward to the time when we could have a summer cottage in the country."

"Well?" asked his friend.

"Well, when we got rich enough to have one we didn't like going to the same place every summer because it was monotonous, and we looked forward to the time when we could have another for variety."

"Yes?"

"We got another, and then we began to long for a winter place, so that we shouldn't have to spend so much time in London."

"I see."

Slide Fleming, Slide

When Goff ran against Fleming for the governorship of West Virginia there was a contest that went before a Democratic legislature. The legislature was determined to seat Fleming—and did seat him—but wanted to do the work in an orderly way. Consequently, for several days there were speeches, motions, parliamentary objections and manoeuvres.

One of the state senators who came from an interior county, knew that Fleming was almost certainly to be seated and wanted it done at once. After several days of fussing round he got the floor and made this speech:

"Mr. Chairman: What's the use of all this here speechifyin' argufyin' an' parliamentarifyin'? Ain't Fleming [illegible]? He are. Then slide him through!"

The strange stone carving on Easter island is one of the mysteries of the world. They range in size from a colossus seventy feet in height to a pigmy standing three feet. There are 555 of them. Concrete Sidewalks are Safe, Sightly and Everlasting

LUMBER used in damp places and on wet ground—as, for instance, in walks—has a very short life. It requires almost constant repairing and, in a few years, needs replacing.

Concrete, on the other hand, improves with age, and the very dampness which destroys lumber calls out the best qualities of the cement by making it harder and harder—until neither time nor traffic can affect it.

The best of wooden walks keep getting out of repair, and are a continual menace to life and limb. They are also a frequent source of expensive doctor bills and lost time. Then again, they are likely to eat up the original cost in repairs before they are replaced.

Concrete walks are sightly, everlasting and safe. They cost less to build and need no repairing nor painting.

Write for our free book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete."

It tells in plain, simple language, how you can save money on farm construction by using cement for Barns, Dairies, Foundations, Fence Posts, Troughs, Feeding Floors, Hitching Posts, Stalls, Silos, Stairs, and so forth. The Book is well illustrated with photographs, plans and diagrams. Fill out the coupon or send a postal to-day.

A Romantic Story

But a Matter of Fact Man Spoiled It

By WILLARD COOK

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

A number of men were lounging around a trading post in upper Canada. There was Jacques Trudeau, Jules Marier and others, including Silas Hutchins, a Connecticut Yankee, who had come up to trade miscellaneous articles for furs. Jacques Trudeau had the name of being a great story teller. Often of an evening in winter, when the trading of the day was ended, those living near his store would drop in, gather about the stove, get out their pipes and call on him for a story. His yarns, if they had been developed into novels, would have made "best sellers" today, for they were full of adventure, surprises and escapes. But these were flavored with that rhapsody which the French people love so well. On this particular evening Jacques, having been called upon for a story, chose an especially romantic subject.

"When I was a young man an English gentleman named Brewerton came up here with his daughter Clarissa. He bring gold monies to buy furs. He was ver' fine gentleman indeed, and his daughter Mees Brewerton was ver' fine young lady. Mademoiselle she haf nothing to do here, so her father, while he buy furs to tak all together at one time down to Montreal to sell, wish to find amusement for her. So he got a young skil teacher named Antoine Brisson to teach Mees Brewerton to use skis. Antoine Brisson he ver' fine looking young man. His face handsome, his hair fall on his shoulders in long black curls from under his fur cap. His buckskin suit show a divine figure lak ze Apollo Belvedere statue. When he speak his voice was lak bass notes of an organ."

"See here, Trudeau," interrupted Hutchins, "wasn't there some danger of them two fallin' in love and puttin' the old man to a heap o' trouble?"

The story teller and the listeners sitting around the stove all looked up reproachfully at the Yankee. They knew that there was bound to be a love affair between those two, but they wished to have it developed in good story form. Trudeau did not deign a reply, and when they had all recovered from the shock of the interruption he continued his story without changing in the slightest the lines he had laid down for its construction:

"Monsieur Brewerton he wish his daughter to learn to trap. So he engage Edouard Rubidoux to teach her. There Rubidoux he ver' handsome man too. He haf eye lak the eagle"—

"Hook nose?" interrupted the Yankee.

"No, sare. Why you ask dat?"

"Eagles have 'em. Go on with your yarn."

"So Brisson he teach Mees Clarissa to walk on skis in ze morning, and in ze afternoon Rubidoux set ze traps for her and another young man name Peter Garnier some time teach her to shoot ze rifle. Them way Monsieur Brewerton try to gif hees daughter somethings to do that she not be lonely in ze dark Canada woods in ze winter, when everyting covered with snow. She learn to shoot ver' fine and skil ver' fine, and she know how to set trap. One day she kill a bear, anudder day she kill a deer, and in ze traps she catch enough mink dat her fadder say he tak ze skins to Montreal and haf them made into cloak for her."

"How much did he save," asked Silas Hutchins, "on the Montreal price?"

"I dunno. Mees Brewerton want a cloak made of ze skins she trapped with her beautiful hands.

"By there time she go away on her skis and some time long distance. She tak rifle, so daf she see something to shoot she can shoot them, and when she come home somebody go out and bring in what she shoot. Every afternoon she go out in these way to set her traps, and in ze morning she go again to see what she haf caught.

"One day she went out on her skis with her rifle to set her traps and nobody know she haf gone. That was ze day of ze great blizzard. Ze begin to snow at 4 o'clock in ze afternoon, and in half an hour ze flakes come down twisted by ze wind so they make one person dizzy. At 6 o'clock Monsieur Brewerton come in for his supper and ask for his daughter. Then he learn she is out of home and he ver' much scare for he think she go out her traps and not get back for ze storm.

"He call on Antoine Brisson and Edouard Rubidoux and Pierre Garnier and say: 'You go find my daughter. Go by different ways, and whoever brings her home to me I gif him hundred pounds.'

"Then men go outside and Brisson say, 'I go to ze nearest trap.' and Rubidoux say, 'No! I go to ze nearest trap. You go to one of ze odder traps.' And Garnier he say, 'Which trap I go to?' And Brisson say, 'You go to ze third trap.' And Garnier say: 'No! I go to ze second trap. I got more chance to find ze lady.' Then they all talk at once, each man making louder than ze other men, and"—

"Was it snowin' all the time?" asked Hutchins.

"Snow? But snow harder all ze time. Bimeby Brisson he dash off in one direction and ze udders in two different ways, and all disappear in ze whirling snow flakes. Zey all know where ze traps are, and one go to one trap and anudder to anudder. But by these time get grow dark, and get was hard to find ze way. But they all were used to go in ze dark like ze animals, and these does not make so much difference.

"Monsieur Brewerton he walk up and down lak a bear much worried. He 'fraid he not git hees daughter back no more and she freeze to death under ze snow. Nine o'clock come and nobody comes—11 comes, and Garnier he comes and says he find nothings of Mees Clarissa and he fear she freeze to death. At 12 o'clock Rubidoux he come in stiff with ze cold and haf not found ze young lady. Then Monsieur Brewerton he say all my hope is in Antoine Brisson."

"Was he the feller with the curls?" asked Hutchins.

"Hees hair was lak ze wing of ze raven"—

"A raven is the same as a crow, isn't it?" asked Silas.

"You call him crow. Mos' peoples call him crow. Story teller always call him raven.

"Nobody come no more dat night, and Monsieur Brewerton he gif up hees daughter for lost. In ze morning get still snow, and get was not before afternoon zat get stop and ze people make up party to go ze round of Mees Brewerton's traps to find her body and ze body of Antoine Brisson, for zey tink he die too. Zey go to ze first trap and find nothings. Then zey go to ze second and still zey find nothings. Between ze second and ze third there was big drift, and zey had to dig ze snow away to get through. When zey reach ze third trap zey find nothings, but one man say not far from here is deserted cabin. Mebbe Mees Brewerton find her way zare before ze snow comes down too thick.

"Zey all went to where ze cabin was, but zere was nothings but a hill of snow. Then one of ze men gif sudden shout. He see a little smoke come from ze tip top of ze snow hill. Then others see it. Ze chimbly of ze cabin was just below ze snow, and zere must be fire below.

"Zey all climb to ze top of ze snow hill and see a leetle crater lak ze volcano, and in ze crater was ze chimbly top, with ze smoke coming out. Zey call down ze chimney, and ze sweet voice of Clarissa Brewerton replies.

"'Who is it?'

"Zey tell her zey haf come to search for her, and she say yesterday, seeing ze snow come faster and faster and knowing where was ze empty cabin, she went zare, and before ze snow cover ze dead wood on ze ground she pulled out, working till it snow ver' hard, and tak it in ze cabin. But, alas, she haf no way to light a fire. She had hoped to find a match or to strike a spark, but zere was no match, and she could not strike a spark."

"See here, Trudeau," put in Silas, "You've got this yarn into a fix where you can't unravel it. You said the gal made a fire, didn't you? How the dickens was there a fire when she couldn't light it?"

At this interruption Trudeau looked at the matter of fact Yankee triumphantly.

"I come to dat," he said. "Mees Brewerton found nothing in ze cabin to keep her warm, and ze cold grew more and more bitter. She feared to go to sleep, but at last was about to do so when she see man's face look in at ze top of ze window above ze snow. Let [illegible] ski teacher, Antoine Brisson.

"Antoine always carry match to light hees pipe. He hand Clarissa ze box and she light ze fire. She ask Antoine to come in and warm himself. He say no, she must stay zare one, two, mebbe t'ree day. He not compromise her good name by going in. She tell him he die if he not come in. 'Yes,' he say, 'mademoiselle,' he say, 'I die for your sake; I love you so much.'

"Antoine he dig hole in ze snow outside, and we look for him. We find him in ze hole, but ze cold had frozen him. He was dead."

There were exclamations from all the listeners expressive of admiration for this noble act except the Yankee.

"Wasn't he the least bit squeamish?" [illegible]

"No, no. Ef he stay zare Mees Brewerton reputation gone forever."

"How would it have been if there'd been an old woman with 'em, blind and deaf?" said Silas.

No one paid any attention to this satirical reflection on French etiquette, and Trudeau continued.

"When they tell Mees Brewerton dat Antoine was dead she faint. Her reputation was saved, but Antoine had given his life for out. Zey carry her home to her fadder and he was wild with joy to see her. When zey hear ze story of how ze noble Antoine haf given hees life for hees daughter's reputation he weep many tears. Then he say:

"'I gif ze hundred pounds I promised as a reward to saving my daughter to build fine monument to his noble man.'"

"Seems to me," remarked Hutchins, "if I'd been the skil teacher I'd rather have had my life than the monument."

"Ze monument great honor."

"What become o' the girl?" asked Silas.

"Mees Brewerton she go to Montreal with her father. She come here when ze monument was put up and stayed year for long time."

"I guess she'll get over it," was the Yankee's final criticism. "They all do."

CATFISH FURNISHED POWER.

Music Was Necessary to Get Them In Motion.

They got to telling fish stories on the ship on which Billy Morgan was a passenger across the Atlantic. Booth Tarkington, the Indiana novelist, got off a pretty good one about a shark which a captain fed and petted and which finally saved the captain's life by keeping other sharks away from him when he was shipwrecked.

It was a good story until Billy Morgan smiled his way into the little bunch [illegible] began to talk [illegible] the Bowersock herd of dehorned catfish up at the Lawrence dam. It is an old story in Kansas, of course, but it was a long way from home, and Billy had to go into details to make the bunch believe it. And so this is what he told 'em:

"Some years ago Mr. Bowersock, who owns the dam [illegible] furnishes power for the mill and [illegible] factories, conceived the idea that the big Kaw river catfish going through the mill race and on to the water wheel added much to the power generated. Then he read that fish are very sensitive to music. So he hired a man with an accordeon to stand over the mill race and play. The catfish came from up and down stream to hear the music and almost inevitably drifted through the race on to the wheel and increased the power.

"The fishes' horns used to get entangled in the wheel and injure the fish, so Mr. Bowersock, who is a kind hearted man and very persistent, had a lot of the fish caught and dehorned, and in a year or two he had a large herd of hornless catfish. These fish not only turn out to hear the music, but they have learned to enjoy the trip through the mill race and over the wheel, so that every Sunday or oftener whole families of catfish—and they have large families—come to Bowersock's dam to shoot the chutes, something like people go out to ride on the scenic railway.

"Whenever the water in the river gets low Mr. Bowersock has the band play, and the catfish gather and go round and round over the wheel, furnishing power for the Bowersock mill when every other wheel on the river is idle from lack of water."—Kansas City Journal.

For the Children

How Margaret Carnegie Helped the Poor Children.

© 1911, by American Press Association.

A charming little girl who has not been spoiled by riches is little Miss Margaret Carnegie, daughter of the steel magnate.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie lives in the most fashionable street in New York, and between his house and that of his neighbor, Mr. I. T. Burden, there is a vacant lot. Through the kindness of Miss Carnegie this lot has been given over to the Parks and Playgrounds association, and all summer long poor children from the east side looked up at the vine covered windows of the Fifth avenue houses as they romped and played and enjoyed the swings and seesaws that had been provided for them. Mr. Carnegie stipulated only that the lot should be so well guarded that the children could not annoy the residents of the fashionable neighborhood.

Halloween Lore.

Throw a ball of yarn out of your window and rewind it from within, repeating the paternoster backward as you do so, all the while watching the ball. Presently, if you have good luck, you will have a vision of your future husband's face.

Take two long stemmed red roses and intertwine the stems, repeating these lines.

Twine, twine and intertwine,
Let my love be wholly mine.
If his heart be kind and true
Deeper grow the rose's hue.

Look in your glass while combing your hair, at the same time eating an apple and holding a candle in one hand. You must also be alone. If you have good luck you will see your future mate's face peeping over your shoulder in the mirror.

They say that children who are born on Halloween have and retain through their childhood the power to converse with witches, devils and mischief making elves.

The Raisin Race.

One of the jolliest of Halloween games is the raisin race. If you have never tried it don't fail to do so this Halloween.

Take a nice, clean white string a yard long and exactly in the center fasten a raisin. Now take two boys or girls, tie their hands behind them and place an end of the string between each one's teeth. At the word "Go!" each must begin chewing the string "for dear life."

The one chewing fastest will reach the raisin first, provided he is not so unfortunate as to let the string slip from his teeth, an accident which is likely to occur, as his opponent's chewing causes a pulling of the string, which must be carefully guarded against.

The chewer who first reaches the raisin may eat it and will also have great good fortune.

A Halloween Test

A severe test for Halloween is for the entire company of boys and girls to fill their mouths with water and take up an entire handful of salt apiece, then, filing out of doors, walk around the house three times. Those who succeed in doing this without swallowing any water or spilling any salt will find their future mates in the first persons of the opposite sex whom they meet.

LOCATING A MOUNTAIN.

It Took Dr. Merzbacher Two Years to Find the Base of Khantengri.

For two years a curious sort of game was played in that little known region of Chinese Turkestan among the great mountain ranges of Tian Shan. The chief participants of the game, which was of the scientific sort, were Dr. Merzbacher, an Alpinist, and Khantengri, the highest peak of the country.

This part of the world was long enveloped in obscurity, and until Dr. Merzbacher's survey no good maps of it existed. The mountains are wild and picturesque and cover ground four or five times as great as the Alps.

Many of the peaks measure over 20,000 feet in height. Khantengri, the highest of all, exceeds the rest by some 4,000 feet. The region is regarded as very difficult of access, and old Chinese travelers have left many thrilling stories of its dangers.

Khantengri never having been definitely located, Merzbacher undertook the task. For nearly two years he searched before he ... the ... mountain down to ... accuracy. It was a ... game of hide and seek between a man and a mountain, and the curious and interesting part of it all was that often and again the mountain was in plain sight. The route to it, however, was most difficult to trace, and the seeker realized that until he was actually at the mountain's base he could not show its relation to the rest of the range. After months of toil and disappointment the mountain was finally trapped and the riddle solved.—Exchange.

HIGH UP IN A BALLOON.

Effects of the Intense Cold, Rarefied Air and Strong Sunshine.

Drs. Stoyrer and Fleming, who made a prolonged ascent in the ... Berlin, conducted a series of experiments at great altitudes with special reference to the physiological effects of exposure to intense cold and to hot sun rays in extremely rarefied air.

Both professors were equipped with oxygen masks. At a height of 16,500 feet they were obliged to inhale oxygen at intervals of from one to two minutes; otherwise they suffered from headache, heart palpitations and defective respiration. As they reached greater heights these symptoms increased and oxygen had to be more frequently inhaled. At a height of between 25,000 and 27,000 feet Fleming fainted on removing the mask for an instant.

The effects of strong sunshine, intense cold and insufficiency of air gave the face a terrifying aspect, but the aeronauts felt apathy rather than any severe pains. Another effect was a feeling of cramp in the muscles.

The sun's rays acting in the rarefied air produced a swelling and reddening of the skin, accompanied by fever, and these symptoms reached their height forty-eight hours after the descent.

Among the experiments made was a test for the presence of micro-organisms. Of three tests, the highest made at 15,000 feet showed micro-organisms in the small proportion of from ... to ... a liter ... of air. The fourth test was made at an elevation of nearly 27,000 feet and revealed no germs.—Harper's Weekly.

Tubular Coiled Springs.

Tubular coiled springs have been made by a French engineer, François Renault, and have given quite astonishing results. A Paris laboratory tested two steel springs of exactly the same appearance, one of solid wire and the other of tubing with a wall a twenty-fifth of an inch thick. A pull of 660 pounds stretched the tubular spring nearly three inches, the solid spring yielding less than one and one-half inches, and the permanent deformation of the tubular spring was only one-twenty-fifth of an inch, while a stretch of two and one-half inches left the solid spring permanently lengthened one-quarter of an inch. Besides being more flexible, the tubular spring is much stronger for the weight.

Milady's Mirror

Aids to Beauty

Falling of the chin, or sagging chin muscles, is one of beauty's surest enemies. The woman with a double chin has small chance of conveying an impression of freshness and youth.

One of the surest ways of correcting this tendency is to study chin poses in the mirror. Pull the chin up and thrust it out so that the disfiguring fat is eliminated, then drop the chin on the chest, exaggerating the fault. By so doing a definite idea of the value of chin elevation will be gained.

With this practical demonstration in mind, practice carrying the chin high, but not thrust forward. Draw the muscles taut and hold them so and develop the practice into a habit, which will soon become a natural pose.

When drying the face or massaging it with any kind of cream or lotion make the hands into a V-shaped trough by placing the base of the palms together ... and passing the hands gently and firmly up each side of the face to the temples. Repeat this motion at least half a dozen times a day and the excess fullness will gradually disappear. Never use downward motions in massaging any of the facial muscles. Always upward. The tendency of these muscles is to fall, and downward pressure hastens this process. Pushing them upward keeps the cheeks full and prevents ... the ... marks of age from appearing ...

Pinning a firm bandage of muslin tightly about the head so that there will be a firm pressure under the chin during the night is a harmless and efficient aid to the foregoing treatment.

The collarless dress reveals the disfiguring creases and wrinkles in the neck. These should be massaged regularly with a good cold cream, as they are quite as undesirable and quite as telltale as the age lines on the face.

Wash Your Own Hair.

If you are accustomed to having your hair shampooed try doing it yourself so that you may reap the benefit of an out of door sun drying. A half hour of fresh air and sunlight will do more to stimulate the growth of the hair and bring out its natural color and luster than any amount of tonic. Many women go an entire year without taking advantage of nature's own remedy for lusterless, stubborn hair. A pure soap, a vigorous rubbing, careful rinsing so that no soap remains in the hair and a drying in the ... rays of the sun are ... to every woman. Allow ... to become thoroughly dry ... the ... comb ... for at least ... the strands ... the sunshine filter through. Do not dress the hair for a half hour after it is brushed out, but let it hang loose about the shoulders.

Sleep the Fountain of Youth.

Any number of women who are cutting ruthlessly into their allowance to swell the cash drawer of the beauty parlors could solve the riddle of appearing fresh and animated if they would but make a practice of taking the proper amount of sleep.

The value of sleep as a restorative and as a fountain of youth is unbelievable until one has bathed regularly therein. It almost seems magic in its effect, and many a woman who has discovered the secret is the envy and admiration of her twenty partner friends.

Eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep and eight for play is the old rule. Up to now no one has improved on this proportion. If you care more for the preservation of your youth and attractiveness than of your pleasure take not less than the allotted eight hours of sleep from the twenty-four.

Lovers of Western Life have a treat in store for them on Friday, Jan 5th at the Royal George theatre. Manager Stiles has secured one of the best attractions ever billed through this country "A Cowboy's Girl" This is the only Western play touring this season. The story is taken from the plains of Texas and contains many thrilling and dramatic situations, lots of humor all through the Three Acts a story of deep heart interest. The company is headed by Miss Ann Phillips, who is supported by a strong cast of players. Popular Prices, 50, 75 and $1.00 The play is bound to draw a crowded house and tickets can be secured at Long's Drug Store.

The Christmas holidays passed off quietly. For the week preceding, business was reported good and would unquestionably have been much better were it not for the prevailing cold weather. Several dinner parties were held. New Year's day was marked by a hard fought hockey match between the old rivals, Mannville and Vermilion, the score ending 2 to 1 in favor of the home team. The game brought out some very good exhibitions of hockey although there was a tendency throughout to indulge in more slashing than was necessary. In the evening the Social club were at home in the Royal George theatre. There was about 100 people present and dancing was continued until after midnight.

THOMPSON—On the 27th inst., at Royal Jubilee Hospital, Emily Gertrude, beloved wife of Mr. W. F. H. Thompson, late of Vermilion, Alberta, aged 66 years. Born, Horkstow, Lincolnshire, England. The funeral will take place on Saturday, at 2.30 p.m. from the chapel of the B. C. Funeral Furnishing Co., Government St., where service will be conducted. Interment in Ross Bay Cemetery, Victoria, B. C.

F. G. Miller, who for some years past has been an able member of the staff of Stephens Brothers Limited, left last week for Owen Sound, where he will enter Collegiate preparatory to taking a course in medicine at McGill University. Before leaving Mr. Miller was presented with an address by the members of the Church of Christ of which he was an active and esteemed worker and was the recipient from the staff of Stephens Brothers Limited of a handsome suit case and travelling bag. The best wishes for success follow Mr. Miller in his chosen profession.

A farmer named Stover, living at Lamberville, was arrested last Friday by constable McPhail on the charge of arson. The crime is alleged to have been committed a few months ago when two stacks of hay, the property of one Chris Andersen of that place were burned. Constable McPhail had been working on the case for a few weeks when developments finally warranted him in placing Stover under arrest. The preliminary hearing took place Saturday before justice Barker at Vermilion and after a large number of witnesses had testified for the prosecution, the accused was committed to stand his trial and conveyed that night to Fort Saskatchewan. At the preliminary the Crown was represented by N. Murray and the accused by J. W. G. Morrison.

An Excellent Stomach Remedy

Mrs. J. M. Whyte, Killarney, Manitoba, who says "I have found great comfort and relief from Mi-o-na. I had been greatly troubled for months with heartburn and a heavy burning feeling in my stomach. A few meals would disturb me so much that I would have to sit up at night — the food would sour on my stomach and form a gas which would cause belching and dizzy spells. These distressing troubles disappeared after using Mi-o-na and I shall always speak highly of this excellent stomach remedy."

Mi-o-na is the best prescription for stomach trouble ever written. It gives quick relief and cures permanently. Mi-o-na is put up in tablet form and is small and easy to swallow. Sold by leading druggists everywhere 50 cents, with a guarantee to cure or refund your money or postpaid from The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. You will search the world over and not find a stomach remedy half as good as Mi-o-na. Sold and guaranteed by F. C. Long

MAY IRWIN

Canada's Favorite Comedienne.

One of the leading comediennes of the American stage to-day is May Irwin, a daughter of Canada. In these days of those plays with their dull dreary pessimism; of problem plays portraying the mental pathology of the emotions; of society plays with their whipped cream of bored epigram on the pulpy base of a thin plot; and of melodrama that puts a dime novel into the dramatic of sensationalism it is a relief to turn to something that gives us a hearty wholesome laugh and leaves no bad flavor in the mouth, no ... regret. Laughter is one of the safety valves of civilization, ... in an age of strenuous living; and a genuine apostle of laughter is May Irwin.

Her power is her personality, her naturalness, her spontaneity; her bubbling contagious good spirits establishing a telepathic sympathy with her audience which creates a continuous ripple of fun and laughter that defies analysis.

BINGS' BARGAIN

And the Way He Turned His Purchase to Account.

By LAURA ALTON PAYNE.

"What dat, Bings?" cooed the dimpled cherub, patting the bald spot that spread like a small shining desert in an oasis of thick blond hair on Bings' well shaped head.

Whitlock grinned.

"Mamma's pet mustn't be naughty," said the pretty widow, turning her brown eyes apologetically on Bings. "Come to mamma, dearie. Mr. Bings isn't used to babies."

But the dimpled cherub, otherwise Baby Moffatt, who had purposely and after many backslidings climbed upon the rustic seat occupied by Bings, for whom she had evinced a decided partiality from the start, only snuggled the closer to the secretly delighted Bings and cooed, "Baby 'ove Bings," then as a happy afterthought, "Mamma 'ove Bings," at which frank and wholly unexpected revelation of her small daughter the pretty widow's face rivaled Bings'.

Whitlock guffawed. "Now's your chance, Bings," he urged, with malicious levity at his rival's discomfiture. But Bings, with a hasty adieu, fled, leaving the cherub disconsolate.

Bings metaphorically kicked himself all the way home for not taking advantage of the best opportunity he had ever had, even if it was before the sneering Whitlock, and for his cowardly desertion of the pretty widow to Whitlock's caustic raillery.

Bings paused at his own gate and gazed miserably at the big silent house. He shut his eyes a moment and imagined he saw the pretty widow and the cherub sitting on the front porch. It was a blissful vision, but Bings felt that it would never become a blissful reality unless a miracle happened.

Bings was a bachelor. Bings was big and blond and bald. Bings was bashful—in fact, Bings was a whole swarm of "B's." He narrowly escaped being a beauty with his baby complexion and innocent blue eyes. His size was the only thing that saved him from this terrible fate. Moreover, Bings was a bargain fiend. No woman could scent a bargain sale farther off than could Billy Bings. Incidentally Billy was the climax to Bings' woes. But no persuasion on his part could convince his friends of the absurdity of calling a six footer Billy.

Bings' bachelorhood was a condition of neither birth nor achievement—it was thrust upon him. During his evolution into that state there had been any one of a dozen maids and widows that Bings would have been only too happy to have endowed with half his worldly goods but for his excessive bashfulness. Never yet had he been able to screw his courage up to the point of proposal, though he had made almost superhuman efforts in that direction.

This seemed a pity, for Bings was undeniably cut out for a benedict. He thought all women angels and all babies cherubs.

As he started uptown on the momentous morning after his precipitate flight Bings had a particular cherub in mind—a pretty, brown eyed, dimpled cherub that he would have given half ...

... bought a perambulator? Bings wiped his perspiring brow and glared defiantly around.

"Why, Billy Bings!" cried a laughing feminine voice at his elbow. "What do you want with a perambulator?"

Bings' exasperated gaze encountered that of Mrs. Marston, a merry faced woman. By her side stood the pretty widow with the coveted cherub clinging to her hand.

Bings turned fiery red and caught wildly at his hat, or where he supposed it to be, only to find that he was fanning himself with it. Making an embarrassed bow, he began to mop his perspiring face violently.

"Here's yer p'ramb'lat'r," said Sam laconically, pausing in front of Bings. Bings turned fascinated eyes on the thing, which seemed to him to have greatly increased in size during its progress from the auctioneer's stand.

"And a baby's high chair," announced another laughing voice as the speaker craned forward and inspected Bings' barricade.

There was a general craning of necks.

"And a little red rocker," exclaimed another.

"A doll—and a doll carriage."

"A child's cot."

"Footstool, workbasket, sewing chair and sewing machine," enumerated Whitlock, pushing nearer. "Great Jupiter, Bings! What does this mean?" with mock severity.

Poor Bings thanked his stars that none of them knew of that cradle in the attic, the result of a former aberration. He gazed helplessly around at his tormentors, then at his barricade. What on earth had induced him to bid in all that stuff?

He had made himself so ridiculous in her eyes he'd not stand a ghost of a show now. The only thing left for him to do was to make his escape as best he could.

Bings glanced furtively around, but all avenues were closed by laughing faces. He grew desperate. Just as he was contemplating a dash for liberty along the line of the least resistance the miracle that he had been so skeptical about happened.

A fractious horse, a woman's scream, a scene of confusion, and when Bings came to he found his arms around the pretty widow, who was clasping the pretty cherub to her breast and sobbing hysterically on his shoulder: "Oh, Billy—dear, dear Billy! Save me, save me!"

At these inspiring words Bings' courage rose to the occasion, his bashfulness slipping from him like a cloak. Before the astonished eyes of the whole staring crowd he bent and kissed the pretty widow and the dimpled cherub.

"There, there, sweetheart," he said soothingly, "the danger is past." Then turning to the gaping crowd, Bings lied magnificently.

"I was just going to explain," said he, "when that confounded horse interfered that I bought these things for my wife and child. The fact is"—

"Mr. Bings!" protested a shocked but smothered voice.

"Mrs. Moffatt and I expect to be married just a week from today, and I take this occasion to invite"—

"Billy Bings! How dare you?"

—"the whole crowd to attend. The fact is"—the sight of Whitlock's amused and wholly skeptical countenance stimulated Bings to greater invention—"we would have announced our engagement sooner but for certain unforeseen circumstances that—er—caused us to—er—await a more propitious time. But"—

"Oh, Billy, hush"—

—"after next Thursday we'll all be at home to our friends. You all know the way to the Elms, where you'll always find"—

"Oh, Billy, dear!

"A welcome."

TAMED THE MOROS.

A Ceremony That Forced Them to Stop Running Amuck.

Moro zealots do not run amuck so frequently as they used to do, largely because of a plan conceived by Lieutenant Miller, a volunteer officer from Chicago, described in the New York Tribune. When Datto Cali was killed in running amuck against a group of soldiers his body was buried with a degree of ceremony which greatly pleased the natives and correspondingly depressed the American soldiers. The denouement is thus described: "Two American soldiers with a pig between them approached the open grave of the Moro chief. They stood immediately over it with the pig between them. One drew out a sharp knife and slit the animal's throat. The blood of it gushed into the grave and upon the remains of the dead chief. His body must have been covered with this blood. He was made vilely unclean. His ascent into heaven was made a thing unthinkable. There was but one place in the hereafter to which these people could confine one so defiled. He would forever remain in the vilest of hell.

"The natives slunk away, sickened and disheartened. The framework of their fanatical self sacrifice had been cut away from beneath them at a single blow. Their old practices would no longer exalt them. To those who ran amuck and killed there awaited not the seventh heaven, but the uttermost hell. The occasion for the sacrifice was removed. Its rewards were taken away. It ceased to be.

"As far as is known the incident of the pig occurred but once in the campaign among the Moros. With that one occurrence the practice of running amuck almost disappeared. There has been an occasional cropping out of the practice. These have mostly been in the outlying provinces, to which the tale of the American method of battling with the practice has not penetrated."

AMENDING THE CALENDAR.

Changes That Are Now Under Consideration in England

There will be no need for children to learn wearisome lines regarding the number of days in the months if Mr. R. Pearce's bill in parliament for the reform of the calendar becomes law. Then the first two months of every quarter will have thirty days and the last month thirty-one, while each quarter will have exactly the same number of days.

There will be only 364 days in the year, as New Year's day will not be reckoned. It will be a bank holiday, and the next day will be the 1st of January. There will be another bank holiday every four years which will not be reckoned either. This leap year day will come after the last day in June and will be followed by the 1st of July.

These small changes will simplify the calendar in a wonderful way, as Christmas day will always fall on a Monday. Thus a person's birthday will always be on the same day of the week as he was born, so far as regards those born after 1911.

The only difficulty about the arrangement is that persons who have been born on certain days under the old style apparently will never have birthdays. They can console themselves that they will never grow older. Thus there will be no 31st of January, as January and February will have thirty days each.

After this year movable days will come to an end. Easter Sunday will always be on the 14th of April, and the days depending on it will be fixed accordingly.—Pearson's Weekly.

GETTING RID OF A PEST.

How Vermont Has Found Means of Fighting Witch or Quack Grass.

Witch grass or quack grass (Agropyron repens) is one of the worst weeds, by many deemed the worst, found in Vermont tillage areas. The combat therewith is difficult, but not unwinnable. It is costly, but less so than to permit the unrestricted growth of the weed. The Vermont agricultural experiment station learned that a Windsor county farmer had succeeded in practically eradicating it from his farm by the employment of a special system of soil tillage or cultivation which was essentially the product of his own observations. A season's work by the station resulted in almost annihilating the pest on the trial plots and in producing enough crop over and above that grown on the untreated areas to pay in some cases the entire cost of the extra labor involved. The complete eradication of the weed often involves two successive seasons' work, the second of which is of the same character as the ...

What One Canadian Railway is Doing For Canada

The Canadian Pacific Railway is a system as unique as it is practical. It is the only Railway in Canada, or on the American Continent for that matter, which considers the decoration of its lines. Away up in Alberta the Irrigation Department is making the barren spots of earth to blossom as the rose, and a Forestry Department in Winnipeg is endeavoring to coax the Western people to plant a tree. Here and there throughout this longlinked system this wonderful Railway is establishing [illegible] experimental vegetable and fruit farms, and the experimenters are the hard worked agents and sectionmen, as well as the locomotive foremen on the working staff.

In Montreal, at the headquarters within the Windsor Station, the space for a Floral Department is occupied by a busy staff of willing workers whose duty it is to distribute flower seeds throughout the length and breadth of the line.

Last year more than one hundred thousand packages of seeds and bulbs were sent out by this Department. Thirty-six different varieties of bloom are included, and a "Prize Garden" has been established, enabling the busy workers along the line to turn the leisure moments of their labors into the cultivation of flowers and gardens. The prizes offered by the Company are cash in kind, and each year the competition grows keener.

On the Atlantic Division in 1911 the grand prize ($25) was won by A. Wright, of Woodstock, N.B., D.J. Steele of Sherbrooke, Que., was also a grand prize winner; J. A. Nicol of Rossport, Ont. (Lake Superior Division) carried off honors, and the Pacific honors were upheld by Mr. Froese of Portage la Prairie, whose garden beat everything in sight. In Agassiz, B. C., it was a woman who beat former records, for Mrs. Lovell, wife of the Section Foreman at that point, carried off the Fifty Dollars in gold. The C. P. R. [illegible] attracting world wide attention.

B. C. PRIZE POTATOES

Best Potatoes Grown in America Now Served on C.P.R. Dining Cars.

Travellers on the Transcontinental trains of the Canadian Pacific Railway are now being served in the dining cars of the Company, with British Columbia Championship Baked Potatoes. As an aftermath to the recent big land show at New York where the province of British Columbia won first prize in the competition for the best potatoes grown in America, the Canadian Pacific sent agents to the districts where the prize potatoes were grown and brought up all the championship variety of "Marpigo" that they could secure.

The C.P.R. intends to make a speciality of this potato on its dining cars. Other railways are able to serve big potatoes but they cannot secure British Columbia potatoes as the C.P. Ry. has a monopoly in this line. Already inserts for the regular menu cards have been printed in which the Championship baked potatoe occupies the place of honor on the "Ready to Serve" list.

A Natural Mistake

A little girl was rather given to exaggerating and would tell wild stories of her adventures, for which she was duly punished on the grounds of telling naughty stories.

One day after her walk in the park she ran to her mother, exclaiming "Oh, mummy, as nurse and I were walking in the park a big lion sprang out and would have eaten me up if nurse had not pulled me aside."

"You naughty child!" said her mother. "Go to your room and stay there until you are sorry for telling such wicked stories, and ask your good angel to forgive you for telling such a naughty story about the lion."

The Quickest Cough Cure—Cheap, But Unequaled

Sixteen Ounces of it for 50c. Saves You $2. Does the Work Quickly or Money Refunded.

For quick, positive results the 16 ounces of cough syrup that you make with a 50-cent bottle of Pinex, cannot be equaled. It takes hold instantly and will usually stop the most obstinate deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Even croup and whooping cough yield to it quickly.

The user of Pinex mixes it with home-made sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of better cough remedy than you could buy ready mixed for $2.00. Easily prepared in five minutes—full directions in package.

Pinex soothes and heals the inflamed membranes with remarkable rapidity. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and tastes good—children like it. Excellent for hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, and has a wonderful record in cases of incipient lung trouble.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"I ordered some material a week ago to be cut and it hasn't come yet. May I ask why?"

"We have waited for you to come in and change your mind, madam, before disfiguring the cloth."

"I found 50 cents this morning," confided Jimmy.

"Found a whole half dollar!" cried his mother. "How fine! What did you do with it?"

"Pete Jones was along, so I gave him half."

"You dear, generous boy! Did you do that of your own accord?"

"Yessum—well, we decided that would be right."

"Jimmy! He didn't whip you and make you give up half?"

QUICK RELIEF FROM THAT PERSISTENT, RACKING COUGH

We mean the kind of cough it gives one a mild shiver just to hear—the dry, deep-seated hack—hack—hack it seems as if it were tearing the very vitals. That's the kind of cough that means business.

Fortunately though that is also one of the kinds of coughs that Nyal's Pine Co Syrup is! Loosed, liquefies and clears away the phlegm, relaxed and irritated membranes, and gives you a good, prompt night's rest.

Nyal's Pine Co Syrup is a real pine syrup, containing the curative principles of pine, and is blended with other ingredients that make it so pleasant to take that children like it. Nyal's Pine Co Syrup is a real cough medicine—one that you can depend upon to relieve your cough quickly and safely.

Nyal's Pine Co Syrup is sold by druggists everywhere. Ask your druggist about it.

RASH SO BAD BABY CAME NEAR DYING

Head Broke Out, Spread to Arms, Legs and Entire Body. Itched So He Would Scratch Until Blood Was. One Box of Cuticura Ointment and Nearly One Cake of Cuticura Soap Cured Him. Has Had No Return.

"When my boy was two years old his head broke out with a rash. It spread to his arms and legs and in a couple of days to his entire body. He itched so that he would scratch until the blood came. He was restless and could not sleep. We had to put mittens on his hands to keep him from scratching himself. We had two doctors attend him, but he got worse. He was in bed all the time and we thought he would die. Our druggist recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and nearly one box of Cuticura Ointment he was entirely cured. That was over a year ago and he has had no return of the trouble. (Signed) Mrs. Wm. Hubbard, Box 1, Bridgeport, N. J., Feb. 19, 1910.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address: Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 28, Boston, U. S. A.

GRIPPE LEFT HIM A CONFIRMED INVALID

BUT HE FOUND A CURE IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Gustav Postlewaite was confined to bed when he started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills—They cured him.

Quebec Postmaster P. Tippins, of Quebec, Postmaster P. Tippins, of Quebec, writes: "I was confined to my room for some weeks at an invalid, and part of the time to my bed. I had la grippe, and it left me a confirmed invalid, up and around again, a bad wreck. I took Dodd's Kidney Pills and after using three boxes I was entirely cured."

Mrs. Langworth writes from an attack of grippe that the Postmaster says is the worst he has ever had. He was confined to his bed and I suffered following with a bad cold. I had been troubled with kidney complaint for some time. I began to feel better, so I bought a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Before I was able to get up, and after using two boxes I was cured.

The principal danger of Grippe is the after effects. The way to guard against this is to strengthen the Kidneys and they will do the work. Dodd's Kidney Pills are always the best remedy for all forms of Kidney Disease.

"Mother," said Gladys Pelmdexter, daughter of Sir John and Lady Pelmdexter, "there are two things I am wearing me out. The season has so furnished that we should be spending £3000 a year and we are spending £5,000."

"But, my dear, if we returned we shall lose a social position that has been the family's right for 200 years."

At that moment Lord Toppington's card came up.

Lord Toppington was a typical London swell. As he entered, seeing Gladys, he had the audacity to ask his displeasure at her daughter's presence and made an excuse to send her from the room. Lord Toppington then told himself and said:

"Lady Pelmdexter, I come in the interest of a young American who has recently arrived in London with a desire to enter the peerage. I have been applied to me to secure an entrance for him, and I am interested to do what I can in the matter. He gives a dinner on Wednesday evening next, under her direction. I will buy shares in Sir John's—"

"I have not the slightest objection," said Lady Pelmdexter, "and I am sure my husband will be only too glad to do so."

Lord Toppington then left.

"They must have ... it out long ago. That's why they've got Pensley forcing this old tub. She's doing 10 knots, and that's a tremendous speed for her. Once we're through the straits I'll be satisfied."

"What will happen to Fraser?" she queried.

"Nothing serious, I am sure. You see, they wanted me and nobody else. Once they find they have the wrong man, I rather believe they will free him in disgust."

A moment later he went on: "Just the same, it makes me feel depressed and guilty to leave him. I wouldn't desert a comrade for anything if the choice lay with me."

"You did quite right," Cherry warmly assured him.

"You see, I am not working for myself. I am doing this for another."

It was the girl's turn to sigh softly, while the eyes she turned toward the west were strangely sad and dreamy.

"Two hours more," he told her as the ship's bell sounded, "then I can eat and sleep and long."

Captain Pensley was pacing the bridge when later her company ... the glare of Port Townsend and saw in the distance the flash of ... of the forts that guard the straits ...

The ... launch sheered off, and the ... of her exhaust grew rapidly fainter and fainter. But not until it had wholly ceased did Big George give over his post at the wheel. Even then he went down the ladder reluctantly and without a word of thanks, of ... or of apology. With him this had been but a part of the day's work. He saw neither sentiment nor humor in the episode.

* * * * * * *

From the crow's nest of the Bedford Castle a week later the lookout stared down upon a white expanse that stretched beyond the horizon. At dawn they began their careful search, feeling their way eastward through the open leads and tortuous passages that separated the floes, now laying to for the northward set of the fields to clear a path before them, now stealing through some narrow lead that opened into freer waters.

Captain Pensley did all the navigating in person, but eventually they were hemmed in so closely that for a day and a night they could do nothing but drift with the pack. In time, however, the winds opened a crevice through which they retreated to follow the outer limits farther eastward until they were halted again.

Late one evening they discovered smoke on the horizon, and the next morning a light showed a three masted steamship fast in the ice a few miles to the westward.

"That's the Juliet," Big George informed his companions, "one of the North American Packers' association tenders."

"She was loading when we left Seattle," Lloyd remarked.

"It is Willie Marsh's ship, so he must be aboard," supplemented Cherry. "She's a wooden ship and built for this business. If we don't look out he'll beat us in after all."

"What good will that do him?" Clyde questioned. "The fish don't bite ..."

"No, madam; I am not a poet," declared the colonel contemptuously.

"But surely," exclaimed the gushing young girl at his side, "you ad mire the flights of genius?"

"Certainly not! I don't admire flights of any kind!" retorted the brave colonel. "Would I be in the army if I did?"

She gave him a despairing glance. How disappointing he was! And how truly unromantic these military men were!

"Would you never be thrilled, colonel," she asked, making a final appeal, "by such verses as this? It is out of 'The Day is Done,' you know: 'Listen! And all the night shall be filled with music, and the cares which infest the day shall fold their tents, like the Arabs, and as silently steal away.'"

"By Jove! (those poets do occasionally hit the mark, after all!" exclaimed the colonel, waking up suddenly. "Don't I know those Arabs? Why, the beggars would steal anything!"

Nerves Are Exhausted

And Nervous Prostration or Paralysis Are Creeping Steadily Upon You

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

You hear of people suddenly falling victims of nervous prostration or some form of paralysis. But when you get all the facts of the case you find they have had months or years of warning.

They haven't slept well. There has been frequent attacks of nervous headache. Digestion has failed. They have been irritable, easily worried and excited and have found memory and concentration failing.

Had they but known that these symptoms tell of exhausted nerves and had they realized their danger they would have restored their feeble wasted nerves by use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great restorative treatment cures by forming new rich blood and by rebuilding the wasted nerve cells. No medicine is more certain to prove beneficial, for each dose adds to the system a certain amount of rich red blood.

Nervous disease comes on slowly and ... overcome by patient and persistent treatment. Prevention is always better than cure and for this reason you should always endeavor to keep the system at high water mark by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food at the first sign of trouble. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Protection of Forests

An interview with an engineer given recently in a western paper to the effect that there is abundant timber on the line of the Hudson Bay Railway is an illustration of the misapprehension in regard to the matter that exists in the public mind. Because there are large areas of land in the north on which there is timber of some kind the conclusion is reached that it is all of present value and that the country has an unlimited supply. As a matter of fact a careful inspection of the timber along the line of the Hudson Bay Railway made in the years 1910 and 1911, by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior, shows that there is not enough ...

LUMBER WASTE FOR PULPWOOD

Practical Economy and Utilization of Wood Waste is Urged by Forestry Department

For the purpose of manufacturing the four hundred and seventy-five thousand tons of wood pulp produced in Canada in 1910 nothing was used except logs of various species, which as our timber supply decreases are becoming valuable for lumber and other uses. No slabs or other sawmill waste was reported as being converted into wood pulp, by neglecting which practice, Canada is losing greatly. During 1909 in the United States six per cent of the total pulpwood consumption was from slabs and mill trimmings. If economy had been practiced to the same extent in Canada during the year 1910, as much pulp might have been produced as from thirty-six thousand cords of wood and not one pulp log need have been cut. This would have made twenty per cent more pulp than Nova Scotia produced in 1910.

Looking at the subject from another view point the gain might have been much greater. Over one-half of the five billion feet of lumber cut in 1910 passed through mills at centres of large population where the slab waste of one-half cord to every thousand feet of lumber might have been saved from the incinerators. One cord of pulpwood will produce at least one-half ton of pulp so that one and a quarter million cords of slabs obtained would have produced at the lowest estimate six hundred and twenty five thousand tons of pulp produced in Canada in 1910. The sooner such practical economy and utilization of wood waste commences the longer will Canada have an adequate supply of pulpwood.

Little Dots Want Homes

The Department of Neglected Children are anxious to secure homes for the following children:

A little girl aged six years has been badly neglected by her parents and removed on Court's order. The child is a particularly attractive little girl with fair hair and brown eyes. A little boy aged one year; bright looking, normal child. A little boy aged four years, brother of the above child. Also home for a little girl aged nine years; a little boy aged ten years; good looking, husky boy who will make a good man. This boy is ruddy complexioned, dark haired. Infant girl aged three months. Infant boy aged six weeks, normal attractive child.

The above children are all protestant and require protestant homes. Homes, however, are required for the following Catholic children:

Little girl aged eight years; attractive child. Little boy aged [illegible] years, nice looking child with fair hair. Little boy aged six years; strong, husky boy, should have a good future ahead of him. Little girl aged nine years; strong husky girl with plenty of play spirit.

Applications for these children should be sent to the Superintendent of Neglected Children, Edmonton. In view of the fact that as a rule there are more applications than children, this is a good opportunity to secure one of these children.

The Race

I WHIPPED that hoss in fair fight, an' then I went to to see how Jabez was getting along. I said a fair fight an' I meant a fair fight. Yes, there's a way to fight a hoss fair, that is, as fair as any fight is. If you look at it one way, there can't never be a fair fight, 'cause one is bound to have an advantage with lack experience or courage, but what I mean is, that I fought that hoss with nothing but just my own hands an' I whipped him.

Why the way I did it was this. As soon as they slacked off the ropes I slipped up beside him an' jumped over his back an' we two stood alone in the bag [illegible] same thing, an' that we'd neither of us mention it, an' that it wouldn't ever weigh an ounce in whatever happened to come between us. I didn't say any thing.

[illegible]

"What makes you humor her in everything for?" sez he.

"As far as I know she ain't my child," sez I.

He give a start an' it made him green. "What's the matter with your leg?" sez I.

"It's broke," he yells. "Do you think I got it stuck up on pillers 'cause my feet's asleep?"

"Is it easy that way?" sez I.

"No it ain't," he snaps.

long time," an' she shut the door without slammin' it.

"Oh, I don't reckon it's allus someone else's fault," I sez, after he had got through cussin' about his luck.

"Am I a hard man to work for?" sez he.

"You ain't," sez I.

"When am I ever unjust?" sez he.

"When you go off half-cock," sez I.

"What is it allus about?" sez he.

I thought over everything before I answered. "Why, it's allus about the child Barbie."

"I ain't 'Cast Steel' about her. I'm spring steel where she's concerned, an' you fellers ought to know the way spring steel works if any one does."

"That's all right," sez I. I was still smartin' a little. "But the deuce of the thing is that you go off at half cock, an' then you allus expect the other feller to pay the damage. It's goin' hard with you some day, Jabez, if you don't watch closer."

"Oh, you can't understand it. If you only knew what lots an' disobedience sometimes does you wouldn't talk so calm about it neither. There ain't nothin' I wouldn't do for Barbie—except see her get started wrong. You're different from the rest, some way, an' she thinks more of you than the others. That's one reason why I give you a wider circle to range in an' why I give you foreman's pay for odd job work."

"Now if you think 'at I don't earn all you're payin' me," sez I—but he broke in: "If I didn't think I wouldn't pay it," sez he.

"I can go down to the Lazy Head any time I want an' get more'n you're payin' me," sez I.

"I can pay you as much as any man in the West," sez he.

"Last time I come back I was a day late," sez Flappy. "He fair frothed at the mouth at it, an' made me promise to give him a month's notice next time. How's a man to know a month ahead when he's goin' to be in the notion for a bender? I'm fair ravin' for it now, but like's not I'll be all out o' the notion in a month."

"Then you'll be a sight o' money ahead," sez I.

"Money? What's money for? Can you buy a thirst like mine with money? Why, I could take this thirst o' mine to a city an' get independent rich, just rentin' it out by the night. I've watched fellers drinkin' when they didn't crave it, an' it hurt 'em something dreadful. If you don't want it, you can't enjoy it until you're under the influence of it, an' after you're under the influence of it half the fun o' drinkin' is gone."

Flappy had studied this question more'n any other man I ever see, an' it was edicatin' to hear him lecture on it. "The only one way to get around ol' 'Cast Steel,'" sez I, wishin', so he got Barbie to beg for him when she went in that evenin', an' she got Jabez to let him go next day, but after Jabez 'd had time to think it over, he sez to me, "Now see what I've done. I've let that child wheedle me into changin' my mind an' lettin' a man break his word."

"Well, he needed it mighty bad," sez I.

"An' another thing, it ain't no fit thing for a gal child to be beggin' for a man to go get drunk," sez Jabez.

"Maybe not," sez I, "but he sure needed it."

The Letter

It all came about through me bein' edicated. Most any one can read print words if they're of reasonable size—the words I mean—but I could read [illegible] superb yellow brocade ball-room with enormous doors in solid dark mahogany.

Lady Naylor Leyland's mansion, Hyde Park House, is a veritable palace. The ball room is said to be the finest in London. Divided into three parts by stately fluted columns, its originality consists in being entirely in pure white, lighted by gorgeous Venetian chandeliers in pale colored glass.

THE CHAMELEON SPIDER

Every traveller that returns from tropical regions has extraordinary stories to tell of the strange mimicry of leaves and flowers by insects. Sometimes the purpose of the imitation seems to be concealment, and sometimes the laying of a snare to catch other insects. A curious instance of this was noticed on the Gold Coast of Africa by a member of a British scientific expedition when he stopped to examine a singular-looking white flower with a blue centre.

He found to his astonishment that it was not a flower at all, but a spider's web, and that the supposed light blue heart of the flower was the spider itself lying in wait for its prey. The legs of the cunning spider, yellow mottled with brown, were extended in such a way as to resemble the divisions between the petals of the flower.

The web itself very delicately woven into a rosette pattern was white, and the threads that suspended it from the bushes were so fine as to be almost invisible. The whole thing had the appearance of being suspended in the air upon a stem concealed beneath.

When the scientist knocked the spider from its perch into a white gauze net his surprise was increased upon seeing his captive instantly turn from blue to white. Its former mimicry had been practised as a snare, now it was playing a similar game for the sake of concealment.

[illegible]

Mary C. Beach, Washington, District of Columbia; Mrs. Elmer Black, New York City; Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Gloucester, Massachusetts.

Governors Wilson, of New Jersey, Baldwin of Connecticut, Kitchin of North Carolina, and Bass of New Hampshire, have taken especial interest in the movement. The Legislatures of New Jersey, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Pennsylvania have appointed committees to co-operate with the national committee, which, by the way, has now a membership of eight hundred and will have ultimately a membership of ten thousand. John Hays Hammond, special ambassador to the Court of St. James' for the coronation of King George V. will serve as a promoter of the cause in England, while Bernard H. Baker who gave the hospital ship Maine to Great Britain, and William B. Howland will serve in other countries. These representatives will tell our hundred peoples how welcome they will be if they will come to New York this winter to arrange first, for the establishment of an international committee which shall give direction to the preparation for the celebration in 1914-15, and, secondly, which shall have charge of the organization movement throughout the world. It is proposed that through this international committee the various local committees shall keep in touch and co-operate in the general work. There will also be discussed the question as to what such a committee can do aside from the preparation of the programme of celebration for the cause of peace.

While the national committee is composed of private individuals, yet it is hoped that after the international committee is organized the governments of all the English-speaking peoples will co-operate in the celebration.

Many suggestions have been made to the committee as to what should be the nature of the celebration. Among [illegible]

Dental Decay

(By A. Gilmour, M.D., D.P.H.)

Among the many and profound changes witnessed in the science of medicine in recent years none is of more widespread interest than the change of attitude with regard to the care and condition of the teeth. Though some few individuals—perhaps termed faddists—had long preached the necessity of paying close attention to the teeth, the subject was generally disregarded, or was looked on as one of individual rather than of national or racial importance. If a tooth ached it was probably decayed, the remedy was obvious—the rich had the tooth stopped, the poor had it extracted.

Public attention may be said to have been first aroused by the numbers of recruits rejected, on the score of bad teeth, for service with the troops during the South African war. Recruits had been rejected previously on this account, but it was only when the rejections occurred among those in a higher social scale than the ordinary "Tommy" that interest was awakened. More recently the reports of the school medical officers have revealed a state of matters which, while suspected, had never been properly realized. Though the percentage varies in different districts, all reporters agree that it is the exception to meet with a child whose teeth are completely free from decay. In such places as Cambridge, where skilled dentists conduct the dental examinations, [illegible] tation, leading to the formation of lactic acid; this acid decalcifies the enamel, or natural armor-plate, of the tooth; the dentine, being thus directly exposed to bacterial action, undergoes consequent decay and death.

The question of a remedy for decay in teeth thus resolves itself into two sections, the remedy of the predisposing causes and the remedy of the exciting cause. It might be asked here why some individuals have perfect teeth, and others, living under precisely similar conditions, have few free from decay. Heredity has been blamed for a weakness in the teeth or an alteration of the salivary secretions. It is doubtful if it does either. The saliva, naturally faintly alkaline, is as frequently acid in persons with perfect teeth as in those with decaying stumps, and similarly the amount of saliva appears to have no relation to this immunity. The alkalinity of the saliva does undoubtedly aid in neutralizing some of the acid formed; but investigation has shown that an alkaline saliva is not altogether a boon. Such a saliva contains a substance—mucin—on which bacteria can thrive and multiply, and the acid formed by this action precipitates the mucin on to the teeth, carrying the bacteria in its folds and consequently increasing decay. The probable explanation of the immunity of some individuals is that the molecular [illegible] appal. Germany and other countries have already done much to alleviate the disease. Toothbrush drill is taught in schools, and a suitable centre dental clinics with skilled operators are being established. Though such measures are not preventive, the school dentist will shortly be as common as the school doctor.

But many of the poorer classes, even had they the will, have not the means to keep the tooth-brushes which may be provided as clean as is necessary. It is easy to advise chalk-and-water, but those who know the lives the poor live will appreciate their difficulties in carrying out such advice. In these cases a reformation of the existing dietary appears the most natural and simplest method, but it cannot be introduced by law. A simpler life, simpler health rules, simpler habits and conditions, may all be taught in schools or brought to public notice by popular lectures, but the class which most requires to be stimulated out of its ignorance and apathy is difficult to reach and requires delicate handling. Practical means are hard to arrive at, and harder still to enforce. One longs for the introduction of a natural tooth-brush which would be at once attractive to all—a fibrous chewing gum or a root, similar to the liquorice root of childhood, which could be chewed with relish and yet without the harmful effect of fermentable sugars.

An attack on the bacteria in the mouth might be made, but these bacteria are only harmful when the other conditions leading to decay are present. Bacteriologists may in the future do much good by "setting a thief to catch a thief" by producing some harmless germ, whose action, however, would be antagonistic to the acid-forming germs, [illegible]

[illegible]

DEADLY PERILS OF FARMING

must be the basis for action, and a system which excludes 43.5 per cent. of all injured workers cannot be called just or progressive.

"The importance of covering the farm workers is further evidenced by a study of records of former years. At the beginning of the accident insurance period in Germany the same erroneous impression existed there as to the relative hazard of industrial and agricultural work which now exists in this country. Statistical records for a few years brought a change in Germany, as is shown by the following statement from the official insurance record of the year 1902:

"'It was formerly believed that agricultural pursuits were comparatively free from accidental injury. The enforcement of the compensation law of 1886 has proven this view erroneous. The statistics for 1901 show that the forty-eight agricultural employers' associations of Germany during this one year have had to compensate 16,030 injured workers, which is 540 more than are charged against the sixty-five industrial employers' associations for the same period.'

"What German statistics have proven regarding the hazards of farming every other country which has given this subject attention has found to be correct, only it is more difficult to prove elsewhere because of lack of reliable information. Germany was not slow to call attention to farm accident statistics. The result is a decrease in the number of farm casualties from more than 4 per cent. of the total casualties of the empire in 1892 to 41 per cent. in 1906.

"There is every reason to believe that the hazard of the farm as compared [illegible]

The Chaco

Looking at the map of South America, one will see, right in the centre, a large blank space destitute of the little printed words and dots that bespeak towns or settlements. This is the Chaco, a vast region stretching from the twenty-second parallel of southern latitude to the thirtieth, with an average width of four hundred miles, the greatest part of it belonging to the Argentine Republic, though some hundreds of square miles—for the most part unexplored—are in Paraguayan territory. In spite of its barren and empty look upon the map, this tract is not the desert it appears to be. A wilderness, perhaps, but not an irreclaimable one, for in the near future, when it is penetrated by the railroad, those two thin ribbons of steel without which no country can hope to call itself civilized, the enormous possibilities of the place will be recognized, and the richness of its soil, among other natural advantages, will do much to counterbalance the unfavorable [illegible] distance from the coast.

others explain that it is used to protect the leg from the friction of the lasso, though how one fails to understand.

The fauna of the Chaco is extremely varied. The jaguar, the tapir, several kinds of peccary, and the nutria (a kind of otter) are among the chief animals to be found in the dense brush and along the banks of the few rivers that water this wild country. The first named is perhaps the fiercest carnivora in the New World, not even excepting the grizzly bear of North America. The tapir, generally associated with Brazil, is fairly common in the [illegible] River, as also is the nutria, which latter animal, by the way, possesses a most valuable skin. [illegible]

Again she felt her heart leap. Reaching out to say goodby, his hand ... with trembling, gentle hands she pushed him from her.

When the black bulk of Marsh's cannery loomed ahead of Emerson he left the gravel beach and turned up among the buildings, seeking to ...

building when I heard a woman scream, and I rushed in to prevent Marsh from choking her to death.

"A woman!" chorused the group.

"That's what I said."

"Where is she now?"

"I don't know. I didn't see her after I grappled with the first person I ran into. She must have gone out as you came in." Boyd indicated the end door, which was open.

"It's a lie," cried Marsh.

"It's the truth," ... Emerson, "and there was a man with her too. Who was she, Marsh? Who was the man?"

"She—she—I don't know."

"Don't lie."

"I'm hurt," reiterated the stricken man feebly. Then, seeing the hostile ferment in the faces about him, he burst out anew: "Don't stand there like a lot of fools. Why don't you get ..."

"HE'S HIT IN MIND. HE TRIED TO MURDER ME."

CHAPTER XV.

Your wife certainly will appreciate it when you bring home a can of SNAP

Snap won't clean her hands, after filling the lamps, milking the cows, peeling potatoes and onions. SNAP banishes dirt and every odor without hard rubbing.

SNAP is soothing and healing — keeps the skin smooth and free of "chaps". Bring home a can—15c.

Emerson left in disgust. Nor had he hit upon any method of relief when Cherry came down to the plant on the following morning. She inquired straightway:

"What are you doing about it? You can't afford to lose an hour."

"I have sent a man to each of the other plants to hire fishermen at any price, but I have no hope that they will succeed. Marsh has his crews too well in hand for that."

Cherry nodded. "They wouldn't dare quit him now. He'd never let them return to this country if they did. Meanwhile the rest of your force is on the banks, I presume."

"Yes."

"How many boats have you?"

"Ten."

"Heavens! And this is the first day of the run! It looks bad, doesn't it! Has the trap begun to fill?"

"No. George is down there now. I guess Marsh succeeded in corking it. Meanwhile all the other plants are working while my Chinks are playing fantan. I seem to bring misfortune upon every one connected with me, don't I?" he added. "I'm afraid I'm a poor sort."

How boyish he was, the girl thought ...

Aviation in Japan

Although the art of making kites has been cultivated in Japan from time immemorial, and the man lifting kite, the precursor of the modern aeroplane, was, according to tradition, utilized by a banished daimio to send a message to his vassals in the year 1156, Japan has been slow in taking a share in the great recent development of aviation, as well as of other branches of aeronautics.

Two years ago, however, the Japanese government sent two army officers to Europe to study aviation, viz., Capt. Hino to Germany and Capt. Tokugawa to France. These officers, besides making themselves proficient in the art of flying, purchased on behalf of their government a number of aeroplanes of various makes, Bleriot, Wright, Grade, Farman, and have now returned to Japan, where they are giving instruction to a number of other officers. For the purpose of these lessons the government has established a large aviation field about two hours journey by railway from Tokio.

The government has also organized an official society for the study of aviation, its members being all government employes, military and naval officers and professors in the Imperial University. A grant of $... has recently been voted to this organization.

The Japanese are not largely dependent upon foreigners for their flying machines. Capt. Hino, Dr. Narahara, Capt. Isobe, of the navy, Messrs. Morikao and Tsutsumi and Baron Iga have devised various forms of aeroplane.

Each of the important newspapers of Tokio now has a department devoted to aeronautics. The Hochi Shimbun, the leading paper of the city, has engaged the services of Messrs. Takata and Inouye as "aviation editors" and Asahi Shimbun has a similar functionary in the person of Mr. ... The semi-official journal Kokumin has offered a prize of $5,000 for a flight over the Bay of Tokio.

ORIGINATOR OF TURKISH NAVY

Foster Rhodes, an American, is the Accredited Original Contractor

England in the past has lent some to assist Turkey in building an adequate navy. Germany has also done her share, but it rests with the ubiquitous Yank to claim the Fatherhood of the Fleet, which has just been, from all accounts, doing its best to check the importunities of Italy by playing a game somewhat resembling the "cross touch" of our youth. This father of the Turkish fleet was one Foster Rhodes, born on July 17, 1794, the son of Captain Henry R. Rhodes. His father, we are told by the New York Sun, sailed a brig from the port of New York, and it is not difficult to understand that Foster in a very short time wanted to have to do with the sea and the things of the sea. After going for a time to the schools of Kinderhook, where he was born, he was apprenticed to a silversmith.

This life, however, was not to his liking and he joined a shipping firm by the name of Adam and Noah Brown. Here he showed an extraordinary aptitude, so impressing his chief that he was taken to Erie, Pa., in 1812, to help in the construction of a brig which helped Commander Perry to defeat the British on Lake Erie. After many vicissitudes in connection with the shipping trade he arrived at Constantinople an expert at his craft. The Turkish government offered Rhodes contracts to construct ships. Rhodes declined, insinuating that his object was to sell, not to construct.

"I am part of my vessel," he said. The Turkish government found that if they wanted Rhodes as a naval constructor they would have to buy his ship, so they bought it. Thus Rhodes took over his new duties, and commenced by building a yacht for the Sultan which was more like a warship. After this he built a fast yacht for the potentate, and then ten ships for the Turkish navy.

Of course, the ways of the bustling American were new to the Turks, and ...

The Value of Conversation

Conversation is the most delightful method of gaining knowledge. What is more invaluable than an accomplished companion, a living volume reading its own pages? What an intellectual treat it is to take to one with whom conversing we forget all time!

It is worth much to read the lessons of a philosopher, but to hear him impart them is worth much more.

It is agreeable to read the narration of a traveller, but far more so to hear him describe what he has seen. Besides, there is the opportunity of asking questions, and skill in interrogation is one of the chief excellencies of an apt conversor.

Lord Bacon has truly said, "He that questioneth much, shall learn much, and content much; but especially if he apply his questions to the skill of the person whom he asketh, for he shall give them occasion to please themselves in speaking, and himself shall continually gather knowledge."

An Always Ready Pill.—To those of regular habit medicine is of little concern, but the great majority of men are not of regular habit. The worry and cares of business prevent it and out of irregularity of life comes dyspepsia, indigestion, liver and kidney troubles as a protest. The run-down system demands a corrective and there is none better than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They are simple in their composition and can be taken by the most delicately constituted.

Men and Women

Men though they indulge very freely in gossip themselves, often profess to be great admirers of silence in women.

There is an anecdote of Dr. Johnson, which records that a very voluble lady once said to him petulantly: "I believe you prefer the company of ladies to that of men." "Madame," he answered, "I am fond of the company of ladies. I like their beauty, I like their delicacy, and I like their silence." Still, though men may and do accuse the fair sex of a liking for gossip, no one can deny that many men are as great or greater chatter boxes and gossipers than women. The writer has intimate acquaintance with a gentleman who, possessing independent private means, was nearly always to be found in the park or street gossiping with some company ...

He was told.

"Eh! Don't believe in no God, don't they?" he exclaimed. "Ere, hold my coat."

ST. VITUS DANCE

CURED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

Chorea, or as it is more generally known, St. Vitus dance, is a disease that usually attacks the young children, though older persons may be afflicted with it. Its most common symptoms are a twitching of the muscles of the face and limbs. As the disease progresses this twitching takes the form of spasms in which the jerking motion may be confined to the head, or all the limbs may be affected. The patient is frequently unable to hold anything in the hands or to walk steadily, and in severe cases even the speech is affected. The disease is due to debility of the nerves and is always cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood, tone and strengthen the nerves and thus restore the sufferer to good health. The following is a striking instance of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do in this trouble. Mrs. Chas. Phipps, Pelee Island, Ont., says:

"At the age of fourteen my eldest daughter Edith, became much run down, and the trouble developed into St. Vitus dance. First her left arm became affected, then the left leg and entire left side. She grew so bad that she actually could not hold anything in her hand, and could only go about with a sliding, jerking motion. Notwithstanding that we were giving her medicine she seemed to be growing worse, and finally her speech became much affected. We became so much alarmed about her that finally her father got her a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and we began giving her these. In the course of a few weeks she was much better and before all the pills were gone she was again enjoying perfect health. ..."

B. of T. Holds Annual Meeting

Officers Elected For 1912 - Secretary's Report Full of Interest.

The annual meeting of the Vermilion Board of Trade was held on Monday evening in the town hall. There was a very good attendance and the matters brought before the meeting were discussed with interest. In the absence of President Steel, Mr. J. Dawson Stephens, Vice-President, presided. After the transaction of routine work, a resolution emanating from the Pelican Lake Board of Trade with regard lake protection to timber limits was endorsed. The election of officers resulted as follows:—

President, J. Dawson Stephens.
Vice-Pres. R. L. Craig.
Executive Committee: Jos. McKone, J. A. Meadowcroft, C. E. Hayward, Roy West and K. D. McKay.

The appointment of a secretary was deferred.

A resolution endorsing the Single Tax system was passed unanimously.

The financial statement of the year showed receipts amounting to $440.00 and expenditures to $432.00. There is due from the town $50.00 and credit in the bank of $31.00. The liabilities apart from the slight deficit are $212.50.

A motion to raise the membership fee $10.00 in order to provide a rink for the use of members was defeated.

Votes of thanks were given to President Reed and Secretary Morrison for the able manner in which they discharged the duties of their respective offices for the year. The hope was expressed that Mr. Reed would soon be back and resume his usual place in the community. Mr. Morrison was presumed to accept the office of secretary for the coming year and it was decided to give him time to reconsider his refusal.

The report as submitted by the secretary covered practically the entire scope of the year's work. A perusal of the report shows what has been accomplished and there is no doubt that had all the criticism responded, as this might, better ore rate would have been attained.

To the President of the Vermilion Board of Trade.

In submitting my report for the year 1911 I do so with the feeling of the fact that I have not lived up to the anticipations entertained when I took office a year ago.

The work of the year has been largely correspondence and distributing literature, both of which I have attended to as well as my time and the duties of the board would permit.

On taking office I found a large number of the 1912 booklets and these I continued to distribute among inquirers until we got our new supply in the latter part of May. The new pamphlet was prepared by the advertising committee and entailed considerable work, and we believe that we have as up to date a piece of publicity matter as is issued by any Board of Trade in the west, and this, possibly, of the larger centres. The printing of the booklet cost us about $[illegible] We procured 10,000 copies, many of which we have personally all distributed. Of the remaining 5000 the Alberta Government took 500 and the Central League another 500, copies for distribution. The latter were ordered by the incoming secretary. The remaining remainder is held subject to the requirements of the year, as a matter of economy that for the year only a small number be printed. In ordering the improvements of the year, and district some that publication of the new pamphlet. I think the 10,000 issued should be sufficient for many years to [illegible]

During the year the Board entertained the business men of Winnipeg on their annual excursion through the west and the Edmonton Board of Trade at their next [illegible] Edmonton [illegible] Western [illegible] and the members at their meetings were well, and on behalf of the executive I am asked to tender their thanks to the citizens who gave one of their entertainments and rags on each of these occasions. I may say that the courtesies extended to these visitors were very much appreciated and no doubt have been the means of bringing Vermilion to the attention of intending settlers in the different parts of Canada and United States.

Personally, I regret the apathy with which some of our business people meet the work of the Board of Trade and this has made my work more of a discouraging task. I may say that it does not seem to me unfair for that 25 or 30 of the business people of a centre with such great assets as Vermilion should be called upon to meet the burden of most of the burdens of advertising not only Vermilion, but the Vermilion district as well. I think Vermilion has now arrived at that stage where it can well afford to do things on a broader scale than heretofore, and we have to do that or practically drop out of the race altogether.

If the members will accept a suggestion of mine I will say that some member other than those existing, at present should be adopted to supply funds for the carrying on of the work while the Board will have on hand. My suggestion is that the town be appealed to for an increase on their grant such as would enable the appointment of a secretary for publicity purposes. It would not of all be necessary to have the secretary or devote his entire time to the work of the board, as my odd very well be carried on with his usual business. From my experience, as at all any rate, a secretary will take that the board should not expect to secure any correspondence and the months, without [illegible] Father [illegible] will have to be done [illegible] the board [illegible] will be necessary [illegible]

In connection with the [illegible] and issuing of pamphlets, I wish to say that I was obliged to secure [illegible]

Cherry Malotte stirred and shifted her gaze uneasily to the gleaming bay. Abreast of them the fleet of fishing boats were drifting with the tide. In the distance others were dotted away to where the open ocean lay, ... and she saw the sun flash from the ... in its tow, while the faint echo of a song came wafting to her ears. She stood so for a long moment, fighting manfully with herself, then wheeled upon him suddenly. There was a new tone in her voice as she said:

"If you will let me have one of your launches I may be able to help you."

"How?" he demanded quickly.

"Never mind how. It's a long chance and hardly worth trying, but—may I take the boat?"

"Certainly," said he. "There's one lying at the dock."

He led her to the shore and saw her aboard, then waved goodbye and walked moodily back to the office, gratified that she should try to help him, yet certain that she could not succeed where he and George had failed.

"Fingerless" Fraser had breakfasted late, as was his luxurious custom, and shortly before noon, in the course of his diminished wanderings, he found his friend in the office lost in sombre thought. It was the first time in many weeks that he had seen this mood in Boyd, and after a fruitless effort to make him talk he fell into his old habit of imaginary reading, droning away to himself as if from a printed page.

"'Your stay among us has not been very pleasant, has it?' Mr. Emerson inquired.

"'Not so that you could notice it,' replied our hero. 'I don't like fish, and I never did.'

"'That is the result of prejudice; the fish is a noble animal,' Mr. Emerson declared.

"'He's not an animal at all,' our hero gently corrected. 'He's a bipped—a regular wild bipped, without either love of home or affection for his children. The salmon is of a low order of intelligence and has a Queen Anne shack on his roof. No person with a retreating forehead like that knows very much. The only other member of the animal kingdom that is as foolish as the salmon is Alton Clyde. The fish has got a shade the best of it over him, but as for friendship and the gentler emotions—why, the salmon hasn't got them at all. The only thing he's got is a million eggs and a sense of direction. If he had a spark of intelligence he'd lay one egg a year like a hen, and then live for a million years. But does he? Not on your Barnum! He's a spendthrift and turns his eggs loose a hatful at a time. He's worse than a shotgun. And then, too, he's as clannish as a Harvard graduate and don't associate with nobody out of his own set. No, sir! Give me a warm blooded animal that suckles its young. I'll take a farmer every time.'

"'Those are points I had never considered,' said Mr. Emerson, 'but every business has its drawbacks, you'll agree. If I have failed as a host, what can I do to entertain you while you grace our midst?'" now, and the next instant Alton Clyde entered, a picture of dejection.

"Gee! This is fierce, isn't it?" the clubman began, flinging himself into the nearest chair. "They tell me it's all off finally. What are you going to do?"

"Put up what fish I can with a short crew," said Boyd.

"We'll lose a lot of money."

"Probably."

Clyde's tone was querulous as he continued:

"I'm sorry I ever went into this thing. You bet if I had known as much in Chicago as I know now I would have hung on to my money and stayed at home."

"You know as much as we did," Boyd declared curtly.

"Oh, it's all right for you to talk. You haven't risked any coin in the deal, but I'm a rotten business man, and I'll never make my ante back again if I lose it."

"Don't whine about it," said Boyd stiffly. "You can at least be game and lose like a man."

"Then we are going to lose, eh?" queried Clyde in a scared voice. "I thought maybe you had a plan. Look here," he began an instant later, "Cherry pulled us out once before. Why don't you let her see what she can do with Marsh?"

Boyd scanned the speaker's face sharply before speaking.

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean she can work him if she tries, the same way she worked Hilliard."

"Marsh isn't in the mood to listen to arguments. I have tried that."

"Who said anything about arguments? You know what I mean."

"I don't care to listen to that sort of talk."

"Why not? I'm entitled to have my say in things." Clyde was growing indignant. "I put in $10,000 of my own money and $25,000 besides on your assurance. That's $35,000 more than you put up."

"Nevertheless it doesn't give you the right to insult the girl."

"Insult her! Huh! You're no fool, Boyd. Why did Hilliard advance that loan?"

"Because he wanted to, I dare say."

"What's the use of keeping that up? You know as well as I do that she worked him, and worked him well. She'd do it again if you asked her. She'd do anything for you."

CHAPTER XVI.

Boyd broke out roughly: "I tell you, I've heard enough of that talk, Alton. Anybody but an idiot would know that Cherry is far too good for what you suggest. And when you insult her you insult me."

"Oh, she's good enough," said Clyde. "They're all good, but not perhaps in the way you mean."

"How do you know?"

"I don't know, but Fraser does. He's known her for years. Haven't you, Fraser?" But the adventurer's face was like wood as they turned toward him.

"I don't know nothing," replied "Fingerless" Fraser, with an admirable show of ignorance.

"HE CAN GOT HIS SEWING IF YOU SAY SO."

THE STANDARD

VERMILION, ALTA., JAN 31, 1912

[illegible]

The article published in the Standard last issue stated that it was the intention of the Dominion government to afford assistance to homesteaders in procuring seed grain for the years crop. By the term homesteader is meant one who has not obtained patent to his land. Since the article in question appeared many have enquired at this office about seed grain who have got the patent to their land but at the same time are in need of good seed grain [illegible] [illegible]

Farmers Representative goes to Ottawa

Will Join Other Delegates in Discussion of Grain Bill with the Government.

E. J. Fream was delegated by the United Farmers of Alberta, to appear before the government at Ottawa in company with representa[tives] from the other prairie provinces [w]ith relation to the consideration of [the] grain bill on Jan. 29. [It was] [illegible] that all terminal elevator [illegible] should be taken over by the government; that facilities should be provided at Vancouver in time to handle next season's crop, and that the grading of the grain should be left as at present stipulated in the act.

A circular letter is to be addressed by the secretary to all newspapers in the province, requesting that all the local unions should report to the central office at Calgary, actual seed conditions in every part of the province, giving such full particulars as what kind and how much seed is required.

Many of the questions discussed and recommended at the convention will be laid before the legislature by the legislative committee. Among them will be hail insurance, direct legislation, cooperative [illegible] elevators within the province, government ownership of railways, the provision of seed grain and the government loaning of money to farmers.

Continuous Telephone Service

Starting February 1st. Town will Have All Night Service.

An all night telephone service will be inaugurated for Vermilion starting the 1st. day of February. A representative of the provincial government was in town Tuesday signing up contracts for the new service and all phone subscribers are delighted that the continuous service is now a certainty.

Phones will now cost a little more, business phones being advanced from $24 to $28 per year payable half yearly in advance; house phones from $15 to $16 per year, payable same as above. The benefits that will be derived from the all night service will more than compensate for the slight increase of cost to subscribers.

6 YEAR OLD GIRL
Cured of Kidney Trouble

Mrs. Alex. Moore, of James St., Oxford, N. S., says "Booth's Kidney Pills cured our little daughter Christina, aged 6 years, of many symptoms of kidney weakness. She complained of a sore back, the kidney secretions were frequent and uncontrollable, especially at night. Her stomach was weak and her appetite poor. This caused her to have frequent headaches and the [illegible] would tire her. We had tried many remedies, but she did not improve. Finally we learned of Booth's Kidney Pills [illegible] [i]n a short time she was well and does not now complain about her back, the kidney secretions have become normal, and she plays around the house with no apparent fatigue. We always recommend Booth's Kidney Pills."

The Railroad From Wilkie To Vermilion

In its policy of railroad construction in the west for 1912, the C.P.R. will complete all work now done on branch lines and in this is included the branch northwest from Wilkie in which Vermilion is particularly interested. Whether this line will be completed to Vermilion this year is yet uncertain, but appearances would tend to point that such is the intention.

L. I. D 26 D.-4

THE PINK KIMONO.

A Blunder That Was Happily Righted.

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

It lay on the massive settee in the hall, an innocent looking parcel, flat and somewhat square. Three of Warwick's letters lay on top of it, neat as the hall boy had placed them, also his evening paper from home.

Warwick glanced at the letters, again at the ... tossed off his hat, coat and gloves and carried the whole lot, ... letters and paper into the ... and dropped into a deep ...

There was an hour before the ... would arrive. Everything was ready. The spread ... at six sharp. He ... Stanton would be ... The boy needed a good ... just now. He knew himself what it was to be in New York a stranger. Money could not give one the password that admitted one to the inside of things, the "getting next to the inside of all," as Stanton said. And if the right path did not open and one happened to be ... there were ... Warwick ...

The boy was young and clever. The only thing that ailed him was too much money and the confidence he had in ... He was a bit heady with it ... the whirl and the swing and the chance for big success. Warwick had kept an eye on him for weeks ... and judging him, and now he was satisfied. All the boy needed was direction and a steady hand ... him now and then, and he would win ...

... to him a bit. There's a Jap comes in and cleans up for me, and if I want a meal I can have it.

"I—I am going to housekeeping too," began Stanton awkwardly.

"Honeymoon?" Warwick's eyes lighted with amusement. He had not dreamed the boy had gone so far.

"No, not so bad as that." Stanton hesitated, glancing at the joyous, riotous crowd about the piano. "It's my sister. Mother's sent her on to take care of me until she can come herself. I guess they didn't get very good accounts of their little boy in Manhattan. But I wrote home and told them about you and what sort of a chap you are and how you had taken me under your wing, and I promised to cut out the hotel and—well, a whole lot of things mother didn't like the flavor of, and today —"

"Whoopee!" yelled Yates from the dressing room. "I've found Warry's tables ... It's a dream!"

Warwick sat up and dropped his cigarette. Walking dizzily, radiantly, ... out from the dressing room came Yates, arrayed in the pink silk kimono. There was a silence then a long drawn howl of delight from the crowd. They ... Yates in their arms, and swept him upon the center table. They handed him a Samoan fan of dyed ... and a Mex... hat. ... at the piano crashed into the "Isan Toy" overture. And suddenly Warwick stood up, white and mad ... clear through that they should dare even in jest to touch anything that belonged to the dear, unknown girl, the brunette with the gray eyes.

"Take that off!" he said.

The music stopped short, but not from his words. Every face in the crowd was turned toward the door of the hall and Yates looked helpless and miserable. Warwick turned too and held his breath. She stood in the doorway, one hand lifting aside the ...

SPECIFIC HEAT EXPLAINED.

Capacity For Heat Varies In the Different Metals.

The specific heat of the body is sometimes spoken of as capacity for heat, and here, be it remembered, that the unit of heat is such a quantity as will raise the temperature of one pound of pure distilled water from 39 to 40 degrees F. This is one British thermal unit or one B. T. U. The conception of heat is entirely different from that of temperature, as is often shown in a simple laboratory experiment. A cake of beeswax about one-half inch thick is placed in a horizontal position a short distance above the top of a table. A number of metal balls are immersed in a liquid having, say, a high temperature. All the balls soon have the same temperature as the liquid, and each of the balls is at the same temperature as all the others.

If these balls with equal temperatures be placed on the cake of wax they will all begin to melt the wax and sink into the cake as they part with their heat, but the rate and depth of penetration into the cake will vary. For example, under these circumstances an iron ball will melt its way through the wax first. It will be followed by a copper ball of equal size. A tin ball will probably just show on the underside of the wax, while a lead ball and a bismuth ball may not be able to do more than sink half their diameter into the wax.

This experiment proves that while the temperature of all the balls was equal, the amount of heat or the number of British thermal units possessed by each varied considerably. The iron ball contained the greatest number of B. T. U. and the bismuth least. At the close of the experiment the temperatures of the balls would all be different, but the capacity for heat of each is a property of the metal itself, and each maintained its own specific heat when all were at the same temperature ...

A WONDERFUL RAILROAD.

The Bergen-Christiania Line Largely Tunnels and Bridges.

One of the most interesting railway ... in Europe within the last years is the line that has been recently opened across the Scandinavian peninsula for the purpose of providing direct communication between the city of Bergen, on the Atlantic seaboard, and Christiania, the capital of Norway. In constructing the line great natural difficulties had to be and were successfully overcome. The main difficulty was to find an easy passage through the mountains of the Devrefjeld range. The district in question is the most mountainous in Norway, with short, narrow valleys, from which the mountains rise abruptly, if not perpendicularly, to great heights. The fiords penetrate far into the country, and nearly all the valleys forming the natural outlines for the railway scheme are traversed by large streams.

Altogether there are no less than 184 tunnels on the line, representing a total length of about twenty-four miles. The line crosses fourteen bridges. The constructional work entailed the excavation of nearly 36,000,000 cubic feet of earth and 29,000,000 cubic feet of rock on the high mountain section, while the consumption of dynamite ran to 1,800,000 pounds. There are fifty-five stations between the two terminal points. Of the fourteen bridges, three are in masonry, one having a span of 150 feet and another being 600 feet in length, with eight seventy-foot spans. Owing to the exposed nature of the line in the upper sections above the timber line extensive fencing as a defense against drifting snow was necessary beside the track, these screens being almost continuous for sixty miles between Mjolfjeld and Ujello. The line passes through a ...

MARSH RECLAMATION.

Extensive Work Undertaken In Norway—Peat Manufacture.

Writing of the work performed by Det Norske Myrselskab in the reclamation and utilization of Norwegian marsh land, Consul Bertil M. Rasmusen of Bergen says:

The society has investigated 730 marshes and delivered 136 lectures throughout the country. In order to introduce improvements in the utilization and cultivation of marshes and making peat and material for bedding an experimental station has been established at Maeresmyren, Sparbu, with branches scattered all over the kingdom. Peat machines have been examined and improved, experiments are being made with new peat ovens, and a course of instruction treating on the preparation and manufacture of peat and litter, where young men are trained to take charge of this kind of work, is being pursued by representatives from every district.

Since the society's organization in 1902 the number of bedding factories has increased from 53 to 270, and the number of peat mills has more than doubled. A recent report from the forester's office shows that 300,000 cubic meters of peat have been manufactured and used as fuel during the last twenty five years in one of the smaller districts of Norway. This not only represents the commercial value of the material used, which was estimated at $335,000, but it means great economy in cutting of timber.

The fact that Maeresmyren (an extensive marsh) is now being reclaimed by the aid of convict labor and that the owners of other marshy tracts have decided to begin reclamation is largely due to the activity of the Norske Myrselskab. The society makes every effort to encourage private initiative, and its engineer has during 1907-8 superintended the reclamation of 1,300 maal (350 acres) of ...

A Stable Warning

When having a look round a stable where a number of horses are kept, it becomes quite natural to bestow a pat or caress on any equine which may take the visitor's fancy; but this is a matter in which care should be used. The most harmless looking animals may prove to be really vicious and resent attentions in a forcible manner. In most big stables where ...

Sedan Chair Still in Use

The news that there is a woman still living who rode in a Sedan chair is a reminder of the fact that there is one town in England where a Sedan chair is still used. It is in Knutsford, in Cheshire—the "Cranford" of Mrs. Gaskell. Every May Day Knutsford arrays itself in gala attire. Sports are held on the village green, the May Queen is elected and crowned, and—in order that no aspect of antiquity should be missing—the Sedan chair is produced. King Edward and Queen Alexandra visited these festivities in 1887, and, in honor of the event, gave permission for the word "royal" to be used in connection with the sports. Whatever may have been absolutely the latest date at which a Sedan chair was used ... chair, at any rate, had a longer life than most forms of public conveyance, for it appeared in England as early as 1621 and in London 50 years later, when Sir Francis Duncomb obtained the sole privilege of letting and hiring them. Thus the Sedan chair was in use for roughly three centuries, and how many hansoms are likely to be carrying passengers in 2133, which will be the tercentenary of their introduction?

Singing Hymns Made Her Lonesome

Very human are the stories one will glean as the meet from time to time with patients who have been in the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives. A newspaper reporter has been digging up some cases of this kind. When visiting the hospital, he says — "I chatted with a young woman of perhaps twenty-five summers, ruddy, pretty smiling and happy, even though at the time she was confined to bed." "She told rather a touching story in these words — 'Three years ago my sister died of consumption. I think I caught it from her, having been in very poor health at the time. There was nothing for me to do, if my life was to be spared, but to come to this institution. I would not give up hope. I like being here alright, only when they are singing hymns on Sunday I feel a bit lonesome and homesick. The ...

Hunting the Emu

The natives of Australia are ingenious. A black, on discovering emus feeding on a plain, will cover his back and head with an emu skin, allowing it to hang down well on the side toward the unsuspecting birds. In his right hand he will carry, hidden by the skin, a boomerang and one or two throwing-sticks or "waddies." Then his left arm will protrude beyond the skin straight out to the elbow, and the forearm will be bent up, with the hand at right angles to it, thereby making a capital imitation of an emu's head and neck.

Now and then the hand or head will be brought to the ground as if for feeding; and as the black walks along he imitates every motion of the bird, while at the same time, by means of the big toe, he drags a spear along the ground.

An Englishman, while riding with a companion across one of the vast plains of Queensland, was passing a ridge when, as his eyes cleared the summit, he saw one of the very wild blacks of the district walking quietly along toward a small scrub in the middle of the open. The Britons pulled up to see what the man would do. His sharp eyes, however, soon detected the white men, though their heads only were visible to him, and he dashed into the scrub.

Almost immediately from the opposite side of the scrub darted out what to them appeared an emu driven out by the entrance of the black, so they gave chase, but quickly discovered it to be only the black acting emu not expecting that the white men would give chase to what was in those parts a very common bird.

There is no poisonous ingredient in Holloway's Corn Cure, and it can be used without danger of injury.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the most popular of all pills, have been the most extensively advertised and have become known in almost every household in Canada as a reliable family medicine. Mrs. Wm. Gilbert, Lyndhurst, Ont., says: "I was troubled with a severe pain in the small of my back, which at times was very acute. I had a dull headache, and was languid and tired all the time. I was induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and before I had used the contents of one box I felt much better. I continued using the pills for about two months, when I was entirely cured. I have recommended the pills to several friends, and they have also been benefited by their use." DEADLY EDITOR.

The Arizona Kicker Man Explains Fatalities.

TRAINED FOR HIS CAREER.

Worked Up His Nerve Until He Was Not Afraid to Trade a Shooting or Man Private Graveyard and Pete Hammond Above Victims.

By H. GUAD.

[Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.]

PICTURES to yourself an editor seated in his sanctum on the fourth floor of an office. For the moment he is not writing an article advising that the long suffering people turn out and make a row of every cold storage house in the country.

On the contrary, he is looking out of his window with a cool expression on his face and moisture in his eyes as they look down upon his private editorial graveyard—the only one in the land in the world. Twenty-three men lie sleeping there—a sleep that shall last until the trumpet awakens all. Twenty-three headstones glitter like stones in the world. Over the green graves the trailing arbutus grows. These mounds are so carefully tended as if they covered the remains of children.

The editor brushes the tears from his eyes, sighs a long sigh and proceeds to read the issue on the stone. There is Tarantula Sam to begin with and Grizzly Joe to end with. Sandy Mike, Tornado Jim, Whirlwind Dutch, Six Gun Pete, Bloody Bill, Terrible Jones, Whooping Charlie and others. Each one had lived and had left this day. Each one had whooped and thrilled and fluked. Some had left old mothers to weep for them and think of them, "Where is my boy tonight?" while others never knew a mother's love.

Each and every one of the twenty-three had arrived at the graveyard gate in bounding spirits; also with two gunshots in his back, or with his head thrown on the back of his head. Each had arrived in a hurry. Each one had taken a drink and made the statement that he was from the headwaters of Fighting creek and that he could lick ten to fifteen natives run into the best of his carcass. Each one had been watched for the mysterious of being bad, and they got it.

In some cases they felt within a day or so where they lasted a week. It was according to the boldness or nerve of the editor of the Kicker and nerved in to do him up. Sometimes it was a long session. The editor had never harmed others by word or deed, and yet they sighed to do him up for all of that. They didn't want him to live out his days. They didn't want him on earth. They were willing to move others, but not an editor. So they worked him out. Some gave him two minutes in which to prepare for the emergency, some over and five at once, having no care whether he went to the one place or the other.

And the editor, looking to live on and make the Arizona Kicker the greatest weekly in the land and to be an ornament to the state, the pride of all editors, chief of the fire department, mayor, city councilman, coroner and sometimes other things, bought a gun and practiced shooting, and the time came when he was fighting on the drive and the editor was fighting. He was worked up nervy as confidence, and the time came when he dared go to the mountains and meet the men who had the grizzly bear and seize him by the tail and lead him to town. Then he would be hailed as among the best men known of editors.

Promptly on record on the editor when still five rods separated them. The look of astonishment on his face as he went down to rise no more was buried with him. It was the first time he had ever failed to draw an editor with his first bullet. It was when he had fallen that the members of the ground for an editorial graveyard was made, otherwise the coyotes would have howled over his grave on the night desert. It was forgotten. The editor didn't like it but the lead was not sent for. He had to be put in the same grave as the rest of his victims.

Time passed and the editor's fame spread. He became a terror to evil doers. Men who had designs on the peace of Arizona left it severely alone. Men who had designs on the editor left it severely alone. Men who had designs on the editor left it severely alone. Men who had designs on the editor the night you and your sister went out?"

"I 'member."

"Where did you go?"

Constantine shifted his walrus soled boots. "What for you ask?"

"Never mind! Where did you go when you left the house?"

"Me go Indian village. What for you ask?"

"Nothing. Only if you ever have any trouble with Mr. Marsh I may be able to help you. I like you, and I don't like him."

The breed grunted unintelligibly and was about to leave when Boyd reached forth suddenly and pouched the fellow's sheath knife from its scabbard. With a startled cry, Constantine whirled, his face convulsed, his nostrils dilated like those of a frightened horse.

But Emerson merely fingered the Indian's weapon carelessly, remarking:

"That is a curious knife you have. I have noticed it several times."

He eyed him shrewdly for a moment, then handed the blade back with a smile. Constantine slipped it into its place and strode away without a word.

It was considerably later in the day when Boyd discovered the Indians to whom he had given the note talking excitedly on the dock. Seeing Constantine in argument with them, he approached to demand an explanation, whereupon the quarter breed held out a silver dollar in his palm with the words:

"Those fellows say this money no good."

"What do you mean?"

"It no good. No can buy grub at company store."

It was evident that even Constantine was vaguely distrustful.

Another native extended a coin, saying:

"We want money like this."

Boyd took the piece and examined it, whereupon a light broke upon him. The coin was stamped with the initials of one of the old fishing companies, and he instantly recognized a ruse practiced in the north during the days of the first trading concerns. It had been the custom of these companies to pay their Indians in coins bearing their own impress and to refuse all other specie at their posts, thus compelling the natives to trade at company stores. Seeing that his words carried no conviction, Emerson gave up at last, saying:

"If the company store won't take the money I'll sell you whatever you need from the commissary. We are not going to have any trouble over a little thing like this."

He marched the natives in a body to the storehouse, where he saw to it that they received what provisions they needed and assisted them in loading their canoes.

But his amusement at the episode gave way to uneasiness on the following morning when the Aleuts failed to report for work and by noon his suspicion resolved itself into strong suspicion.

Bolt had returned from the banks earlier in the morning with news of a struggle between his white crew and Marsh's men. George's boats had been surrounded during the night, nets had been cut and severe encounters had occurred, resulting in serious injury to his men. The giant, in no amiable mood, had returned for re-enforcements, stating that the situation was becoming more serious every hour. Hearing of the desertion of the natives, he burst into profanity, then armed himself and returned to the banks, while Boyd, now thoroughly alarmed, took a launch and sped up the river to Cherry's house in the hope that she could prevail upon her own recruits to return.

He found the girl ready to accompany him, and they were about to embark when Chakawana came running from the house as if in sudden fright.

"Where you go?" she asked her mistress.

"I am going to the Indian village. You stay here."

"No, no! I no stop here alone. I go long too." She cast a glance over her shoulder.

"But Chakawana, what is the matter? Are you afraid?"

"Yes." Chakawana nodded her pretty head vigorously.

"What are you afraid of?" Boyd asked, but she merely stared at him with eyes as big and round as an heart cherries, then removed her appearance. When she had received permission and had hurried back to the house her mistress remarked, with a puzzled frown:

"I don't know what to make of her. She and Constantine have been acting very strangely of late. She used to be the happiest sort of creature, always laughing and singing, but she has changed entirely during the last few weeks. Both she and Constantine are forever whispering to each other and skulking about until I am getting nervous myself." Then, as the Indian girl came flying back with her tiny baby brother in her arms, Cherry added: "She's pretty, isn't she? I can't bear ugly people around me."

[illegible]

trouble, as usual. Marsh's men have cut our nets, and the yacht may arrive at any time."

"The yacht! What yacht?"

"Mr. Wayland's yacht. He is making a tour of this coast with the other officers of the trust and—Mildred."

"Is—is she coming here?" demanded Cherry in a strained voice.

"Yes."

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"I don't know; I didn't think you would be interested."

"So she can't wait? She is so eager that she follows you from Chicago clear up into this wilderness. Then you won't need my assistance any more, will you?" Her lids drooped, half hiding her eyes, and her face hardened.

"Of course I shall need your help. Her coming won't make any difference."

"It strikes me that you have allowed me to make a fool of myself long enough," said Cherry angrily. "Here I have been breaking my heart over this enterprise, while you have known all the time that she was coming. Why, you have merely used me—and George and all the rest of us, for that matter." She laughed harshly.

"You don't understand," said Boyd. "Miss Wayland"—

"Oh, yes I do. I dare say it will gratify her to straighten out your troubles. A word from her lips and your worries will vanish like a mist. Let us acknowledge ourselves beaten and beg her to save us."

Boyd shook his head in negation, but she gave him no time for speech.

"It seems that you wanted to pose as a hero before her and employed us to build up your triumph. Well, I am glad we failed. I'm glad Willis Marsh showed you how very helpless you are. Let her come to your rescue now. I'm through. Do you understand? I'm through."

Emerson gazed at her in astonishment, the outburst had been so unexpected, but he realized that he owed her too much to take offense.

"Miss Wayland will take no hand in my affairs. I doubt if she will even realize what this trouble is all about," he said a trifle stiffly. "I suppose I did want to pose the hero, and I dare say I did use you and the others, but you knew that all the time."

"Why won't she help you?" queried Cherry. "Doesn't she care enough about you? Doesn't she know enough to understand your plight?"

"Yes, but this is my fight, and I've got to make good without her assistance. She isn't the sort to marry a failure, and she has left me to make my own way. Besides, she would not dare go contrary to her father's wishes even if she desired. That is part of her education. Oh, Wayne Wayland's opposition isn't all I have had to overcome. I have had to show his daughter that I am one of her own kind, for she hates weakness."

"And you think that woman loves you! Why, she isn't a woman at all. She doesn't know what love means. When a woman loves, do you imagine she cares for money or fame or success? If I cared for a man do you think I'd stop to ask my father if I might marry him or wait for my lover to prove himself worthy of me? Do you think I'd send him through the hell you have suffered to try his metal?" She laughed outright. "Why, I'd become what he was, and I'd fight with him. I'd give him all I had—money, position, friends, influence. If my people objected I'd tell them to go hang. I'd give them up and join him. I'd use every dollar, every wile and feminine device that I possessed, in his service. When a woman loves she doesn't care what the world says. The man may be a weakling or worse, but he is still her lover and she will go to him."

The words had come tumbling forth until Cherry was forced to pause for breath.

Only One for Breakfast

The egg of the gigantic extinct bird aepyornis, of South Madagascar, has a capacity of two gallons, or 150 times that of a hen's egg. The shell is 1-8 inch thick, lengthwise it is 33 inches in circumference and it measures 25 inches around the middle. Though termed a fossil egg it is not petrified, but it is in perfect condition, unbroken and has a yellow color. The contents have turned into a fine dust, which comes out when handled, through a small, natural perforation on one side. The aepyornis like the moa of New Zealand, was exterminated by the hand of man. A few centuries ago it was quite abundant. Several incomplete fossil remains have been discovered, but no complete skeleton has as yet been found. These show the bird was three-toed, of massive proportion and short winged. The Madagascar natives have for many years used the great egg shell for various household purposes. In fact, the first knowledge of these eggs became known when some Madagascar natives came to the Mauritius to buy rum, bringing the aepyornis eggs with them to hold the liquor. Only three or four of these huge eggs have been brought into civilization.

Other Fellow's View Point

When Attorney-General Wickersham was a plain, everyday citizen and lived in Tenth Street near Fifth Avenue, New York, a few years ago, the tide of immigration was already beginning to flow in that direction. In consequence it was a rough crowd of boys of all nationalities that gathered about the curb to play their street games.

Master Wickersham was frequently admonished by his mother to avoid the neighborhood toughs. On one occasion she emphasized her remarks by saying:

"You know what I mean: no play along with the boys whose fathers are gentlemen."

The speech made quite an impression on the lad. A few days later he entered the library where his mother was entertaining guests, [illegible] led by a dirty, unkempt little [illegible].

"See, mother," he exclaimed triumphantly, "I've brought Tom home to play with me. I asked him if his father was a gentleman and he [illegible] no."

"Effie," said the timid highland lover, "I wad kiss ye, but I'm feart ye wadna let me."

She blushed as red as the sunset but did not answer.

"Effie," he repeated timidly a little later, "I said I wad kiss ye, but I'm feart ye wadna let me."

At the third repetition she asked:

"Saw ye him, David, yesterday? I couldna lift a bag of potatoes into the cart an' ye lifted them for me."

"Oh, aye," he replied.

"Weel, that shows, David," she instructed, "that ye're far stronger than me."

"Now, Harold," said the teacher, "if there were eleven sheep in the field and six jumped the fence how many would there be left?"

"None," replied Harold.

"Why, there would," said she.

"No, ma'am, there wouldn't," [illegible] stated he. "You may know arithmetic, but you don't know sheep."

Sociable Stones

Travelling stones from the size of a pea to six inches in diameter are found in Nevada. When distributed on a floor or other level surface, within two or three feet of one another they immediately begin to travel toward a common centre and there lie huddled like a clutch of eggs in a nest. A single stone removed to a distance of three and a half feet, upon being released, started with wonderful and somewhat comical celerity to join its fellows. The strange stones are found in a region that is comparatively level and little more than bare rock. Scattered over this barren region are little basins from a few feet to a rod in diameter and it is in the bottom of these that the rolling stones are found. The cause for the strange conduct of these stones is doubtless to be found in the material of which they are composed which appears to be lode stone or magnetic iron ore.

The great domestic problem: Where is my wandering boy tonight?

Friendship between two is always a plot against [illegible].

[illegible]

Made From Boxes.

Many useful articles for the kitchen can be made with ordinary boxes, such as you can obtain from any grocery.

From two condensed milk boxes a small cabinet holding jars containing spices, sugar, salt and dry groceries is made.

Remove the lids and nail the boxes together, having their sides touch. This forms the cabinet with one shelf. Another shelf is added by fitting in a piece of the lid halfway between the top and the centre of the box. Smooth the wood with sandpaper, paint it white or some pretty light color, and tack it to the wall by nails driven through the back near the top and you have a convenient place for various kitchen commodities.

By removing two sides of a soapbox and setting them in the box itself 2½ inches from the top and bottom, a handy [illegible] rack is made for holding such small articles as the clock, combs, matches, etc.

A rack for kitchen knives, forks and spoons is made in the same way, only having the top shelf pierced with a row of small holes [illegible] apart the length of the shelf and the edge of it notched with little square slots one quarter of an inch wide. Plates can be kept on the bottom shelf.

For saucepans and cover holders make a wallrack from a window glass box about an inch deep. Remove the cover and one side, using the latter for a brace to be nailed to the two ends several inches from the top. Into this slip the tin covers of the cooking pots. Nails driven into the lower part of the box will serve to hang the frying pan and skillets.

Three canned tomato boxes nailed together and fitted with shelves make an ideal holder for pans of all kinds. Many a utensil will find a resting place in such a box, if one is handy.

All of these various boxes are to be carefully painted or sandpapered and varnished. It is surprising how many different useful things can be fashioned from the homely "box" if one has a little ingenuity and knows how to drive a nail straight.

A New Way to Religion

A clergyman recently said: "If I were to start a new religion do you know what I would do?"

"You'd go out and preach, wouldn't you?" I asked.

"I'd do something else first," he replied. "I would go to the popular song writers, writers of words, and writers of music, and I would get them to write songs expressing the spirit of the new religion. If we can only make people feel religion, if we can make them realize that it is already here in their hearts, make them [illegible] we can move the world."

The Sea Serpent Exposed

The mystery of the sea serpent has apparently been solved by Capt. [illegible] Schmidt, master of the Dutch steamship Chariois, of Rotterdam. As the master mariner has spent some time studying the strange denizens of the deep in the Pacific and Indian oceans, as well as the Atlantic, he has arrived at the conclusion that the sea serpent is really a number of whales drifting along in a file across the ocean. He says of his conclusions:

"It was our good fortune to observe such a big fish, which had a length of about 500 to 600 feet, on our journey to the United States on July 8. The tail continually beat the water several feet high and its head which appeared on the surface every few minutes threw the water far away. Our course was right on to the serpent, and when we were about fifty feet away from it we shot at it with our small cannon and hit it right in the middle of the body.

"The blood covered the sea red. The giant fish then cut itself up into four parts and swam away Indian style.

"There were four whales, one behind the other, of which the first one [illegible] its head now and then above the water, the last one beat the water with its tail and the middle ones lay [illegible] in the water, thereby only showing their backs. The whole looked so much like one fish that we were fooled the first few minutes ourselves."

Mosaic

The teacher asked: "When did Moses live?"

After the silence had become painful she ordered: "Open your old testaments. What does it say there?"

A boy answered: "Moses [illegible]."

"Now," said the teacher, "why didn't you know when Moses lived?"

"Well," replied the boy, "I [illegible] it was the telephone number."

Is Jobbs a believer in the faith cure?" "He is." "Is it true that he didn't have a doctor for his wife the other day when she was ill?" "It is quite true." "Well, I saw a doctor go into his house just now." "Oh, that's all right. He's ill now himself."

Jones had lately taken to lecturing on the teetotal platform. "So you want to marry my daughter, sir! What are your principles? Are you temperate?" he asked of a candidate for a position of son-in-law. "Temperate," was the reply, "why I'm so straight that it gives me pain to find my boots tight."

He: Darling, when you are in my arms every burden is lifted from me like magic.

She: Wait till I've sat here for an hour or so you'll change your idea.

LISTEN TO US

"We are only little ones, but we know Zam-Buk eased our pain and cured our sores. Perhaps it would cure you, too, if you tried it!"

Isn't this sound advice from "babes and sucklings"? Take it! The speakers are the children of Mrs. E. Webster, of Seigneurs St., Montreal, and the mother adds weight to their appeal. She says: "My little girl contracted scalp disease at school. Bad gatherings formed all over her head, and not only caused the child acute pain but made her very ill. The sores discharged, and occurring on the scalp we feared she would lose all her hair. She was in a pitiable plight when we tried Zam-Buk.

"My little boy sustained a cut [illegible] ... had a few days' treatment with this balm gave her case. Then the sores began to heal, and we continued the Zam-Buk treatment. In a short time she was quite healed. ... [illegible] Zam-Buk, and we were not disappointed. It acted like a charm in drawing away the pain, and soon healed the wound."

Somebody Sat on It

An elderly man from the country, intent on purchasing some furniture, proceeded to the city to put his skill for bargaining to the test. On entering a shop he found himself confronted by a Jew. After turning over the Jew's stock, the old man purchased a chair.

A few days later the purchaser returned to the shop again with the chair in about half a dozen pieces. The Jew looked at them very gravely, and examined them all over, then suddenly exclaimed: "Ah, my frent, me see vat is der matter; somebody has been sitting on it."

In Dread of Piles

Many believe that nothing short of the surgeon's knife will effect cure. They do not know

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

The agony caused by the intense itching, the depressing and debilitating effect on the system, the dread lest a surgical operation might be necessary—these are the things which make piles or hemorrhoids so distressing.

The doctors have been recommending surgical operations as the only cure. But the surgical operation, with all its dangers and expense and pain, does not usually effect a lasting cure.

Many a case has been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment after the surgical operation had failed. Here is a case which doctors gave up.

Mr. J. Mawer, Roden, Man., writes:—"Dr. Chase's Ointment is a wonderful preparation. I had itching piles for over six years and though I tried two doctors' prescriptions and used many other preparations could not obtain much benefit. The doctor told me there was no cure for me, and that I would have to undergo an operation.

"I bought a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and was completely cured in one week. As this was six months ago and there has been no return of the old trouble, I believe that the cure is a permanent one."

One thing certain Dr. Chase's Ointment will bring you relief from the dreadful itching and burning almost as soon as applied.

To make the cure thorough and lasting it is only necessary for you to keep up the treatment regularly and persistently. Don't be satisfied with relief. Dr. Chase's Ointment will cure completely if you will do your part. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Doctor—Yes, the symptoms are very serious. You must go to bed at once, and I'll call and see you twice a day.

Patient—In that case it's lucky I joined the club last week.

Doctor—A club case! Good gracious! Why didn't you say so? Take a pennyworth of Epsom salts; you'll be all right tomorrow."

Magistrate—Why did you strike this man?

Defendant—What would you do, your worship, if you kept a grocery shop and a man came in and asked if he could take a moving picture of your cheese?

Isaacstein—I vos tired of life, till me some poison, and so I vill kill meinself.

Chemist (jocularly): All right. What do you want—arsenic or strychnine?

Isaacstein—Vich vos der cheapest?

Repenting at Leisure

Agnes was a little tot of five with curly flaxen hair, china-like complexion, and a will of her own.

She had been ill-advised, not to say deliberately naughty, at the dinner-table, and mamma had dismissed her to her bed-room to remain in durance vile until she should express due contrition for her behaviour.

Agnes cheerfully obeyed the parental order, and showed no spirit of repentance at the end of the first quarter of an hour.

When thirty minutes had elapsed, mamma called from an adjoining room:

"Agnes, dearie, aren't you sorry?"

There was no reply from the darkness beyond.

Ten minutes later the question was repeated. Back came the reply in the patient dignity and childish treble of five summers:

"Mamma, please don't ask me any more. I'll come and let you know when I'm sorry."

Expressive Shoes

Some persons like one sort of shoe and some another, but the kind which was desired by Pierre, a French-Canadian, has never enjoyed a wide popularity.

"Shoes for Sunday," Pierre stated to the young man who advanced to meet him as he entered the salesroom of the big shoe factory.

He then sat down on one of the red plush seats and allowed the salesman to insert his feet in a pair of bright yellow shoes. When they were fairly on Pierre stood, moved his feet this way and that, took a few steps, and shaking his head, sat down again.

"What's the matter?" asked the salesman. "Do they hurt you? Are they too tight?"

Pierre shook his head violently.

"She no tight," he said, "but also she no talk. Shoes for Sunday must talk, all the way up in church for to sound stylish, see?"

With a Good Scotch Tongue

A Scotch tourist wandering about the streets of Paris some distance from his hotel found himself in a maze from which he could not escape, and, to make things worse, he failed through ignorance of the language, to get any light to guide him homeward. Then a happy thought struck him. By dint of signs he concluded a bargain with a fruit hawker for a basketful of gooseberries, and then, to the amazement of everybody, he went about shouting: "Fine Scotch grozers, a penny a pun, a penny a pun!"

This went on for a while till a fellow countryman rushed forward to him, and seizing him roughly by the shoulder asked: "Mon, what in all ye are in the streets o' Paris that ye gang aboot crying like a madman?"

"Eh!" he replied, with a sense of relief. "Ye're just the man I was looking for. D'ye ken the way to my hotel?"

The Bishop's Move

Bishop Talbot, the giant cowboy bishop, was once attending a meeting of church dignitaries, and one of the clergymen, who had been urged by a tramp to give him some money, sent the fellow to the bishop. "He is a very generous man," said the clergyman, "and he might help you."

The tramp approached Bishop Talbot confidently. The others watched with interest. They saw a look of surprise come over the tramp's face. The bishop was talking eagerly. The tramp looked troubled. And then finally they saw something pass from one hand to the other. The tramp tried to slink past the group without speaking, but one of them called to him:

"Well, did you get something from our brother?"

The tramp grinned sheepishly. "No," he admitted, "I gave him a dollar for his new cathedral at Laramie!"

A Tip to Travellers

Scene—Scottish station. Ticket collector is making collection; finds an old gentleman fumbling in his pocket for his ticket.

Ticket Collector: Tickets, please.

Old Gentleman: I'm just looking for it.

Ticket Collector: Well, I'll look in again in a few minutes. See and have it ready then.

Ticket collector returns shortly. The old gentleman is still looking for it.

Ticket Collector (suddenly): Why, you have it in your mouth, man.

Old Gentleman (giving him the ticket)—Oh, so I have! Here you are.

Another passenger in the carriage as the train moves on, to first passenger—I'm afraid your losing your memory, sir.

First Passenger—Nae fear o' that, nae fear o' that. The ticket was a fortnight auld, and I was just sookin' the date aff!

Preferred Her Leashed

A lady canvasser called on old Farmer Giles and proceeded to cross-examine him on the subject of his political faith. Everything else proving unsatisfactory she produced a formidable document. "I have here," she told him, "a petition in favor of the woman's suffrage movement, and I should like you to sign it."

The old man was unable to read, but he took the petition and regarded it [illegible] ...

Learn of the Cat

In the study of aviation the flying men have neglected the scientific investigation of the anatomical and muscular structure of the domestic cat. Although there are fewer falls from the clouds than there were—in proportion to the number of airmen—it would be very useful to know how to leave an aeroplane hurriedly in middle air and effect a comfortable contact with mother earth. The common or household cat knows how to do it. Quite an ordinary untrained pussy was the other day poised on a third story windowsill admiring a sparrow and trying to follow it, she fell into the street. Hastily, and with tears, one of the women folk employed at the shop rushed down stairs to pick up the remains. She found the cat unhurt, looking pathetically up at the distant window and wondering how on earth she was to get back. Such a faculty of descent should be practiced by every aspirant for the certificate of the pilot's later.

Clean Stomach, Clear Mind. The stomach is the workshop of the vital functions and when it gets out of order the whole system clogs in sympathy. The spirit flags, the mind droops and work becomes impossible. The first care should be to restore healthful action of the stomach and the best preparation for that purpose is Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. General use for years has won them a leading place in medicine. A trial will attest their value.

Couldn't Economize

"My dear, you and I have got to agree upon a plan of some kind whereby we shall be able to keep down our bills this month."

"But aren't you afraid if we do so that the courts will get after us for combining in restraint of trade?"

BEST CURE FOR SKIN SORES Is Zam-Buk.

An illustration of the way in which Zam-Buk cures even the most serious and chronic cases of ulcers, eruptions and sores is provided by Mr. R. H. Barker, of [illegible], Ont. He says:

"I would not have believed that any remedy could cure so quickly, and at the same time so effectively, as Zam-Buk cured me.

"My face became covered with a kind of rash, which itched and irritated. This rash then turned to sores, which discharged freely and began to spread. I first tried one thing and then another, but nothing seemed to do me any good, and the eruption got worse and worse, until my face was just covered with running sores.

"Apart from the pain which was very bad, my face was such a terrible sight that I was not fit to go out. This was my state when some one advised me to try Zam-Buk. I got a supply, and, marvellous as it may sound, within little under a month every sore on my face was healed. I was so amazed that I have told the facts to several persons, and I have no objection to your stating my experience for the benefit of other sufferers."

Zam-Buk is purely herbal in composition, and is the ideal balm for babies and young children, for whose tender skin [illegible]. Zam-Buk is a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful substitutes.

DESPATCHING BY TELEPHONE

C.P.R. Just About Leads the World in Number of Miles Equipped with Telephone Despatching Circuits

"Since the system was installed it has worked perfectly," said a Canadian Pacific Railway official recently, in response to a query regarding a rumor that had spread that the C.P.R. was not altogether satisfied with its new system of despatching trains by telephone. "There was a report circulated east of Montreal," said James Kent, manager of Telegraphs, "that the C.P.R. was considering going back to the old style of despatching by telegraph, but the idea is most ridiculous. Since despatching by telephone was inaugurated on the C.P.R., it has been distinctly successful and is in every way superior to the old method of despatching by telegraph."

Mr. W. J. Camp, electrical engineer of the C.P.R., was also indignant at the idea that the C.P.R. was not satisfied with the new system. All one has to do," said Mr. Camp, "to understand how thoroughly the Canadian Pacific believes in the telephone despatching system, is to take cognizance of the number of miles of new circuits being installed each year by the Company."

This year, stated Mr. Camp, the C.P.R. would add between [illegible] and 1,500 miles of new circuits. The appropriation for the work has not yet been made, but [illegible] miles is a conservative estimate of the amount of new circuits to be installed. Most of this new mileage will be on Western lines as the main lines of the eastern division are now practically all using the telephone system. The apparatus will be installed on the [illegible] line, but the rest of the installation will probably take place on the lines west of Fort William.

When this next year's installations have been made the C.P.R. will just about lead the world in the number of miles of its lines equipped with the telephone despatching circuits. It has already 4,000 miles of circuits, which places it second on the list of railways using this system, and makes it easily the leading railway in Canada in this respect.

Can't Hide Money

While Mr. Dodge, of St. Louis, has often been in Kansas City, St. Joseph, Dubuque, and other widely known middle western cities, he has never been termed loose in a city that counts its population up in the millions. Therefore, he is worried a little about the way he would act in New York.

Recently a New York friend received a letter from the St. Louis man, asking for a little information. Among other things he wrote:

"Shall I carry my money in my belt or in a shoe?"

"It doesn't make any difference," replied the friend. "You can't hide money in New York."

Young M. C. Club Dance

The progressive euchre and dance held Friday evening under the auspices of the Young Men's Conservative Club was a pronounced success. There were over 150 people present and all had a thoroughly good time. The first part of the evening was devoted to euchre, some twenty tables being arranged for the tourneys. The ladies' prize was won by Mrs. A. H. Edwards and the gentleman's prize by T. D. Collinson. The former was a handsome ladies' hand bag and the latter a fine pair of military brushes. The consolation award went to Mr. Frank Lawes of Wellsfield. Refreshments were served in the dining rooms, which were kindly lent to the visitors for the evening. The dancing was concluded at 2 o'clock, when all joined in singing the "Home Sweet Home" waltz everybody was agreed upon the event having one of the most enjoyable functions held in Vermilion.

The committee in charge, Messrs Morgan, Payne, West and Kennedy are to be congratulated on the thorough manner in which they had carried out and the unstinted success of the affair.

Kearney-Harvey Entertainers

When we say that the Kearney-Harvey Entertainers are coming, we feel sure that there's not one of us who in the west has not laughed at the remind duets and songs thoroughly appreciated the change-ter sketches—and be delightfully entertained by the witticisms and impersonations as presented by the heads of the company. This year the two are stronger and better than ever for they have an assisting artist Frank Bilegy, instrument-alist and Dorothy Hall, the Toronto Soprano. On Harvey and Mr. Will Davis, a charming young lady, a glorious voice. This will positively contain new programs and if you don't like Hugh and Will's unique good music, it must be a very critical audience that is pleased. Watch for bills.

PONY ON THE FARM.

He's an "Anaemic Little Feller," but Also Useful.

Only the farmers who own ponies realize how much these little animals do toward making farm life easier. As a rule, the Shetland is too small to be of much use, but when it is crossed with a larger breed the result is a strong, vigorous pony that not only can furnish fun for the children, but can do enough work to more than pay for its board and care. Unlike the larger work animals, a pony can be used for light tasks when it is a yearling and thus become profitable when very young.

A pony requires very little feed. One that was pastured on a medium sized lawn had all it could do to keep the grass trimmed. If the animal is put out to browse in fence corners or along the road he will forage for himself until late in the fall and will require very little feed even when shut up in bad weather. If there is no room in the barn a rough shed will furnish shelter

From the Italian Point of View Only However.

In the downtown district of Chicago there is a restaurant which makes a specialty of serving a business men's luncheon at an unusually low price, the meal consisting of meat, a cup of coffee and a side dish of vegetables.

One of the customers of the place became indignant because macaroni had been served as a side dish every day for a week. Calling the manager, the aggrieved customer said:

"John, you have macaroni here too often and so."

"You are right, sir," quite right," agreed the manager.

"I don't want to pose as a kicker," explained the customer, "but—"

"Say no more about it, I beg," entreated the manager. "I'll have it changed at once."

Then he called to the head waiter and said:

"Tell the chef he has macaroni too often. Tomorrow we will make a change. We will have spaghetti."—Popular Magazine.

Hesitatingly he told her of his disappointments, the obstacles he had met and overcome, avoiding Marsh's name and refraining from placing the blame where it belonged. When he had concluded she shook her head.

"It is too bad. But Mr. Marsh told us all about it before you came, Boyd. I never thought well of this enterprise. Of course I didn't say anything against it, you were so enthusiastic, but you really ought to try something big. I am sure you have the ability. Why, the successful men I know at home have no more intelligence than you, and they haven't half your force. As for this—well, I think you can accomplish more important things than catching fish."

"Important!" he cried. "Why, the salmon industry is one of the most important on the coast. It employs 10,000 men in Alaska alone, and they produce $10,000,000 every year."

PERKINS EXPLAINS

Tells Him Why He Buys Flour by the Sack.

HE DELVES INTO PHILOSOPHY

Mary Ramona Astonishes Him by Refusing Him Even a Dance—Perkins Is Made to Mourn, the Principal One Being That It Cost Him His First Wife—One Perkins Endured.

By St. GUAD.

(Copyright, 1910, by the Associated Literary Press.)

MR. AND MRS. PERKINS sat before their evening breakfast, and all was content, when Mrs. Perkins suddenly observed:

"I declare I must be getting forgetful. I meant to have told you this afternoon that the flour was out."

"I will order a sack tomorrow," replied Mr. Perkins without interest.

Mrs. Perkins said no more for five minutes, and she had something on her mind. Her thirty years of married life had taught her all about the room and family relations.

"We have been married about five years," she observed.

"Four years, eleven months and twenty-two days," replied Mr. Perkins after counting his memory about him.

"And the first flour you bought after we started keeping house was a twenty-pound sack."

"I remember as well as if it happened only yesterday."

"You came up the street lugging it on your shoulder."

"I asked you why you didn't buy a barrel and have it sent up, and you said you could carry it."

"I remember."

Flour in Small Sacks.

"But you have never done it. At intervals you have been lugging sacks home. Every one stored in the cellar where they went and were a long time using. Why don't you buy a barrel?"

"Ah, I'll tell you why," said Mrs. Perkins as she cleared for hand sweep to do again.

Most Ordered Himself.

"But, my dear, you have not answered. I have been charged with the most serious offense of buying flour by the sack instead of the barrel. You are the party to hear the case. I must go on with my defense."

"Certainly, now and then I barrel a dollar or so of a neighbor to help me out of a pinch. I don't always pay it back in money, and sometimes I don't. If he owes a twenty-five pound sack of flour comes here he knows I am a hard up. If he owes a barrel of flour he will pay it when the carriage-due man, thinking I am on the same footing. You reason full to see that there is a difference."

"Eighteen there is a vast difference in going into a grocery and ordering a barrel of flour and a small sack. When I buy a barrel I have to order it, and I say barrel the grocer goes a jar. When you say sack he takes chances."

"And I've married a man who can't see a barrel of flour!" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins.

Constitution in Groups.

"But my wife says that the barrel costs a man whose capital is constitution temporarily tied up. There are times when Mr. Rockefeller has to run into four by the sack, and he would repair the roof of the smokehouse himself rather than have the carpenter stand. Some days a capitalist has millions at his command, again he has to beat the street car. I will now go."

"Slightly, between the time you get a twenty-five pound sack of flour and one it no there may be no great advance or decline in the price, but it does you buy a whole barrel you may find yourself as much as a dollar the loser. A dollar isn't much to lose at one time, but suppose you go on and buy a thousand barrels of flour and lose each time?"

"Twenty."

"And you call this philosophy?" said Mrs. Perkins as she rose up.

Don Reuben Is Wanted.

"The jury will please keep quiet," he answered. "I did not intend making my defense. As I was about to say:

"Thirdly, four keg in a barrel is found to deteriorate. It must lose more or less of its quality in position. If hobnuts, crumbs and crop bones, as a rule, are found in the bottom of sack and other things are spotted into it because a sack is not a barrel. Perhaps, suppose I am selling a hot barrel against a cold one, and perhaps such a thing is not likely to happen, but suppose it happens? Suppose I can convert that was dropped into the four kernel. What is the use? Suppose I can't open it to your face room. Didn't answer me impertinently without due thought, but take half an hour to think over it. When I say that I am ignored we will take no impertinently."

Then I'll never answer," interrupted Mrs. I as she flounced out of the room.

"Come!" called Mr. Perkins to the bedroom after her. "Come and see me serve home thick."

"Decidedly, I must reduce it, sacks to ten pounds after this order to my capital thinking that up to it."

The Sympathetic Burglar.

"I woke up suddenly the other night and found I couldn't sleep. I went into the room. I sat up in bed, and that awoke my wife."

"What did she say?"

"She swooned me, as a usual, of having a burglar bug. Said I'd never have a real burglar if I lived a thousand years. I told I'd have one right away, she'd bet I wouldn't. And just then a burglar's new rose from the bed the dresser and a banana voice exclaimed, 'He wins, my pup!'"

"Oh, you must be joking!"

"Cross my heart! I don't try. I just laid down and laughed and heard him step on the door and rap me over the head and say, by wife was so mad she didn't have any of a whack for! But I'll bet one thing."

"What is it?"

"I'll bet that burglar was a married man."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Where they went I did not see a man, and the cashier said he had gone to supper.

"Oh, he'll not go!" said Mrs. Perkins as she cleared for hand sweep to do again.

Most Ordered Himself.

"But, my dear, you have not answered. I have been charged with the most serious offense of buying flour by the sack instead of the barrel. You are the party to hear the case. I must go on with my defense."

"Certainly, now and then I barrel a dollar or so of a neighbor to help me out of a pinch. I don't always pay it back in money, and sometimes I don't. If he owes a twenty-five pound sack of flour comes here he knows I am a hard up. If he owes a barrel of flour he will pay it when the carriage-due man, thinking I am on the same footing. You reason full to see that there is a difference."

"Eighteen there is a vast difference in going into a grocery and ordering a barrel of flour and a small sack. When I buy a barrel I have to order it, and I say barrel the grocer goes a jar. When you say sack he takes chances."

"And I've married a man who can't see a barrel of flour!" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins.

Constitution in Groups.

"But my wife says that the barrel costs a man whose capital is constitution temporarily tied up. There are times when Mr. Rockefeller has to run into four by the sack, and he would repair the roof of the smokehouse himself rather than have the carpenter stand. Some days a capitalist has millions at his command, again he has to beat the street car. I will now go."

"Slightly, between the time you get a twenty-five pound sack of flour and one it no there may be no great advance or decline in the price, but it does you buy a whole barrel you may find yourself as much as a dollar the loser. A dollar isn't much to lose at one time, but suppose you go on and buy a thousand barrels of flour and lose each time?"

"Twenty."

"And you call this philosophy?" said Mrs. Perkins as she rose up.

Don Reuben Is Wanted.

"The jury will please keep quiet," he answered. "I did not intend making my defense. As I was about to say:

"Thirdly, four keg in a barrel is found to deteriorate. It must lose more or less of its quality in position. If hobnuts, crumbs and crop bones, as a rule, are found in the bottom of sack and other things are spotted into it because a sack is not a barrel. Perhaps, suppose I am selling a hot barrel against a cold one, and perhaps such a thing is not likely to happen, but suppose it happens? Suppose I can convert that was dropped into the four kernel. What is the use? Suppose I can't open it to your face room. Didn't answer me impertinently without due thought, but take half an hour to think over it. THE STANDARD

VERMILION, ALTA., FEB. 14, 1912

Query? Is Premier Sifton really in earnest about his railway policy, or is he just "[illegible]" up some constituencies, including his own, with an eye on elections? What's the answer? — Vegreville Observer.

It takes quite a [illegible] to [illegible] up some of our esteemed [illegible] people, but the Sifton railway policy as applied to this district certainly furnished the jolt last week. — Vegreville Observer.

The Observer is not overpleased with the railway outlook for Vegreville. Certainly it has nothing to be pleased at but it is not to be expected that every town on the line can be a strategic railway centre. By the building of the cut-off from Bruderheim to Vermilion, the C.N.R. are shortening their line between these points by some 20 miles. This can mean only one thing [illegible] Vegreville will ultimately [illegible] line — this is [illegible] is unfortunate for [illegible] certain respects. In [illegible] of the transcontinental [illegible] the shortest and most direct routes must be selected, and it will be from no other than this natural cause that our sister town will be sidetracked. The questioning of the earnestness of premier Sifton about his railway policy, etc. has nothing to do with the unfortunate geographical location of Vegreville relative to the future railway expansion of the province of Alberta.

The railway policy [illegible] mentioned is bringing Vermilion nearer to the goal it is destined to fill as one of the large and important railway and trade centres of south-eastern Alberta, [illegible] a city of no small importance. As the first divisional point on the [illegible] of the C.N.R. being 120 [illegible] east of the city of Edmonton, it was destined from the very outset to play a prominent part in the railway development which in time was to follow in the opening up of the vast resources of the country. That this time is near at hand there is no doubt. With the completion of the Bruderheim-Vermilion-Medicine Hat line [illegible] the [illegible] trade from [illegible] [illegible] for [illegible] the point the town [illegible] will be on the great transcontinental system, and with the construction of the C.P.R. [illegible] line the growth of Vermilion will be equaled only by the phenomenal growth which accompanied the [illegible] railway development of the city of Saskatoon.

Permanent Tariff Commission

The second reading of the bill to create a permanent tariff commission passed the house of commons on a division last week. It was strenuously opposed by the Liberal members, largely on the grounds that the commission would be dominated by protective interests. Premier Borden in closing the debate for the government made it clear to the opposition that the days of the government being tied down to corporate interests were over and that the conservative party would see to it that under the commission the people would get the square deal denied them by the late government. The Minister of Finance, Mr. White, stated it was not the intention to take the tariff out of politics. The purpose of the commission was to gather data upon which the government would frame the legislation necessary. [illegible] the tariff had been [illegible] definite basis what [illegible] under the tariff commission the government would have the evidence before it upon which to [illegible] as to what [illegible] the best interests of the people as a whole. There is such a commission in the United States and President Taft has stated that it is a mighty engine [illegible] tariff and it is [illegible] Canada will have similar experience with her Commission. The Borden government, in creating this Board is only fulfilling one more of its pledges to the people.

Correction

[illegible] has been called [illegible] which appeared in [illegible] issue as copied from an [illegible] paper. It was in connection with an unfortunate family [illegible] Vermilion. The facts [illegible] who has been [illegible] years and quite unable [illegible] her household work was under the direction of the Attorney-General's department removed to the hospital at Vegreville for treatment and three of the children were taken to Edmonton and placed in the care of the Children's Aid department until such time as the mother would be able to take care of them. The family are in very poor circumstances largely owing to the prolonged illness of the mother but the Standard is advised they were not at all suffering from want of food as the neighbours helped them all they could in this respect. The father is waiting his trial on the charge of arson and his solicitor advises us that he procured an order to admit him to bail several weeks ago, but was unable to get bondsmen until a few days ago and he expects the man to be liberated in the course of the week. The Standard is pleased to have the correct facts placed before its readers in connection with this unfortunate case.

Theodor Petersen has sold his farm located about 9 miles northeast of Islay for a sum which was close to $20 per acre. This is a 320 acre farm with 200 acres broken. Mr. Petersen is an old timer in the country and will probably purchase other land.

The people of Vermilion were privileged to enjoy a first class entertainment Saturday night when the Ken[illegible] entertainers appeared at the Royal George theatre. The program throughout was of a most pleasing nature and Mr. Bert Harvey proved himself the star of entertainers.

John Young, formerly of the Bank of Commerce staff here now of [illegible], Sask., writing the Standard says that part of the country is an old settled one and for a good time is A1. Wheat seems to bring a much larger price, farmers shipping their grain direct instead of through the elevators.

R. G. Dunsmore has sold his interests in the implement business to E. H. Naylor. Mr. Naylor has contracted with the Frost & Wood Co. and will carry a complete stock of their goods, a large stock of repairs and extras will be kept constantly on hand which will be appreciated by the farmers of the locality.

The bankers played the "All Stars" a strenuous game of hockey Tuesday afternoon, and after a close and most exciting contest won by 2 goals the final score being 7-5. The Stars intend to turn the tables in the return match on Tuesday, Feb. 19th at 3.30 sharp. Another match is down for Thursday when the Englishmen meet the Canadians, all hockey players are barred.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's English church Islay, Wednesday, Feb. 7th. Rev. Mr Paul officiating, when Ethel Alice, daughter of W. Waterfield, formerly of Vermilion, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to John Leonard MacNeely of Islay. May Maggs of Vermilion, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, the bride being given away by her father.

All members of the Young Men's Conservative Club who are desirous of joining the proposed card tournament are requested to hand in their names to the secretary, James Kennedy, or to W. H. Hyndman at the rooms, on or before Monday evening next, signifying their choice of euchre, whist or cribbage. Prizes will be given and playing begins on Tuesday evening next. An admission fee of 25c will be charged to enter the tournament.

SYSTEMIC CATARRH RELIEVED BY PERUNA.

My Husband Also Uses Peruna.

Mrs. Della May Nam... this testimonial ... Tipton, Ind., writes The Peruna Co., as follows:

"Eight ... Peruna completely cured me of systemic catarrh ... and my husband feels ... if either of us catch cold we at once take Peruna."

Stomach Trouble.

Mrs. W... Robinson, 7.. ... St., ... writes:

"I feel like a new person. I have no more heavy feelings, no more pain, ... can eat most anything ... I want to be working all the time. I have gained twenty-four pounds.

"People that see me now and saw me two months ago are astonished. I tell them Peruna did it. I will say it is the only remedy for spring and all other ailments."

... all deadly stupid, and I'm wretchedly tired of it. Father is the worst of ... of course."

Emerson's eyes shifted to his own cannery. "You haven't seen mine, ... " said he.

"Oh, yes, I have. Mr. Marsh pointed it out to father and me. It looks like all the others." There was an instant's pause before she ran on. "... you know, there is only one interesting feature about them, to my notion, and that is the way the Chinamen smoke. Those funny crooked pipes and those little wads of tobacco are too ridiculous." The lightness of her words damped his ardor and brought back the sense of failure.

"I was down with the fishing fleet at the mouth of the bay this morning when you came in. I thought I might see you," he said.

"At that hour? Heavens! I was sound asleep. It was hard enough to get up when we were called. Father might have instructed the captain not to steam so fast."

Boyd stared at her in hurt surprise, but she was smiling at Alton Clyde in the distance and did not observe his look.

"Don't you care even to hear what I have done?" he inquired.

"Of course," said Mildred, bringing her eyes back to him.

Delightful Travelling, But—

Henry Clews, at a dinner in Newport, said of American travelling:—

"It is delightful to travel in America, but I think that American porters handle our luggage a little too roughly.

"Once at a certain station, I was amused and pleased to hear a uniformed official shout to a burly porter,

"'Hi, what are you knockin' them trunks about like that for?'

"The porter had been lifting great trunks above his head and hurling them down on the floor furiously, but now he stopped stock still in astonishment.

"'What's that, boss?' he said.

"'What you mean by knockin' trunks about like that?' repeated the official..."

Concrete Sidewalks are Safe, Sightly and Everlasting

LUMBER used in damp places and on wet ground ... for instance, as walks ... has a very short life. It requires almost constant repairing and, in a few years, needs replacing.

Concrete, on the other hand, improves with age, and the very dampness which destroys lumber cells out the best qualities of the cement by making it harder and harder until neither time nor traffic can affect it.

The best wooden walks keep getting out of repair and are a constant source of expense. Concrete walks ... and ... are sightly, everlasting and safe. They cost less to build and need no repairing nor painting.

Write for our free book "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"

It tells in plain simple language, how you can save money on farm construction by using cement for Barns, Dairies, Foundations, Fence Posts, Troughs, Feeding Floors, Hitching Posts, Stalls, Silos, Stairs and so forth. The Book is well illustrated with photographs, plans and diagrams. Fill out the coupon or send a postal to-day.

The Union Bank Has a Record Year

Head Office to be Moved to Winnipeg

The Union Bank of Canada held its 47th Annual Meeting at the Head Office in Quebec on Monday December the 18th, 1911. The meeting was a memorable one for several reasons. In the first place, the reports presented by the President and General Manager were the best in the bank's history and reflected the fact that several progressive steps had been taken during the year. At the meeting it was also decided to remove the Head Office from Quebec to Winnipeg. This was decided ... owing to the fact that out of the total of ... branches the bank has ... west of Lake Superior and ... in Ontario, ... the Province of Quebec and the Eastern Provinces. The decision on the part of the directors and shareholders to move the head office to Winnipeg is a recognition of the growing importance of the west.

... after deducting expenses of management and making provision for all bad and doubtful debts amounted to $662,... compared with $...,... for the previous year ... the balance at credit of account ... November 30th amounted to $... These sums with the net earnings for the year made a total of $1,1..,... available for distribution ...

The Lamp That Saves The Eyes

Children naturally never think of possible strain on their eyesight when poring over a fascinating book.

It is up to you to see they do not ruin their young eyes these long evenings by reading under a poor light.

The Rayo Lamp is an insurance against eye troubles, alike for young and old.

The Rayo is a low-priced lamp, but it is constructed on the soundest scientific principles, and there is not a better lamp made at any price.

It gives out the eye because its light is so soft and white and widely diffused. And a Rayo Lamp never flickers.

The SILVER HORDE

By REX BEACH,
Author of "The Spoilers" and "The Iron Trail"

Colonade, 1909 by Harper & Brothers for years, but I never seen the likes of it. They'd line that trap to perfection. They've camebering in the pot, nets and most of 'em, with millions more waiting before the locals became they can't get in. It's a sight you'll not see once in a lifetime."

"That means that we can run the claims?" Dan asked, with a sinking heart.

"Hey, you've got fish enough to run three companies. That's no reason they don't want you to get to work. Why—"

"But we've been working for months!" Dan protested.

"Sorry, but I'm only obeying orders. Them's the rules, and I can't help it. I'm not the one that's responsible for 'em."

"Then you mean that we can't work?" Dan asked, with a sinking heart.

"Not unless you get to work mighty quick."

"Where's the inspector?"

"He's gone."

"Gone!" Dan echoed, aghast.

"Yes, gone. He's been gone for a week. He's up the river by this time."

"Then we've been robbed!" Dan cried, springing to his feet.

"Keep your hair on, young feller. There ain't any call to get excited. You've got plenty of time. Them rules don't go into effect for another month."

"But I've been waiting for him!" Dan protested.

"Well, he's been waiting for you, too, and he got tired and went back to the States. He'll be up here again next year, I reckon."

"Next year!" Dan echoed, dazed by the blow.

"Yes, next year. Now, if you'll excuse me, I'm busy."

Dan turned away, and as he walked down the street he was conscious of the curious glances that were directed at him. He was dimly aware that Mr. Hoadley was standing in the doorway of the store, and that Mr. Woodley was with him, but he could not bring himself to speak to them. He was overwhelmed by the disaster that had befallen him, and he could not realize that it was true. He had been robbed of his claims, and he had been robbed of Mary Hoadley. He had lost everything that he had worked for, and he had lost it through his own folly. He had been warned, and he had refused to heed the warning. He had been told that he must be on the ground when the inspector arrived, and he had failed to be there. He had been told that he must not leave the claims, and he had left them. He had been told that he must not speak to Mary Hoadley, and he had spoken to her. He had been told that he must not kiss her, and he had kissed her. He had been told that he must not marry her, and he had married her. He had been told that he must not take her away from her father, and he had taken her away. He had been told that he must not—

He stopped suddenly, and a groan escaped his lips. There was no use thinking of it. He had done it, and he must bear the consequences. He must tell Mary that he had lost the claims, and that he had lost her. He must tell her that he was a fool, and that he was sorry. He must tell her that he loved her, and that he would love her always. He must tell her that he would wait for her, and that he would work for her, and that he would win her back. He must tell her that he would never give up hope, and that he would never give up her. He must tell her that he would never forget her, and that he would never forget the time they had spent together. He must tell her that he would never forget the kiss they had exchanged. He must tell her that he would never forget the look in her eyes when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the sound of her voice when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the feel of her hand in his when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the taste of her lips when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the smell of her hair when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the sight of her face when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the sound of her laugh when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the feel of her arms around him when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the taste of her kisses when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the smell of her perfume when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the sight of her tears when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the sound of her sobs when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the feel of her heart beating against his when she had told him that she loved him. He must tell her that he would never forget the taste of her tears

VERMILION, ALTA., FEB. 21, 1912

The Standard is in receipt of information to the effect that the people of Medicine Hat have had assurances from their member that work on the C.N.R. line south from Vermilion to that point will commence this year. The Hat is working harder for the construction of the road than we are up at Vermilion. Prospects for a busy railroad [illegible] are very bright [illegible].

[illegible] of Agr[illegible] [illegible] E. D. Eddy, B.S.A., from reports of seed inspections [illegible] with the Victoria Electoral District [illegible] [illegible] Can. Nor. Railway, from Lloydminster west to Islay. Around Lloydminster a number of farmers have wheat that grades No. 3 but there are practically no seed oats from the 1911 crop available. It is estimated that [illegible] about 10,000 bu. [illegible] than can be pro[illegible] [illegible] meet seed requirements. The most serious phase of the situation as viewed by the people in this district is the lack of money to buy seed, even in cases where it is available in the districts. Those who are fortunate enough to have seed grain for sale in many cases consider it necessary to sell at market prices rather than hold for seed, the reason being that there is little prospect of being able to get cash payment from their neighbours who need seed. It is almost certain that unless some measure of assistance is given a large percentage of the land in this district will have to go unseeded next spring. It is estimated that not more than 10 per cent of the farmers have seed grain. At Vermilion conditions are somewhat better although there is a large percentage of frosted grain, there will probably be sufficient seed procurable in the immediate district although some assistance may be required in financing the situation. In the vicinity of Vegreville the 1911 crop is badly frosted but the situation is somewhat relieved by the fact that considerable oats have been carried over from 1910 and will be available for seed. North of the town in the Whitford and Hairy Hill districts, the crop is reported to have escaped serious injury. A sample of oats from Ross Creek further west germinates 81 per, and a considerable number of samples from various parts of the constituency also give satisfactory tests.

St. Paul To Last West Wilkie C.P.R. Pivot

Important Official Documents Have Been Filed by Canadian Pacific Railway Company At The Local Land Titles Office

At the land titles office in Saskatoon there has just recently been placed on official record new and authoritative evidence of the far reaching plans of the Canadian Pacific railway to link up St Paul, Chicago and other important commercial centres of the United States with the Last Great West—that empire area of the MacKenzie watershed with its thousands acres of rich prairie wheatland, its wide stretches of parkland suited to ranching, stock raising and mixed farming, its untold wealth of mineral deposits, of asphalt, of coal, of copper and its teeming supplies of fresh-water fish, furs and lumber.

On January 29th there was deposited at the land titles office [illegible] [illegible] profile and book [illegible] C.P.R. line from [illegible] covering the location from [illegible] which shows the [illegible] which the [illegible] [illegible] prairies, with at [illegible] Lloydminster, and [illegible] importance [illegible] to play in the big game of annexing the last large undeveloped and still unsettled area of North America.

The Battleford Plans

Another plan and profile was deposited in the Battleford land titles office on Jan. 22nd, which shows the location of another section of this route, being a portion of the line northwest from Wilkie and covering a location reaching to township 51. This plan is entered as number 161 in the office records, and covered a considerable portion of the route, [illegible] with the line southeast [illegible] up [illegible] connection via Moose Jaw and [illegible] line, a through connection from Wilkie and the territory north and west [illegible] Chicago.

These plans are making plain to the public of western Canada a fact that has long been a well-known to the greatest business organization in Canada, that Edmonton lies two hundred miles too far west of the logical and natural short trunk line from the centres of population of America and the vast treasure house of natural resources awaiting development in the MacKenzie Basin.

While Edmonton, situated in the Saskatchewan basin and Athabasca Landing, on the headwaters of the MacKenzie were supply points and half-way houses on the old canoe route from one waterway to the other these centres in an age of railway transportation are found to be much misplaced they are not on the direct line of railway traffic between the great centres of consumption and the new and vast area of untapped resources. Like Fort Carlton, Battleford, Prince Albert, Fort Qu'Appelle and other Hudson Bay posts of pioneer days when canoes and dog trains furnished the means of transport, these centres will find their usefulness gone once trunk lines of steel carry the traffic.

The Line Northwest

The line from Wilkie northwest, headed for Fort McMurray at the head of boat navigation on the Athabasca river, and beyond which are several thousand miles of easily navigable waterway threading the vast prairies of the Peace River country, tapping the enormous fish preserves of the great northern lakes, the great ore deposits and the immense asphalt fields of the McMurray and McKay regions, will no doubt be pushed energetically. The prolonged hesitation of the C.P.R in not entering Edmonton, and the absence of any C.P.R plans to build northward from there to the last El-Dorado of the north were not proofs of inactivity. Both the C. P. R. surveyors and the explorers of the railway lands branch of the department of the Interior were busy. The line of shortest mileage, best grades, most local traffic with good agricultural land all along the [illegible] has at last been found. The road is rapidly being located and the links constructed. The meaning of the enormous prominent terminal facilities of the C. P. R. at Wilkie, laid down a year or two in advance of actual needs while construction at Vancouver, Calgary and Winnipeg was delayed and the traffic at those points allowed to outgrow the facilities and produce a grain blockade, is now apparent to the student of railway strategy who studies his geography and keeps in touch with the development of the New North West.

Advantages of Mixed Farming

The advantages of mixed farming over exclusive grain growing have been clearly brought out in last year conditions. In the districts where mixed farming is followed, the crop was mostly put in early and good seed has been produced in nearly all cases. Where the grain has been injured for market good use can be made of it by feeding to stock, so that the loss is not nearly as heavy as where it has to be sold on the market. In the mixed farming districts also there is not the same difficulty in keeping weeds in check. Many early settlers make a very serious mistake in adopting an exclusive grain growing system and starting this by seeding their virgin soil with flax, which is very often badly contaminated with noxious weed seeds.

NEW LIGHT ON COST OF LIVING

Food Products, Not Manufactures, Are the Articles High in Price

Mr. F. W. Field, Editor of "The Monetary Times," Toronto, in a recent article says

"A significant fact in connection with the volume of talk and discussion that has originated from that hackneyed topic the cost of living, is that in Canada the chief complaint is made against the high prices of food products, and not so much against manufactured articles. This circumstance is made plain when one begins to seek data regarding the comparative cost to the consumer in the United States and Canada of household furniture, crockery, stoves and other articles of domestic use. While every Government report gives plenty of information about grains and fodder, animals and meats, dairy produce, fish and other foods, there is a remarkable paucity of material showing the cost of certain staple manufactured products. These reports, which happen to be more elaborate in their record of the output and consumption of manufactures give but few examples in each class of goods. For instance, the report on wholesale prices for 1910 published by the United States Government gives figures relating to furniture under the following heads only—bedroom suites, bedroom chairs, kitchen chairs and kitchen tables. The natural deduction from all this is simply that there has been little or no demand for such information, due largely to the fact that no one seems to be greatly dissatisfied with the prices of [illegible] ordinary household art[illegible] made in the factory. The increase [illegible] of living to live appears to be [illegible] the above of the great economic [illegible] which is [illegible] the [illegible] ment.

It is sometimes contended that the housewife in Canada because of our tariff cannot obtain furniture and other domestic necessities as cheaply as can be purchased in the United States. The official facts and figures available show that in this direction there is little if any cause for complaint. Canada has been more fortunate than some countries for the tendency in the past decade has been one of decline in the prices of bedsteads, crockery, glassware, table cutlery and silver plated ware. It is interesting to analyze this situation [illegible] Mr R. H. Coats has [illegible] special [illegible] [illegible] Canada [illegible] quotations for [illegible] represent a [illegible] lines of furniture viz kitchen [illegible] and chairs, dining room [illegible] sideboards bedroom suites and [illegible] bedsteads. In all lines of [illegible] furniture a steady and pronounced rise occurred in [illegible] [illegible]

Communication

Dear Sir,

As I happen to live in the north, my attention is drawn to the creamery building every time I come to town and every time I start back home [illegible]. I cannot help thinking what a great many must see this [illegible] and what do they think [illegible]. What can a visitor think of the district when he sees it? Why is the creamery idle? Although there is no doubt it was built a little too soon here is no doubt [illegible] at least) that it would pay now.

From the number of cream cans one sees constantly being shipped to Edmonton it would not be an unreasonable statement to make [illegible] enough cream passes the creamery door to keep it going [illegible]. As a local institution [illegible] always more popular, [illegible] [illegible] on an equality [illegible] outside one, it is also safe to say, that were our creamery going, more [illegible] than ever would be produced. This would mean more local money. It would mean outside money in the spring and summer when a grain farmer is usually short. It would also look well and that is something.

Now Mr. Editor, I have no thought of saying how this should be accomplished, but I will make a suggestion or two in the hope that enough interest in the creamery will be aroused to get the right people at work. Never mind the reasons why it has been idle in the past, that does not concern us now. What we are interested in, is, that it shall work this summer and satisfactorily too.

What's the matter with the town taking hold of it? There is as much, nay a great deal more reason why the town can look after a proposition of this sort than a government can. Whatever good can be got out of that creamery will help every man in Vermilion, won't it? This is Vermilion's creamery and the district's creamery.

As all money is invested in it too. Even if a slight loss were made at first it would be better to have it running. It is more necessary than the electric light plant. However there is no reason why a loss should be made and [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

Thanking you Mr. Editor for [illegible] [illegible]

MODERN MAN-KILLING MACHINES WILL NOT PREVENT WAR

They who think that modern improvements in implements of war will have the effect of decreasing the possibilities of war reckon without regarding the lessons taught by modern wars. Many persons thought that the very destructiveness of modern weapons would so scare the nations that they would hesitate about provoking war or commencing hostilities. Long range rifles with equipment for accurate sighting; cannon that would shoot hell into the enemy's camp, armed cruisers impervious to shot yet mounted with guns capable of destroying anything, torpedo boats and submarines stinging like wasps; all these were the things that were going to do away with the necessity for their own use. We were told that fifteen years ago, but the Spanish American wars have come and gone, and what tribute did they pay to modern invention? Nothing whatever. The "big butchers bills" of the Napoleonic, Crimean, or the American Civil War, fought with the antiquated weapons that were to become obsolete, have not been equalled in recent wars. The awful destructiveness predicted did not forthcome. Even in naval fights, where so much was expected, there was nothing doing of especial importance. The mines that were to "smite the mass" did but little destruction. The guns of the American fleet trained on Morro castle killed only a Cuban mule. Dewey evaded the mines, sailed into Manila harbor, and called his gallant men from the awful conflict to breakfast.

The advantage of modern warships was more in evidence in the Sea of Japan, but victory was as usual, with the man who struck quickly and often. The palm goes to tactics and strategy rather than to science and invention. The "awful destructiveness" of modern engines of war was missing. If there was increased facilities for saving life. Perhaps the "big butchers bill" has been reduced by modern methods of fighting. The line of battle at Waterloo was ten miles long, at Mukden it was ninety. Troops fight now in extended order instead of in close formation or in solid squares as at Waterloo. A lot of bullets go to waste now that could not miss a mark if men were massed. ...

Corns cannot exist when Holloway's Corn Cure is applied to them, because it goes to the root and kills the growth.

The failure of these refined instruments of death to produce results should make us skeptical of the use of air ships in future battles. Tennyson's vision of "airy navies grappling in the central blue" is all right as a dream, but although it is hazardous to discount invention yet I doubt if it ever emerges from the dream condition. War, at any rate, is not to be done away with by fleets of airships dropping lyddite shells into crowded cities, or into the strong walled fortifications of the enemy. The really potent influence for the prevention of war is what Burns called the "ammunition of expense."

Preparing for war is costly enough ... If as Norman Angell says, the nations learn that the victor is no better off in the end than the vanquished, ... the prospect of prolonged peace will become brighter. ...

Obituary

Although not unexpected, the news of the death on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 12th of Miss Mattie M. Robinson, daughter of Mr. John Robinson, town, was learned with deep regret and profound sorrow by all. A resident of the town for the past five years she was well known and respected by everyone, her life was devoted to the work of her Master and her end was peace. For four years the deceased was organist at the Church of Christ and took an active and untiring part in all church and temperance work, filling the position of secretary of the W. C. T. U. for the first two years after the organization of the Vermilion branch. Four months ago she became the victim of acute tuberculosis and gradually sank until she passed peacefully away on Wednesday last. The funeral services were held in the Presbyterian Church on Friday last, Feb. 15th and were conducted by the Rev. J. E. Tyner and Rev. Wm. Simons. Interment was made in the Vermilion Cemetery.

Town Council

The regular monthly meeting of the town council was held Monday night. Councillors MacKenzie and Brimacombe being the only members of the board absent. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Sec. was authorized to call for tenders for supply of coal for electric light plant.

Motion was put and carried that Sec. ... for the town as under the new act the "Municipality" is dropped, it now reading "Town of Vermilion."

H. Service was engaged as fireman for the town electric plant at $... per month.

The Municipal Electric Light plant is expected to be on an operating basis the early part of next week. As the days have lengthened out considerably, the council decided to make a radical change in the schedule of rates so that everyone in the town may become connected up and be given the light at an insignificant charge. Everyone will have the privilege of a meter rate from 1 light up. The minimum charge struck is as follows:

1 to 8	16 c.p. lights	$1.00 month
9 to 15		1.25
16 to 30		1.75
31 to 50		3.00
51 and over		4.00

After the passing of a number of accounts the meeting adjourned.

LOCAL NEWS.

Summer weather is still with us and early though it may seem, local dealers have already made several deliveries in farm machinery.

Mrs. Hume of Vancouver, late of Edmonton, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. W. J. Macnab at Cummings. She returned to the city Wednesday night.

During the next thirty days H. L. Craig, the auctioneer, will conduct 13 auction sales throughout this and surrounding districts. See his adv. on front page for location and dates.

R. Fawcett, of the Royal Bank staff, has left for his holidays which will be spent in the East, afterwards he will take up his duties at the Medicine Hat branch. Mr. Meahan has arrived in town from the office at Craik, Sask., to enter the bank here.

A platform meeting will be held in the Methodist church next Sunday evening at the regular hour of service 7:30. Addresses on the different phases of the proposed union between the Congregational, Presbyterian and Methodist churches, will be given by Dr. Ryan, F. H. Barker and H. L. Craig.

F. A. Morrison For Important Work

Vegreville Barrister Will Assist in The Freight Rate Investigation

OTTAWA, Feb. 1?. That the government intends to make the freight investigation as thorough and as complete as possible is shown by the fact that two additional counsels have been appointed to assist C. W. Whitelaw of Winnipeg. They are L. A. ?evenet of Toronto and F. A. Morrison of Vegreville, Alberta. Mr. Dervenet is one of the leaders of the Ontario bar, and has had large experience in investigations. F. A. Morrison is a brilliant young Alberta lawyer.

The work is so extensive that it is impossible for one man to handle it. Mr. Dervenet was in Ottawa today, and had a conference with Mr. Whitelaw. They had a conference with Hon. C. J. Doherty, minister of justice, and Hon. Frank Cochrane.

Mr Whitelaw has gone to Toronto and will be engaged here the remainder of the week. They return Monday for the resumption of the investigation next Tuesday. At that time they will only bring before the commissioners the material papers they wish the railways to furnish. The date of the next meeting and place then will be determined.

Mr. Morrison is expected to ... some time this week.

THE USES OF HORSE HAIR

White Hair Made Into Violin Bows—Black Ones for Variety of Purposes.

The subject of the preparation of horse-hair for commercial purposes is a very attractive one, the process being curious and very elaborate.

The horse-hair arrives in bales, weighing about half a ton each, and valued at $400. The chief sources of supply are Great Britain, North and South America, Australia, Germany, Russia and China. The tails supply the best hair because they are hard, the manes being soft, and therefore of inferior value.

The long hairs are suitable for particular purposes, but those of ordinary length are prepared for stuffing furniture and other upholstering work.

LUCKY THIRTEENTH

The Situation Was Severe, but Dorothy Was Game.

By INA WRIGHT HANSON.

The sky was blue, the ocean bluer and Dorothy's eyes the fairest blue of all. The sand was white, the breeze caressing and Dorothy seemed unusually susceptible. I judged it to be an auspicious time to declare my feelings, so I began:

"Dorothy, dear, I have wealth through no fault of my own, social status quo and a moderately good disposition. I love you. Will you mar"—

To my surprise, Mistress Dorothy sprang to her knees, crying, "Don't, don't!" and clapped her small hand over my mouth.

"Very well, then, I won't," I said.

"Oh, but I want you to!" was the next astounding development, while she dropped down on the sand again, bowed her head and wept.

I thought I was used to Dorothy's moods, but I realized then that my knowledge concerning them was small. As I didn't know what else to do, I just sat still. Finally she raised her head from the sanctuary of her hands and looked at me reproachfully.

"Oh, George, I've been waiting a whole year to hear you say it, and now why couldn't you have said it differently?"

I sat up a little straighter. "How should you wish me to approach the subject?" I inquired coldly.

"Of course you don't understand, poor boy," she sighed, poking back behind her pink ear a little damp brown curl. "I have a chum at home, and we were always thinking of something that no one else would. One day she said, 'Let's make vows.' So we each took a piece of paper and wrote on it a vow which we were bound to keep if we were—were—hanged for it. Nell's vow was"—

"Never mind Nell's vow," I said. "What was yours?"

"I vowed I wouldn't marry a man who didn't propose to me in a way no other man ever did."

"Ever proposed to you?" I asked jealously.

"No, no! Ever proposed to anybody. I vowed, so I have to keep it. Oh, George, I've just lived to have you say it in some strange way!"

"There's no law against a fellow's proposing twice, is there?" I asked.

She looked up eagerly. "Oh, you haven't said it yet, you know! I stopped you. Do you suppose you could think of some original way?"

"Well, I'll try mighty hard. But what a fool thing for you to do anyway!"

"I know it," she acknowledged, with unusual meekness.

As our afternoons at Santa Monica were devoted to the surf, we met again in front of the bathhouse and, hand in hand, walked toward the seething breakers. She looked more charming than ever in her black suit, bonded with scarlet, and a scarlet handkerchief knotted about her small head.

"Heavens, Dorothy, how I love you!" I exclaimed as we emerged from our plunge through the first swell.

"And I love you, too, dear," she murmured, coloring a little. "You will find some way, won't you?"

"Yes, if I have to pick you up some day and run off with you."

"That wouldn't do. Some of the savages behave that way. It isn't the doing anyway; it's the asking."

"Dorothy Allen, see that swell coming? When it gets here I'll hold you under it till there isn't a breath left in your body if you don't say you'll marry me."

"It isn't original," she persisted. "The man Nell's engaged to said at least that."

"Darn the man, and Nell, too!" I said viciously under my breath. I didn't try any more that day, but she allowed me one kiss as we sat on the raft, and that was something.

It would be a wearisome task to relate all the ways in which I tried to propose to Dorothy that summer. I lay awake nights trying to think of some wild and woolly way to ask her to marry me, only to face bitter defeat by being told that some other fellow had, she didn't say me, so I felt fairly confident.

"Echo mountain!" called the conductor. "Change cars for Alpine tavern! Five minutes' wait!"

On the right were the ruins of a hotel, which we went over to observe. Here we found a cannon, mounted and ready for business.

"That," said the man who had been there before, "is fired off occasionally to show the marvelous power of echo. It reverberates here, yonder, to the right, the left, many times over."

I grasped Dorothy's hand and drew her away from the crowd.

"Darling," I whispered, "I'm going back on this car, and I'm going to marry you tonight. Wait here or at the observatory yonder. When you get tired of observing, pick your wedding bouquet, for you will need it as soon as I get back. Goodby, sweetheart." And before she could do anything but stare at me in a half frightened, wholly charming way I had caught the down car and was out of her sight.

Once the car reached Los Angeles I was out, tearing along the sidewalk to the courthouse, where the smiling county clerk favored me with the precious bit of paper which would allow me to wed my Dorothy.

"Do you know anything about any of the preachers in this town?" I asked, wiping my perspiring forehead.

His smile broadened. "Well, if it is a runaway match I shouldn't advise you to tackle the Methodists. A trifle narrow is Mr."—

"It isn't a runaway match," I answered hastily, "but for certain reasons I want the services of a young man."

"Mr. B. of the Unitarian is about your age, I should judge."

"He's the man. Where can I find him?"

After getting definite directions I fled down the courthouse steps. I found Mr. B., who when he had heard my story laughed immoderately, but, as I thought a young man would, consented to go with me. Consequently the last car for Altadena and Mount Lowe found us on board, together with a huge, awkward parcel which I had purchased on the way to the station.

As the car reached Echo mountain I found a laughing, much larger crowd than we had started with and in their midst Dorothy, looking most uncomfortable, but holding in her little hands a bouquet of Indian paint brush, the gorgeous coloring matching well the hue of her own sweet cheeks.

"They've surmised something," I whispered to my companion. "Well, the more the merrier, I suppose; kind of tough on us, though."

At which speech I thought the minister was going to disgrace his cloth again by unseemly levity. The crowd drew back a little as I advanced toward Dorothy and introduced the reverend gentleman. I tucked her little trembling hand under my arm, and, with my great parcel under the other, the minister discreetly leading and after us the crowd, though not fully understanding the play, we wended our way toward the cannon mounted and ready for business.

I dropped Dolly's hand, tore the paper wrapping from my megaphone and put it to my lips.

"Dorothy!" I shouted, and first this hill, then that, here, there, yonder, repeated her sweet name.

I raised it to my lips again, and "Be mine!" rang out the hills. Then I laid it on the ground and held out my hand, while the women smiled and the men tossed up their hats in delight. The situation was severe, but my Dorothy was game. Blushing, tearful, yet happy withal, she gave me her hand, and the minister stepped forward with his little book.

True Riches and False.

"I remember my first childish comprehension of wealth," said the judge to his companions as they sat on the porch of the camp in the hills. As he went on to explain it, the conception proved to be one which any person might be glad to hold through life.

"A new boy had come to school that day. I had been told that his father was a millionaire, with lots of money. Before school we looked upon him in bewilderment and whispered together that we'd 'just wait till we heard him recite.' Little barefooted Noddy Blake muttered warningly:

"'Jes' wait till we get him in a spellin' match. We'll put him out at the first word.'

"When I reached home that night my mother said:

"'What troubles you, boy? You look worried.'

SHADOW PICTURES

New Art Originated by Guitry, the French Actor.

THE FEMININE HUMBUG.

Lots of Fun at a Sculpture Party. How to Arrange the Entertainment. New Women or Old, They All Like Frills and Furbelows.

My Dear Elm—Have you had your shadow photograph taken? It's the smart wrinkle in art just now, and everybody I know is sitting for a Guitry. What's that? I'll tell you, my dear. It's the name of the man who invented this latest photographic whim, Sacha Guitry, a celebrated French actor who is an insatiable searcher for novelty of an interesting or amusing kind.

Yes, dear, to be really in the swim your photograph must contain your shadow also. Accordingly everybody is asking everybody else, "How do you do, and how's your shadow?"

It is the first time outside of oriental countries that a person's shadow has cut much of a figure in social relations, and the present Paris fad is not so much for your shadow itself as for photographs of it. The almost endless forms in which the sitter's shadow may be projected and caught by the camera has caused Guitry to make such photographs of a given person the basis of a system of fortune telling again," setting up the unfortunate jester as a sort of family ogre. No doubt in her youth she dismissed the impecunious suitor she had flirted with in similar submission to her parents' wishes and in her age will tell her granddaughters that as a girl she never dared to assert herself as they do.

Don't let's waste any more time thinking about such creatures. Let's talk about my new tailor made, a sketch of which I am inclosing. It is black and white striped cloth and perfectly stunning.

Speaking of clothes, distinctly this is the season of the "furry wurry" garment, and there isn't any reason to justify it. Never have women so loudly and so vigorously and unceasingly cried that they were "new women," emancipated beings, with mental machinery fully equal to the brain equipment of the male creatures of their class. And never have women dressed in more wholly feminine garments.

The craze for furs is widespread. Great, billowy, shaggy muffs and scarfs, boas, stoles, etc., and whole fur coats made from skins of various animals abound.

Then there are the plush coats and velvet coats, all soft, clingy feminine things. And this is surely a marabou season. Milady carries a marabou muff and twists a marabou stole about her white throat and twines some strands of marabou about her hat and goes forth to vote perhaps.

The same soft, altogether feminine touch is carried in the great blanket like coats for automobile and driving. Lingerie waists, softest blouses of silk and crepe have first favor. The shops are showing comparatively few of the mannish tailored linen blouses or shirts. Then there are the jabots and side frills of lace and embroidery and jabots to add still further to the charms of the dainty, wholly feminine woman and the fluffy ruffled girl. There's only dress for it and MARIEL.

BALLOONING AS A SPORT.

Flourishing Despite the Vogue of the Flying Machine.

Within five or six years ballooning has found increasing favor in this country as a sport. There are many more in Europe, but in the United States there are now fifty or sixty owners of balloons who own from one to three balloons apiece. The number of owners is increasing despite the vastly increased popularity of the heavier than air flying machine.

Any man who can afford an automobile can afford a balloon. You can buy a one man balloon made of linen and silk, with basket, net and equipment of every sort complete for $300. Such a balloon may weigh 125 pounds and deflated occupies a space of about 15 by 20 by 20 inches. It can be put in a trunk, though commonly it is packed for transportation in the basket. A three passenger balloon can be bought for $600. Balloons may be had of any dimension up to giants intended to carry fifty persons, but the balloons commonly sold range from the one man carrier up to those designed for eight or ten. Prices depend on the sizes of the balloons and the materials of which they are made. A double walled balloon of rubberized cloth designed to carry eight or ten persons and with all its equipment complete costs about $2,000.

You can't walk into a balloon manufacturer's establishment and find new balloons of all sizes in stock. Balloons are made only to order. But there are now so many men engaged in the ballooning sport and so many balloons in use—there are now ten times as many private as there are professional balloonists—that you may find second hand balloons. A man starting ballooning is likely to buy a small one and then as his interest and experience increase to have a bigger one, and if he wants to he can turn in the old one as part payment for the new one. One can buy second hand balloons with all equipment complete at prices ranging from $275 up to $400 for two passenger outfits and up to $700 for an eight passenger balloon.—New York Sun.

Oysters Cooked In Paper Bag.

The following recipe for cooking oysters is declared by an English magazine to be excellent:

Drain twelve large oysters on a cloth and egg them carefully. Roll them in fresh bread crumbs and place in a thickly buttered paper cooking bag, fasten the bag and cook on a grid for eight minutes in a hot oven.

Creamed oysters can be cooked in twelve minutes and make but a dainty and easily prepared supper dish.

When cooking pastry in paper bags there is no necessity to oil or grease the bag. Whether this is done or not is merely a matter of choice. One thing, however, is essential—the bag should have several tears cut in the upper side so that the pastry may become brown and crisp. A bag should be chosen into which whatever pastry is being cooked can easily go in without touching the edges of the bag during cooking, and the paste should be brushed over with milk before being slipped into the bag.

To do this a pastry brush should be used.

A host of sweets from stewed prunes to souffles can be cooked in paper bags with equal success, and such rolls can be prepared in fifteen minutes.

Cottage Cheese.

Cottage cheese is so easily made at home when there is sour milk that it is a pity more housekeepers do not make it an item on the bill of fare. It requires merely standing on the back of the stove the pan of sour milk until the watery fluid or whey rises to the top, then cover a sieve with a clean cloth, pour the whey and curds upon it. Hold the ends of the cloth to form a bag and hang where the whey can drip out for two hours or more. When the dripping ceases turn the curds into a bowl, add a little salt, a tablespoonful of butter and a little sweet cream if convenient, stirring the whole together with a fork. Make into little balls and keep wrapped in clean cheesecloth in a cool place. Onions, chives or sage may be added to the cheese at serving time. A spoonful of

LOCAL NEWS

Vermilion, the town with a future.

Property is moving and the demand for town lots is verging on a boom.

Final notices of owners of lands being cut up by the new town of the town. Settlement is required within thirty days.

William Yule and his company appeared at the Royal George Theatre last week in "The Rivals". They were greeted with a packed house, and the show was enjoyed as being one of the best that has appeared in the town.

At G. E. Clayton's auction sale on March 12, all his household effects will be sold, among the lot there are many valuable and useful articles and ladies of the district should make a point to attend.

The "All Stars" turned the tables on the civil banker aggregation in the return hockey match played Tuesday night, and the play at times became sensational. The score stood 5 to 3 in favor of the "All Stars".

Jesse W. Stover, a homesteader residing in the Lamborne district, who was committed for trial by magistrate F. H. Burton on the 27th of last month, on the charge of speculation, was admitted to bail last Thursday night. He will appear for his case the 15th of March at Vermilion at a special sitting of the district court which will be held on the above date.

F. T. Brownlee, the Islay accountant, will conduct an auction sale of farm stock, implements, etc., on the farm of G. E. Clayton, N.W. 1/4 sec. 20-47-5 within a mile and half east of Islay, commencing at 1 o'clock sharp on Tuesday, March 12th. A free lunch will be served at noon and the sale is called to start immediately after. Besides work oxen and a good line of implements there are some 16 head of first-class cattle down for sale. Remember the date and don't miss the sale. Full particulars on the large bills.

Four rinks of curlers will go up to Vegreville to fill the Write Cup.

Tom Gaydon of Edmonton, is visiting with the Misses Sullivan.

If you are not interested in Vermilion town lots get busy now, or you may have reason to regret it.

Mrs. J. D. Stephens, Vermilion Alta., is the guest of Mrs. Dalrymple, 160 Crown Avenue. Moll Empire, Toronto.

HARNESS OIL—for full particulars enquire of H. C. N Stockley, the Vermilion Harness Maker.

A big stock sale comprising over 100 head will be conducted by Morris & Maughan, Auctioneers, on March 27. Watch for the large posters.

F. A. Morrison of Vegreville, has been appointed counsel to assist in the freight rate investigation, which it is the intention of the Dominion Government to make as thorough and complete as possible

An extension of the Brunswick hotel is under consideration at the present time, and if same is found to be adequate to meet the demands of the travelling public. The corridor has recently been furnished with handsome oak chairs and settees.

Considerable activity is expected in real estate this year in Vermilion in view of the proposed building of the branch Can Nor line to Bonnyville. The surveyors reached town a few days ago, but have gone back to round off some of the detail of the work. They report an easy grade all the way. The new road will tap the steam line somewhere near Clavmore, about seven miles west of town.

A business man of Vermilion was offered $17,000.00, for two lots on Front street by an outside party last Wednesday, and promptly turned the offer down. The property in question was purchased a year ago this month by the present owner for $500. Looks as if something was doing

TRUE LOVE

A Story Attempting to Prove That It Is Immortal

By F. A. MITCHEL [?] APPLEBY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1912.

Professor Markham, who occupies the chair of anatomy at —— college, is a materialist. His friend Taylor, professor of psychology, is an extremist on the opposite side, taking the ground that man is an eternal spirit, incased in a material body. The two were discussing questions based upon these two very different opinions, when Professor Markham said:

"Take, for instance, love. To be more particular, let us confine ourselves to love between the sexes. You men of spiritual bent consider that this is a spiritual condition, a mingling of two souls. We materialists take it to be, in the initiative at least, simply a device of nature to compel obedience to one of her laws, procreation."

"Which we deny. Love is eternal."

"Then when a couple who love are separated by death why is the place of the one who has been taken filled by another?"

"Cases of real love are rare. In such cases the place of the departed one is not filled by another. I have known or heard of several instances of this true love, but only one where the conditions I have stated were fulfilled. It was related to me when I was studying medicine in Paris, and the principal figure in the story had been a professor in the university where I received my education.

"Jean Lorenz, a bachelor of thirty-six, a botanist, was one morning tramping through the southern provinces, hunting for plant specimens, when he came upon a chateau in whose gardens were many beautiful flowers. In his enthusiasm he jumped the wall and was soon lost to everything except the objects of his study. He was bending over a variety of azalea which he had never seen, though he was familiar with it through his books, when suddenly he was recalled to himself by a musical feminine voice..."

...visit her grave occasionally to see that the plants she best loved and which he had placed there be nurtured."

"Why," asked Professor Markham, "if there was only corruption beneath the sod were the shrubs the woman had loved planted there? Corruption has no appreciation!"

"In you materialists," responded Professor Taylor, "there is a vacuum where the faculty of sentiment should exist. The widower did not place the flowers there for the dead, but for the living woman. To him the thread of her life had never been broken. Moreover, in our natures there is that which we call association, and there was to him a pleasure in associating the plants she loved with the place where her mortal part lay.

"One evening about sunset Lorenz entered the cemetery of Pere Lachaise to visit his wife's grave and see that all was in order there. As he approached it he was astonished to see a man, uncovered, bending over the mound, apparently absorbed in grief. What could it mean? Lorenz had never heard his wife speak of a brother or other male relative near and dear to her, and he wondered who this mourner could be. Advancing, he addressed the stranger:

"'Pardon me. May I ask why you are thus grieving for my wife?'

"The man turned. The grief his countenance had worn was turned to anger.

"'Your wife! Then you are the man who robbed me of my love.'

"'Your love! She never had but one love, and that surely was not yours. Who are you?'

"'One who loved the woman who lies there'—

"'She does not lie there,' interrupted Lorenz. 'She is in heaven. Had you loved her as you say, you would not speak of her as lying there.'

"'I say I loved her,' reiterated the other fiercely, 'and she loved me. We parted in anger'—

"'Real love is never angry. It may grieve for another's fault, but it cannot be angry.'

"'I left her for a foreign land, America. There I have been since then; there I prospered. I returned to do penance and claim my love. I heard that some one had won her hand, though I knew that no one but myself could have won her heart; that she had died and was buried here...'

MRS. JOHN W. TIMMONS

Another charming young hostess has recently been added to Washington's official set, Mrs. John W. Timmons, wife of Lieutenant Timmons...

Mrs. Timmons was a Miss Fairbanks and during her father's term of office as vice president in the Roosevelt administration she ably assisted her mother in doing the social honors of the position. Her elevation to Washington's official circle will cause much pleasure to her many friends of the capital.

Mrs. Timmons is a stunning looking woman who is always beautifully gowned and, like her mother, Mrs. Fairbanks, is an enthusiastic club woman and deeply interested in the new woman movement. She is remarkably well informed on all public questions of the day.

Progressive School Board

By the adoption of a system of monthly school reports the Vermilion school board may have shown themselves abreast of the times, providing the parents will take the interest this innovation deserves, in which case the system ought to produce good results. But there is something more the school board should do. This town is now recognized as the business and industrial centre of a territory stretching from Battleford on the east to Edmonton on the west, and we must have a school in keeping with our position. It is a sad commentary on the existing condition of things that up until recently there was no one in Vermilion who taught music, there is no one now who teaches domestic science and there is no one who teaches shorthand and typewriting. ... departments which the school board should inaugurate in connection with our public school. In each of these departments an extra fee would of course have to be charged and to establish these departments would also require an outlay of money, but what is an outlay of money compared with giving our children such education as will fit them for life's duties. There are scores of young men and women at present in the district who would gladly avail themselves of a course in shorthand and typewriting; there are as many more who would like a course in music, and domestic science should be popular with all women regardless of age and social position. The time has arrived when the school board must take ... [illegible]

Majority for Vermilion 6

In the above is contained the story of the visit to Vegreville Wednesday of four rinks of Vermilion curlers with the object of again restoring to the local club the much prized "White Cup" which was won by the Vegreville bunch here last winter, after having been successfully defended for two years, by representative rinks of the Vermilion Curling Club.

Two draws were put on viz. 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. Pilkie playing Goodwin and Ryan being pitted against Clute in the afternoon games. The play throughout was of a most interesting nature and for the first few ends on each ice was fairly even; Goodwin however stuck to the chalk and racked up a good score over Pilkie, who, while playing a good game was always unfortunate in missing the count, in the last end he added two and finished 9 down. Ryan was playing a strong game and with six ends finished was 2 up on Clute, the next four ends were secured by the Vegreville skip putting him four up at the tenth end; by some great curling Ryan scored six points in the eleventh and twelfth and finished 2 up. This left Vermilion 7 down in the first round of the play.

Naturally much interest centered around the 8 o'clock games which were to determine the fate of the Cup for the time being and with play under way over two hundred highly enthusiastic and excited onlookers followed the fortunes of the opposing rinks, with a lead of 7 and two of their strongest combinations left to defend the cup, confidence as to the ultimate result ran high in Vegreville ranks, as the play proceeded end after end their confidence seemed to be justified, as the Vermilion rinks while giving a splendid exhibition of the game failed to make much headway in wiping of the heavy lead their opponents held. With the games gone seven ends Dimmel was 2 up on Horton and Cooper one up on Morton—the play was indeed strenuous; in the eighth end Cooper landed a 4 on Morton who had hardly realized how it happened when a 3 was chalked against him on the ninth; on the other sheet Horton had counted both these ends with a 1 and a 2 and was 1 up on Dimmel, Cooper was 8 up on Morton. Thus at the end of the ninth ends the aggregate score was a tie. In the last 3 ends Dimmell chalked up 3 to Horton's 2, while Cooper scored 3 to Morton's 0—and the White Cup with the 4 accompanying sets of Silver Teaspoons were securely fastened to the belts of the Vermilion rinks.

The final wind up witnessed the greatest enthusiasm imaginable and the true sporting spirit of the people of Vegreville was in evidence in the hearty congratulations which they lavished upon the visitors. Three thunderous cheers were given for Vermilion who reciprocated in kind. The Vegreville curlers very kindly treated the visitors to welcome sandwiches and hot coffee. The boys returned home on the midnight in the best of health and "spirits."

Mannville Beats Vermilion Puck Chasers

The return game between Vermilion and Mannville was played at Mannville on Monday last. Although the ice was in poor condition, the play was much more even on this occasion and the visitors got the short end of a 2—0 score.

During the first 25 minutes neither team scored and the game looked very much like a draw. However during a scrimmage around the Vermilion goal, and while Dywer was serving 5 minutes on the penalty bench for (shooting the rubber), Dimmond, Fort Saskatchewan's shining star, found the nets for the home team. Half time score 1-0 in favor of the home team.

In the last half the Vermilion team being up against it having to play against seven men and the referee, (who was Manager of the Mannville team.) Although Vermilion had the best end of the play were unable to find the nets and Hanford, of the swift Sommerville aggregation added another to the score thus leaving it 2-0 in favor of Mannville at the close of the game.

Curly Jones in goal for the visitors played a good game and proved to be the star, while Dwyer and McLafferty made a stone wall defense. Pilkie, at centre, did some very good shooting, but could't get them past Mannville's crack goal tender. Sherman on left wing played a hard game and stopped everything that came his way; Doyle at rover worked hard and at different stages of the game had the Mannville goal in danger.

Win Hearts Of Vermilion Audience

Toronto Ladies Quartette Appear Under Auspices of I.O.O.F.

Once more the I.O.O.F. No. 29 of Vermilion, are to be congratulated on their choice of concerts. Last Wednesday night the talented Toronto Ladies Quartette surpassed all other concerts given in our town appearing before one of the biggest and most fashionable audiences which has ever turned out in Vermilion. Each artist deserves special mention, but none more so than Miss Bucklin, violinist, who is a general favorite. Her "Gipsey Dances" and "Clarch-Na-Cuddin" were worthy of the highest commendation. Miss Corbett's rendition of "Poor Wandering One" will ring in the ears of the audience until such time as it is their good fortune to hear this excellent singer again, which we all hope will be in the near future. Miss Sheehan and her singing "The Friggies" was the best elocutionary effort yet delivered in our midst. Last, but not least, Miss McKay, who so ably performed on the piano, is deserving of highest praise, her playing would compare favorably with the greatest masters of the time. After the concert the ladies were entertained at the home of Mrs. Clarridge, where light refreshments were served, and a few (O, so short) pleasant hours spent. All wish the Toronto Ladies Quartette the best success, and hope it will not be long before they make their appearance again in Vermilion. All are sure of happy homes here.

One of the most promising varieties of early wheat is Marquis. The quality of this wheat is considered to be fully as high as that of Red Fife and in many districts it has ripened from a week to two weeks earlier. Marquis wheat is the product of a cross between Red Fife and Hard Red Calcutta, an early wheat from India. A single plant from this crossing was isolated by Dr. C. E. Saunders, Dominion cerealist, in 1903, and has since been grown and selected under his direction.

Guarantee Necessary For "The Barrier"

Rex Beach's latest and greatest success, "The Barrier" so ably dramatized by Eugene Presbury, of "Raffles" fame, is scheduled to stop in this town for one performance, on the date of Thursday, March 7th, provided sufficient patronage can be pledged in advance to warrant the manager at New York to sign contracts.

Every city in the West, outside the week stands the resorting to this method of securing this sterling attraction, and if two hundred or more of the better class of theatre goers signify their willingness to take the usual number of seats contracts will be signed, and the sale of seats will open one day in advance for the benefit of those who assist Manager Stiles in bringing "The Barrier" here. Business Manager J. A. Lacy will arrive in town shortly to size up the possibilities of success.

The Barrier Company

The plays that created a favorable and artistic impression, and made real money for their owners last season in the West, can be counted on ten fingers. Near the top of the list stands Rex Beach's stage story of "The Barrier," which since Jan. 1st 1911, played to a large number of return dates in splendid houses, thereby proving its undisputed claim to universal popularity.

The novel by Rex Beach has always been recognized as a masterpiece of descriptive work, as well as a thrilling and interesting novel and in its portrayal of real Alaskan life, it stands quite alone. Mr. Beach spent out of his early years in this last of the far West, and his sympathetic touch has transferred to its pages the very life of the region in all its virility and picturesque characteristics. Eugene Presbey has preserved in its play all this atmosphere and art, and the result is not unlikely to be a revelation by a specialty scheduled, with all that went to make it a record-breaker at the New Amsterdam, New York, and it is easy to see why its presentation [illegible]. "I never knew him to ask another to defend him."

"He never would need to defend him. I merely thought that if you knew the truth you might help him."

[illegible]

"I have tried to help wherever I could [illegible]."

Mildred shrugged her shoulders. "You even went to Seattle to help him did you not?"

"I went there on my own business."

"Why do you take such an interest in Mr Emerson's affairs, may I ask?"

"It was I who induced him to take up this venture," said Cherry proudly. "I found him discouraged, ready to give up. I helped to put new heart into him. I have something at stake in the enterprise, too—but that's nothing. I hate to see a good man driven to the wall by a scoundrel like Marsh."

"Wait! There is something to be said on both sides. Mr Marsh was magnanimous enough to overlook that attempt upon his life."

"What attempt?"

"You must have heard. He was wounded in the shoulder."

"Didn't Boyd tell you the truth about that?"

"He told me everything," said Mildred coldly. [illegible]

[illegible]

young woman Constantine had kept at a respectful distance, but when Mildred had gone he came up to Cherry with the question:

"Who is that?"

"That is Miss Wayland. That is the richest girl in the world, Constantine."

"Humph!"

"And the pity of it is she doesn't understand how very rich she is. Her father owns all these canneries and many more besides and lots of railroads. But you don't know what a railroad is, do you?"

"Make him rich as Mr. Marsh, eh?"

"A thousand time richer. Mr Marsh works for him the way you work for me."

"She more han'somer than you be," he added with reluctant candor. "Mebbe that's he tout Mr Marsh, eh? White man no work for Mr. Marsh. He no work for nobody."

"No. It is true. Mr. Marsh knows how rich she is, and that is why he wants to marry her."

The Aleut wheeled swiftly, his soft [illegible] the gravel.

"Mr Marsh want marry her?" he repeated, as if doubting his ears.

"Yes. That is why he has fought Mr Emerson. They both want to marry her. That is why Marsh broke Mr Emerson's [illegible] and hired his men away from him and cut his nets. They hate each other. Do you understand?"

"Me savvy," said Constantine shortly then strode on beside the girl. "Me think all the time Mr Emerson gone marry you."

Cherry gasped. "No, no! Why, he is in love with Miss Wayland."

"S'pose he don marry her?"

"Then Mr Marsh will get her, I dare say."

After a moment Constantine announced with conviction: "I guess Mr Marsh is bad man."

"It's good you have discovered that. He has even tried to kill Mr Emerson. That shows the sort of man he is."

"It's good thing—get marry," said Constantine vaguely. "The father say if woman don marry she go to hell."

"I'd hate to think that," laughed the girl.

"That's true," the other affirmed stoutly. "The priest he say so, and priest don' lie. He say man takes a woman and don' get marry they both go to hell and burn forever. Bimeby little baby come, and he go to hell too."

"Oh, I understand. The father wants to make sure of his people, and he is quite right. You natives haven't observed the law very carefully."

"He say Indian woman stop with white man, she never see Jesus' house no more. She go to hell sure, and baby go too. You s'pose that's true?"

"I dare say it is, in a way."

"By gosh! That's tough on little baby!" exclaimed Constantine fervently.

CHAPTER XX

ALL that night Boyd stayed at his post, while the cavernous building shuddered and hissed to the straining toil of the machines and the gasping breath of the furnaces. As the darkness gathered he had gone out upon the dock to look regretfully toward the twinkling lights on the Bonanza flume, then turned doggedly back to his labors. He would have sent Mildred word, but he had not a single man to spare.

At 10 o'clock the next morning he staggered into his quarters more dead than alive. In his heart was a great thankfulness that Big George had not found him wanting. The last defective machine was mended; the last weakness strengthened and the plant had reached its fullest stride. The fish might come now in any quantity; the rest was but a matter of coal and iron and human endurance. Meanwhile he would sleep.

He met "Fingerless" Fraser emerging decked royally in all the splendor of new clothes and spotless linen.

"Where are you going?" Boyd asked him.

"I'm going out into society."

"Clyde is taking you to the yacht, eh?"

"No. He's afraid of my work, so I'm going out on my own. He told me all about the swell quilts at Marsh's place so I thought I'd hike up there and look them over. I may cop an heiress." He winked slowly. "If I see one that looks goods I'm liable to grab me some bride. He says there ain't one that's got less than a couple of millions in her kick."

Boyd was too weary to do more than wish him success, but it seemed that fortune favored Fraser, for before he had gone far he saw a young woman seated in a patch of wild flowers, plucking the blooms with careless hand while she drank in the beauty of the bright arctic morning. She was simply dressed, yet looked so prosperous that Fraser instantly decided.

"That's her. I'll spread my checks with this one. 'Good morning,'" he began.

The girl gave him an indifferent glance from two fearless eyes and nodded slightly.

"If you don't mind, I'll rest a minute. I'm out for my morning walk. It's a nice day, isn't it?" As she did [illegible]

[illegible]

"Oh, the dear." He only runs it for me. I got up the money. You know [illegible]

ing to pass." He shook his head solemnly. "And he a scourge?"

"I beg your pardon."

"I say, ain't he an awful thing? He ain't nothing like Emerson. There's a thing called swallow all right, all right. I like him."

"Are you very intimate with him?"

"Am I? I'm closer to him than a porous plaster. When Boyd ain't around I'm him, that's all. Is that your yacht?"

"No. My father and I are merely passengers."

"So you trailed the old sheepskin along with you? Well, that's right. Make the most of your father while you've got him. If I'd paid more attention to mine I'd have been better off now. But I was wild." Fraser wished in a manner to inform his listener that all worldly wisdom was his. "I wanted to be a jockey, and the old party cut me off. What I've got now I made all by myself, but if I'd stayed in Bloomington I might have been president of the bank by this time."

"Bloomington! I understood you to say New Orleans."

"My old man had a whole string of banks," Fraser averred hastily.

"Tell me—is Mr Emerson ill?" asked the girl.

"Ill enough to lick a den of wildcats."

"He intended coming out to the yacht last night, but he disappointed us."

"He's as busy as an ant hill. I met him turning in just as I came out for my constitutional."

"Where had he been all night?" Her voice betrayed an interest that Fraser was quick to detect. He answered casually:

"You can search me! I don't keep cases on him. As long as he does his work I don't care where he goes at quitting time." He resolved that this girl should learn nothing from him.

"There seem to be very few white women in this place," she said after a pause.

"Only one, till you people came. Maybe you've crossed her trail?"

"Mr Emerson told me about her. He seems quite fond of her."

"I've always said they'd make a sweet looking pair."

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish it.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box.

TO REPAIR BUCKINGHAM

The Duke of Connaught's Criticism of the Palace Bears Fruit.

Buckingham Palace is to have some much needed attention given to its exterior. This is due to the outspoken remarks of the Duke of Connaught upon the appearance of the Palace. Last year Mr. Harcourt, the First Commissioner of Works, found himself with a surplus of $750,000, in hand, and this he purposed to devote to the painting of the interior of the Palace and other highly necessary works. He was overruled, however, by other members of the Cabinet on the ground that with such large sums required for the Coronation and other Royal purposes the sum should be expended elsewhere. It is understood that work will be commenced on the building about Easter, when the Court will be at Windsor, and that it will be pushed forward so as to be completed by the time the London season proper commences [illegible]. The roof of the Palace is in a very bad state of repair in places and, too, is to receive attention.

Man, the Deceiver

"That's funny," exclaimed the innocent wife. "I won't need a new hat or costume this winter."

"You won't?" asked her husband in surprise. "Surely you will need something new?"

"Not a single thing! I've been looking through this month's fashion paper you brought home, and there's not the slightest change in the styles since last winter. Everything I have will do."

And she sighed over her disappointment.

Then the crafty husband gloated silently over his little scheme.

He had slipped a December 1910 fashion paper into the cover of a December 1911 and it had worked.

A lady called on a friend who was not at home and, finding the piano dusty, wrote upon it "dirty."

They met the next day, and the lady said, "I call on you yesterday."

"Yes, I saw your card on the piano," was the calm reply.

Eve.—"See here, Adam, I've been the making of you. Some women would have taken every rib you had."

Sure of a Raise

An enterprising woman, who rents several apartments in a new building and sublets them furnished room by room, has profited at the rate of several hundred dollars a year by woman's propensity for telling everything she knows, says the New York Herald. To each applicant for a room she named an exorbitant price to start with.

"Now understand this is a concession to you alone and must be regarded as strictly confidential. If you tell a soul in the house that I have made a reduction in your favor I shall have to charge the original price."

Within two weeks rents had gone up.

"Mrs Smith tells me," said the astute landlady to each gossiping tenant, "that you told her you'd only [illegible] for your room instead of $[illegible]." And as no one was in a position to plead not guilty the additional rent was exacted.

Cruikshank's Bank Note

The most unconventional design for a bank-note was undoubtedly George Cruikshank's "Bank Note not to be imitated," published in 1818. It was inspired by the sight of several women dangling from the gallows outside Newgate for uttering forged one pound notes. The note included a lavish arrangement of fetters and suspended figures and there was such a demand for copies that Cruikshank had to sit up all night to etch a duplicate plate. He had the satisfaction also of knowing that no man or woman was ever hanged for the offence, for the plate led to an Act that put a stop to the punishment of death for forgery.

How A Gold Mine Was Discovered.

The death in Sydney of Mr. Walter Hall, a Mount Morgan millionaire, recalls the story of the discovery of the famous Queensland gold mine. It sounds more like some startling fiction than a piece of real life. It was a portion of a selection owned by a man named Gordon, but the pasturage was very poor, and his selection [illegible] which he maintained by keeping a few head of cattle was miserable enough. One day along came two brothers named Morgan, prospectors, who passed his ramshackle hut, built unsuspectingly over untold wealth and partook of the hospitality which Gordon offered to them as to all other travellers in the bush. Something attracted the trained eyes of the two brothers, and picking up idly a few samples of stone, they bade Gordon goodbye. They reappeared soon afterwards, and offered to buy his poor selection from him, and he congratulated himself on getting rid of it at last. At an acre. Even then the Morgans had no idea of the real value of their new property, though they were confident it would pay them to work it. They prospered in a Rockhampton resident a share of half their interest for £2,000 in order to buy mining machinery, and eventually this gentleman and three others put in £500 each. In a few years they and the Morgans were all millionaires.

Whistles It Open.

Burdened with the necessity of having to rise from his bed to unlock the bedroom door, so that his meals could be brought in, a London [illegible] invented a door which opens to his whistle. This is accomplished by means of a simple electromagnet which draws the bolt when a current passes through it, a platinum point, and a piece of tin attached to a curtain which when vibrated by the sound of the octaves, [illegible] operates, and this vibration brings the platinum point in contact with the platinum point, thus completing the circuit and bringing into play a very sensitive relay into operation.

Mrs. J. L. Story, who has just published a volume of reminiscences, tells of a lady relative who had all her life been afraid of damp sheets. When she was dying Mrs Story entered the room, to find the fireplace barricaded with a large assortment of bed linen. She was having her winding sheet warmed.

"I never have lain in damp bed clothes while I was alive," said the old lady in a feeble whisper, "and I'm not going to do it when I'm dead."

Heaving the Log

"Heaving the Log" is one of those picturesque phrases of natural literature which is only hazily understood by the land lubber. The "log" is a quadrant-shaped piece of wood loaded with lead at the curve. The line to which it is attached is 120 fathoms long and is divided by knots into equal distances of 47 feet each. [illegible] distances are the same fraction of a nautical mile (a knot) as 28 seconds is of one hour. Consequently the number of knots that slip off a reel in 28 seconds after the log is in the water is the speed per hour that the ship is making.

"Today, everything he possesses is tied up in his wife's name," he added.

Making Money [illegible]

[illegible] heard of fortunes [illegible] street, of miners who [illegible] accumulated enormous wealth by a lucky strike, of inventions that have made inventors rich but how many of these instances are there? Just a few, while countless thousands and hundreds of thousands have lost everything in unsuccessful ventures.

The prosperous or successful man [illegible] with the knowledge of what he is buying, whether it be a piece of beef, a dozen of eggs, a horse, a house, or stocks or bonds.

Money has been made in Wall street and will continue to be made. Those who buy stock when they sell low and sell them when they advance must make money. The operation is no different from buying a house or a farm at a bargain and selling it at a profit, but one should exercise just as much care in one's transaction as in the other.

Have nothing to do with those who offer glittering opportunities to get rich quickly. This will save you money. It may sound very nice to say that one owns a thousand shares of gold, silver or copper mine with a par value of $10,000 and that cost the holder only $50 or $100. But what use is such a certificate unless it has real value. Better put the $50 or $100 in one share of dividend paying stock and be satisfied with modern's returns and a moderate profit on any advance the stock may enjoy.

"Your poem good? I should say not!" answered the editor.

Sudden Changes Many Colds

And Colds Are the Starting Point of Serious Diseases

You Can Make Short Work of a Cold by Using

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Sudden changes of temperature are fatal in results. The shock to the human system is more than most people can stand, and everywhere you hear sneezing and coughing.

You may be sure that some of these colds will develop into pneumonia or consumption. Others will settle on the kidneys, and result in serious disease or bring on rheumatic or bodily pains.

The danger is in letting colds run on. By beginning promptly with Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and taking small doses frequently you can keep the cough loose, check the inflammation and soon rid the system entirely of the cold and all the many possibilities for evil which it possesses.

Don't think that anything is good enough for a cold. There are lots of cough mixtures. But if you want a standard medicine of proven merit something that you can depend on in time of sickness you will be satisfied with Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Children like it. Being composed of simple ingredients it is particularly suited to their needs. Its enormous sales prove its effectiveness. 25 cents a bottle, family size 60 cents, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Forestry in Europe

The productive forest area in 1908 on the Grand Duchy of Hesse in Germany amounted to [illegible] acres, of sixty nine per cent hardwood and thirty one per cent coniferous species. The total yield of timber in 1908 was [illegible] cubic feet. Referring so far as it is not suitable for lighter lumber such as is used for pulpwood, used for firewood. The expenditures for salaries, forest management and road building amounted to approximately $734,000 and the total gross income from lumber and firewood was $1,161,[illegible]. The capital represented by the forests of Hesse brought interest according at [illegible] per cent. Where intensive forestry of this kind is practised forest fires are unknown. Sufficient money spent on Canadian Forest Reserves would greatly reduce the fire danger, maintain an adequate lumber supply for the country and in time become a source of revenue to the Government.

AN OPEN LETTER

FROM A WELL KNOWN CLERGYMAN SHOWING HOW INDIGESTION CAN BE CURED

Rev. T. A. Drury, Beamsville, Ont., writes as follows:—"For eighteen years I have been increasingly impressed with the wonderful effects for good wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For some years I had suffered almost constantly with chronic dyspepsia of the most stubborn type, attended by different other troubles which invariably follow or accompany it as its results, prominent among which were kidney trouble and piles. Against this complication of diseases I waged a vigorous warfare for several months, using many different remedies, none of which gave permanent relief. In my discouragement I was about to discontinue treatment altogether when I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the use of which, though under very unfavorable circumstances, soon revived my drooping courage. The medicine struck at the root of my weakness and the different troubles of which dyspepsia was the prime cause released, let go, and disappeared. In one month I increased fifteen pounds in weight and received a new lease of life. Only six boxes of pills produced this wonderful change in my health, which was miraculously permanent.

"Later my sister became so reduced by anaemia (though under the care of our family doctor) that she could scarcely walk. In this dangerous extremity Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were resorted to and in a brief space of time restored her to perfect health.

"Being a minister of the gospel many test cases have come under my notice, in all of which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have fully sustained their world wide reputation. This is why I can conscientiously recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as being superior to anything known to me in the treatment of many diseases for which they are recommended."

A Marathon of 1699.

A remarkable foot-race was run about the year 1699 which is thus described in the manuscript journal of a lady who was one of the spectators: "I drove through the forest of Windsor to see a race run by two footmen, an English and a Scotch, the former a taller bigger man than the other. The ground measured and cut even in a round was about four miles. They were to run it round so often as to make up twenty-two miles, which was the distance between Charing Cross and Windsor Cross; this is five times quite round, and so far as to make up the odd miles and measure. They ran a round in twenty five minutes. I saw them run the first three rounds and half another in an hour and seventeen minutes, and they finished it in two hours and a half. The Englishman gained the fast the second round, and kept it at the same distance till five rounds, and then the Scotchman came up to him and got before him to the post. The Englishman fell down within a few yards of the post. Many hundred pounds were lost and won about it. They ran both very neatly, but my judgment gave it to the Scotchman because he seemed to save himself to the last post."

THE "TRIUMPH"—BRITAIN'S CHAMPION MOTORCYCLE

Although this is our first Mail Order announcement of Motorcycles and Automobile Supplies, we are by no means unfamiliar with this branch of business. As an organization we probably number more men possessing first-hand experience with motor engines than any in the country. We have a splendidly equipped Garage and Motor Sales Department, where information of the most practical nature has been gathered for some years past. Our buyers in their travels become familiar with all the American and British models, so that we have a wealth of experience to guide us in selecting the Motorcycles best suited to Western Canada.

Our final choice gives us two machines that are absolutely the highest grade in the market, possessing speed, reliability and endurance in an unusual way. We have priced them at our customary narrow margin of profit, and we offer them for sale supported by our liberal guarantee—money back in full if not satisfactory on arrival.

WE SELL THE CELEBRATED CHALMERS AUTOMOBILE IN MANITOBA. WRITE US FOR DESCRIPTION OF THE CHALMERS "30" at $1,900.00.

NOTE PARTICULARLY

We have in stock at Winnipeg a complete line of Automobile Supplies and Repairs. Every purchaser of our Motor Cycles or Automobiles can depend on us for protection on this important point.

260 New Locomotives

Canadian railways within the two months have ordered two hundred and sixty new locomotives, representing a capital outlay of almost four million dollars, the greater number of which are for use on the prairie. A few are for the east, a few of the special type for the mountains, there are some yard engines, and the balance represent an important addition to locomotive power between the head of the lakes and the foothills. GOOD AND BAD TAXES

[illegible]

The Modern Farmer

[illegible]

"[illegible] drawled the nephew, "and how growing?"

The Direct Tax

The Reeve paused before replying, and allowed his eyes to take in the group picture of his farm buildings, together with photographs of [illegible] which hung on the wall. He had [illegible] ... and [illegible] ... [illegible] help [illegible] the revenue raised by customs and excise if some of your wild Western free traders [illegible] your treat and abolished customs and excise," he remarked.

"What are your figures?" asked the nephew.

The Reeve went to his desk and picked up a Government blue book which lay close beside the telephone.

Indirect Taxes

[illegible]

The [illegible] of a Revenue

[illegible]

A Growing Income

"By stating that the Government had a surplus of about $56,000,000 last year," returned the Reeve, after consulting the blue book, "and is it growing?" inquired the nephew.

"In 1911," replied his uncle, "the customs amounted to $[illegible]; in 1901, to $[illegible], 1[illegible], and in 1911, to $73,[illegible]. That's growth, isn't it? ... "You have proved your original contention, without doubt," admitted the nephew. [illegible]

Who Pays the Excise?

[illegible] when made from raw grain is $1.50 per proof gallon, or you pay very where [illegible]. Liquor never enters this house except at Christmas. I would say that my annual contribution to the country's excise would be fifty cents.

Where the Weight Lies

"Shameful," remarked the nephew. "You are shirking your national responsibilities."

"Never mind," said the Reeve grimly. "I pay enough direct taxes without having to pay much in the way of indirect taxes, and you can see by this blue book that the burden of the customs duties are paid by the urban population. Would you like to have the weight shifted by laying an additional direct tax on farm property?"

"I would not," replied the nephew [illegible].

"Nor I," said the Reeve.

And having agreed upon the weather, they went cheerfully to bed.

"She can hardly blame her for trying to run it him.

"Oh, you can make book that she didn't start in intending. She ain't the kind to start up in a way like that, whisper. She don't have to. All she needs to do is look natural. That's all she's got for persuasion."

"They have been together a great deal, I suppose."

"Every hour of the day, and the days are long," said Prince cheerfully. "She is one's enjoyment. He found him a thrill and a way it had wanted to. It's a good thing he didn't, though, because she's done more for me than the law for us than we've done ourselves."

"She's extremely pretty," the girl remarked coolly.

"Yes, and she's just as bright as she is good looking. I see I don't care for blonds." Prince paused unwittingly at the bowers hair before him and rolled the wheel of his carpenter. "I'm strong for brunettes. I am. It's the strain blood in me."

She gathered up her wild flowers and rose, saying:

"I must be going."

"I'll go with you." He jumped to his feet with alacrity.

"Thank you; I prefer to walk alone."

Darkness with thanks!" he murmured sad. "If need ever modify and motions my bundle for I think I'll need my sense bundles and the rest. She must be over the mine."

At the upper cemetery Mildred found Ah-ee Clyde with the youngest Berry girl. She called him aside and talked earnestly with him for several minutes.

"All right," he said at length. "I'm glad to get out, of course. The rest is up to you."

Mildred's lips were white and her voice hard as she cried:

"I am thoroughly sick of it all! I have played the fool long enough!"

"Sure, honey," Clyde agreed promptly. "You may be innocent, and it doesn't look like you were running a game on him. But you showed him with me."

"Leave that to me. I'm through with him."

"All right. Let's beat up the Bible-agent." Together they went to the lot first in search of Wayne Wayland.

A half hour later when Clyde rejoined Miss Berry she noticed that he seemed ill at ease, gazing down the bay with a worried, speculative look in his colorless eye.

Boyd Harrison roused from his death like slumber late in the afternoon, and Mildred Trop his long strain and aching by every muscle. He was a spectacle pitiful enough, but his heart was softer with gladness. His George was dead at the trap, and the unceasing trouble that pressed the very soul from him the day was still roaring in his ears. In his head throbbing his breast's a touch was supported in the doorway.

"There's a boss a-set the dark with your people from above," he announced. "I swayed them, according to orders, but they wish to see you."

"Have them in the office." Boyd rose and crept into the other building, where in a moment later he was confronted by Wayne Wayland and Wells McLain. The old man nodded to his sheriffy Shoals manner.

"They heard about your good fortune Mr. Wayland has come to look over your claim."

"It is not for sale."

"How many feet are you getting?"

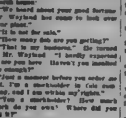
"That is my business." He turned to Mr. Wayland. "I hardly expected to see you here. Haven't you insulted me enough?"

"Just a moment before you order me out, I'm a shareholder in the company, and I can within my rights."

"You a shareholder? How many shares do you own? Where did you get it?"

"I own 10,000 shares outright." Mr. Wayland leaned a packet of certificates upon the table. "And I have options on all the shares you placed in Chicago. I said you would hear from me when the time came."

"So you think the time has come to crush me, eh?" said Harrison. "Well, you've been prejudged. Only one-third of the capital stock has been sold, and Allen Clyde holds 25,000 shares of that."



"My daughter is so pretty that I can't interest her in the serious things of life," said the busy hostess to her neighbor. "So I tell her. And then she'll be sorry," and she didn't have to play bridge."

No man can have a fallen so low but he still has a soul to save, and, to have he must shall find a live design of some kind. Boyd Harrison was not wise enough to that to decide to go on with his life.

Bodies are as catching as tears, and periods men have learned happy, were periods when there existed upon with them or their happiness. Hopelessness may or ignorance. It is the first love of a person.

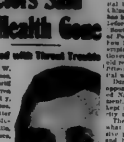
Doctors Said Health Gone

Suffered with Threat Trouble



Mr. B. W. D. Bacon.

Mr. B. W. D. Bacon, of Warwick County, Tennessee, is a letter to Mrs. Minerva Wilson, writes:

"I had chronic bronchitis and had suffered for years. Doctors treating me, I failed to do me any good, and pronounced my trouble incurable. I commenced taking Peruna, and after using four bottles I was entirely cured."

Unable to Work.

Mr. Gustav Rinnebrink, Hochheim, Texas, writes:

"For a number of years I suffered a terrible cough, which nearly took me weeks of asthma, which usually yielded to the common home remedies.

"Last year, however, I suffered for eight months without intermission and that I could not do any work at all. The various medicines that I used prescribed brought me no relief.

"After taking six bottles of Peruna, two of Lucrina and two of Manalin, I am entirely free of my asthma and my cough and sore throat which caused me so much suffering. I can recommend this medicine to any one afflicted with the same complaint and believe that they will obtain good results."

Weak Women

Many people suffer from weak kidneys. They are apt to be languid, nervous, irritable, have backache, dizzy spells or sleepless nights, and sometimes rheumatism. Such symptoms as these indicate that the kidneys are not doing their work properly. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no alcohol nor other alcoholic liquors, is a most valuable remedy for weak kidneys. It helps the kidneys to overcome the poisonous effects of uric acid in the blood, and thus relieves the rheumatism. It helps the kidneys to eliminate or take up and digest the poisonous matter in the blood, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, biliousness and many similar troubles. It is the best blood purifier and strength restorer known to medical science, and is guaranteed to benefit or cure in every case of kidney, bladder, liver, stomach, blood or lung trouble, or money back. Sold by druggists. Send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., for his book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," in paper covers, or send 50 stamps for the same book bound in cloth. Address as above.

This same nourishes an alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and the quantity of hemoglobin in the blood. It helps the human system in the constant consumption of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up and digest the nourishment in the food. It thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, biliousness and many similar troubles. It is the best blood purifier and strength restorer known to medical science, and is guaranteed to benefit or cure in every case of kidney, bladder, liver, stomach, blood or lung trouble, or money back. The Effect of Good Seed

If one extra potatoe were added to each plant grown in the United States the actual increase in the national yield of the crop would amount to 3,000,000 bushels. The figure is given in a bulletin issued by Farm Crops and Plant Diseases, which is prepared by Prof. E. S. Lindfield, of the Montana State agricultural college and published by the International Dry Farming Congress in its annual handbook.

"If one extra kernel were added to each head of corn, barley, wheat or oats," says Prof. Lindfield, "the total yield would be 6,000,000 bushels of corn and 29,000,000 bushels of oats, or more, 7,500,000 bushels of barley, 15,000,000 bushels of rye, or wheat, 37,500,000 bushels of potatoes, and of course, 7,500,000 bushels of flax. And not for one year alone, but for all time, this slight increase in the yield of the plant would add many millions of bushels to our crops.

"Clean, plump selected seed, true to variety, not mixed, free from weed seed and from disease and with strong germinating power should always be planted by the farmer as a means of increasing his crop yield."

The United Kingdom last year consumed 254,182,000 pounds of tea and 29,186,000 pounds of coffee.

The Private Secretary

William Gillette once said that of all the parts he had played your part has more genuine pleasure in its portrayal than that of the Rev. Robert Spalding in "The Private Secretary." He considers it one of his comedies, and excepting "Sherlock Holmes" and the one he considers it is known by the fact that it has been ever since constant presentation, the most consistent money maker of all comedies, not excepting "Charley's Aunt," and the one he considers it is known by the fact that the play has just as ever all elected and no longer languages as it was on the original.

Mr. C. James Bancroft, the celebrated English Comedian, has been very happy in his selection of "The Private Secretary" as the medium for his forthcoming starring tour. He has presented the play himself over 2,000 times, playing nearly two years in London alone. Coming to this country he has made no bad move in bringing his English company intact, just as he played it in London. The papers of the British metropolis were loud in their praises of Mr. Bancroft and there is no question about his success here. The play will be seen at the Royal George Theatre, on Monday, March 11.

WOMEN WITH WEAKNESS

For all weakness from which girls and women suffer, no surer remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They maintain that bracing health every woman so earnestly desires; they prevent disease and bring strength that lasts till old age.

"No medicine could be more beneficial than Dr. Hamilton's Pills" writes Mrs. Mary R. Ayrton, of Victoria. "I have been strengthened, my digestion is better, I have improved in color and feel considerably better since using Dr. Hamilton's Pills." Sold everywhere, 25c per box or five boxes for one dollar.

The Horseman

[illegible] to become horse racing, and [illegible] alone should be chosen to act as judges where the welfare of such a good sport is at stake. The rule books of both the American and National Trotting Associations are cheap, and there is no reason why any man who is willing to accept an invitation to act as judge should not thoroughly familiarize himself with the rules that he may have to enforce.

* * *

And now that the racing season is about on it would save a whole lot of trouble and annoyance later on if every owner, trainer and driver of a trotter or pacer would get a copy of the rule book and study the rules as laid down by the parent associations.

NOSE COLDS CURED QUICKLY

Dear Sirs,—I was a chronic sufferer from continuous colds in the throat and nose, and for many years have constantly had Catarrh. I was recommended to try Catarrhozone, and find that by using the inhaler on the first touch of a cold or la grippe I am able to stop it in a few hours. I have been able to breathe through my nose freely since using Catarrhozone, in fact I am completely cured. (Signed) Elwood G. Lee, Nederlaan, Ont.

All dealers sell Catarrhozone, in 25c, 50c and $1.00 sizes. Refuse a substitute.

Patchen II is a classy pacer and I've heard the praises of Abar sung. [illegible] What are you going to do with Hal [illegible] if Tom Murphy gets him to the post sound and feeling well? That pacer worked a mile in 2:04½ two years ago, and he is a beat cat when it comes to racing mile heats until somebody wins three of them.

Pertinent Personalities

THIS week the census man started making his rounds asking the most impertinent questions. He wants to know all about your age, your occupation, your income, your sex, whether you are single, married, widowed, divorced or legally separated, month of birth, year of age, country or place of birth, if immigrant, all about your diseases and a hundred odd other questions; nothing has been forgotten. The head of this whole census taking is the busiest man in Canada. For that matter he has been the busiest man for weeks and months getting all this tremendous machinery for the national stocktaking into smooth running order. Archibald Blue is his name, ruddy of face, white of hair, low and gentle of voice, far from the inquisitive man one would expect. For years he has been preparing to count noses. He is a thorough organizer and simply lives on figures. Statistics take the place with him of Sunday ham and eggs. He is an old newspaperman, and like a good many other journalists drifted into the easy going paths of government service. For ten years he was secretary of bureau of industries in Ontario. It was there he acquired his habit of compiling things and then he became director of the bureau of mines for Ontario and he nearly bankrupt [illegible]

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Application must be made in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Agency, on certain conditions, by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

N.B.—Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

It was shown that he was at the house that afternoon and that the horse had been on the premises for three or four hours previous to ... the fire breaking out. In closing the case for the defence Mr. Morrison made a strong plea for the acquittal of the accused on the ground that the Crown had failed to connect him with the crime and that the prisoner had satisfactorily accounted for his movements that afternoon. His Honor Judge Taylor briefly reviewed the evidence pointing out the weakness in the evidence adduced on behalf of the Crown while on the other hand the defence was unimpeachable. He found the accused not guilty and on motion of Counsel Morrison the prisoner was discharged.

Mr. Stover was congratulated on all sides at the outcome of his trial.

District Court Case

Vermilion, March 14.—Considerable interest was manifested in the case tried before Judge Taylor in the district court today of James W. Stover, a farmer living at Landonville on the charge of arson. The court was held in the Royal George hall which was crowded with spectators. The charge against Stover was that he set fire to stacks of hay, the property of one Anderson. The Crown was represented by W. M. Corbett, Fort Saskatchewan and the accused by J. W. G. Morrison. Several witnesses were examined for both sides. The Crown sought to fasten the guilt upon the accused by showing that he was in possession of a horse that made peculiar tracks in the snow identical with those seen around the stacks. An effort was made to trace these tracks to Stover's place. The defence showed that it was practic...

THE GREAT MOGULS

Picturesque Rulers to Whose Power George V. Has Succeeded

The Coronation of George V. at Delhi the city of the Great Moguls, made him heir and successor to their imperial power, says the English Queen. The history of these his predecessors is one of strange contrasts.

First of the Great Moguls was Tamerlane, the mighty conqueror a type of overweening arrogance unrestrained by any fear of God or man. ... Tamerlane descended ... on the plains of northern India ... "It is a far cry to Delhi."

Amid scenes of indescribable horror the city was taken, but Tamerlane came as destroyer not as founder. He returned to Samarkand to die leaving the Empire of the Moguls in India to be established one hundred years later by Baber, his great descendant.

Baber the Adventurer was the most fascinating of his race. Poet, philosopher, artist and musician, he was skilled in the arts of nature and in the knowledge of men. Withal he set himself to become a strong military leader and chose Tamerlane as his example. It was in the Punjab ...

AUTOS FOR THE YUKON

Could be Used in Winter if Built to Fit Sledge Tracks

Automobiles of suitable construction could be used in the Yukon. Local tests in the last two years in all kinds of weather have proved that the gasoline does not congeal in the cold weather.

Two years ago a large automobile was used successfully in Dawson and on suitable country roads. Last winter the White Pass and Yukon Route Company, which operates a 320-mile stage line in winter between White Horse and Dawson, tried an automobile, but it did not prove satisfactory as the automobile's guage was much wider than that of the sleds which they were using and the sled track [illegible] used.

The snowfall in the Yukon basin between the first of October and the last of April—usually about two feet—remains on the ground until melted by the sun in the spring. By midwinter the track is worn down in the snow by these narrow gauge sleds until the banks on either side are 16 to 24 inches high, making it difficult, if not impossible, for a wide-gauge vehicle of any kind to pass over the road.

There being no blizzards and little wind in the winter in the Yukon Valley there are no snowdrifts to contend with, except on timberless ridges. The roads usually have low and even grades and were they of suitable width would be well suited for motor vehicles. These roads or trails were originally made fifteen to twenty-five inches wide to accommodate the dog sled.

When horses took the place of dogs these trails were widened to accommodate the "double-ender" one-horse sled, which is long and narrow, with the runners turned up at both ends to save reversing the sled, which is difficult to do on such narrow roads when turning back. In recent years some of these roads have been widened for the use of wagons in summer, over which heavy loads are drawn by two, four and six horses.

If some motor vehicle [illegible] would construct a car of the width of the sled now in use in this country it could be used to great advantage throughout the whole Yukon Valley for speedy travel in conveying mails, passengers and freight. The time now occupied by stage between White Horse and Dawson is five to eight days with relay stations at 20-mile intervals while an automobile should make the journey at any time in the year within two days.

FINAL CROP ESTIMATE

Bulletin Issued by Department of Agriculture Gives Much Valuable Data

The Census and Statistics Office of the Department of Agriculture has issued from Ottawa the following bulletin giving the final estimates of the area, yield and value of the principal field crops of the Dominion for 1911. The field crops of Canada are shown to have occupied last year a total area of 42,853,000, and their value, calculated at the average local market prices, amounts to $565,712,000. The area under wheat last year was 10,474,000 acres, of which 1,172,000 acres were fall wheat in Ontario and Alberta, and the production was 215,851,000 bushels of the value of $123,567,000. Fall wheat produced 20,91[illegible] bushels of the value of $21,461,[illegible] Oats occupied 9,220,000 acres, and yielded 348,184,000 bushels of the value of $125,612,000. Barley 1,404,000 acres yielded 4[illegible] bushels of the value of [illegible] and flax 1,102,000 acres, yielded 12,[illegible] bushels of the value of $19,[illegible]. The combined area under rye, peas, buckwheat, mixed grains and flax was 2,141,000 acres, the yield [illegible] bushels and the value $41,[illegible]. Hoed and cultivated crops, comprising beans, corn for husking, potatoes, turnips and other roots, except sugar beets, occupied 1,[illegible] acres and yielded 17[illegible] bushels of the value of $7[illegible]. Sugar beets in Ontario and Alberta had an acreage of 20,876 and a yield of [illegible] tons of the value of $4,16[illegible]. Fodder crops including fodder corn, hay, clover and alfalfa show an acreage of [illegible] a production of [illegible] tons and a value of $161,[illegible]. Alfalfa, a record of which was taken for the first time, shows an area of [illegible] acres with a yield of [illegible] tons. This valuable fodder crop is being principally grown in Ontario, Quebec and Alberta, the average yield per acre for the whole of Canada being 2.4 tons.

For the year 1911 the areas from which the yields are calculated were those of the recent census and the resulting data are not therefore strictly comparable with the estimates of the three previous years which were based upon the reports of correspondents. It may be mentioned that the area and production of wheat in 1911 exceeded by over 1,000,000 acres and 45,[illegible] bushels the estimates of 1910. A more satisfactory criterion of the difference between the two seasons of 1911 and 1910 is afforded by the average rates of yield per acre which for fall wheat was 22.19 bushels in 1911 against 23.19 in 1910, spring wheat 20.63 against 15.53, oats 37.76 against 28.79, barley 29.94 against 24.62 and flax 11.41 against 7.97.

In the three Northwest Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta the wheat production was 194,083,000 bushels compared with 12[illegible] bushels, the estimate of 1910; of oats 212,819,000 compared with 1[illegible],000 and of barley 24,043,000 compared with 21,2[illegible]. The wheat production of 1911 in Manitoba was 60,275,000 bushels from 2,890,000 acres, in Saskatchewan 9[illegible],665,000 bushels from 4,705,000 acres and in Alberta 34,447,000 bushels from 1,617,000 acres.

By provinces the total value of all field crops in 1911 was as follows:—Prince Edward Island $8,[illegible], Nova Scotia $14,297,000, New Brunswick $16,707,000, Quebec $102,147,000, Ontario $193,340,000, Manitoba $73,126,000, Saskatchewan $107,147,000, Alberta $4[illegible], British Columbia $1,[illegible].

Owing to the exceptionally mild weather which prevailed during the fall and early winter live stock are reported as having entered winter quarters in excellent condition. As a general rule winter supplies are ample.

BABY'S HEALTH IN WINTER

During the winter months the mother finds it very difficult to keep her little ones well. Colds come on quickly and the discomfort to the baby affects the whole household. To keep baby well during the winter he should be warmly clothed, have a daily bath, lots of fresh air and Baby's Own Tablets should be given him occasionally to keep his little bowels working regularly, as nothing will bring on colds so quickly as a clogged condition of the bowels. Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They break up colds, cure constipation and indigestion, expel worms and make baby bright and happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Busy Anecdote

A private soldier once rendered some slight service to the first Napoleon.

"Thank you, captain," said the emperor carelessly.

"In what regiment, sire?" was the instant response of the quick witted private.

"In my guards," replied the emperor, pleased with the man's ready retort.

This incident, with appropriate variations, also happened to Genghis Khan, Ivan the Terrible, Attila, Gustavus Adolphus, Louis XIV, Charlemagne, Alexander, King Alfred, Xerxes, Richard the Lion-hearted, and Henry of Navarre.

Some modern cities built all at once, complete and ready for occupancy, have been successes, but the Port of Hwangchow, laid out in the spring of 1909, on the shore of Yehli Bay, ten miles from Macao Harbor, China, has failed to become a rival of Macao and Hong Kong as was hoped. Despite its telephones, water works, light and street car service, and other up-to-date features, its population is only 3,000.

Second-Handed

"These," said the author of a volume of poems, "are the children of my brain."

"Yes," replied Mrs. Cayenne, "but such a large number of them are adopted children."

Blood is Like Water

When Lips Are Pallid and the Gums Lose Their Color

You Can Make the Blood Rich and Red by Using

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

If you find yourself easily tired, lacking in vigor and energy, unable to properly digest the food you eat and generally out of sorts, look in the mirror and carefully examine the lips, gums and eyelids. If color is lacking you may be sure that you are anaemic—that your blood is thin, weak and watery.

It would be a mistake, under these circumstances, to use purging medicines; what you need is more blood—richer blood—and you can increase the amount of rich, red blood in the body by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Not in any miraculous way does this treatment work, but just as naturally as do any of the laws of nature. It supplies to the body the elements which go to the formation of new, rich blood. These are found in condensed and easily assimilated form in Dr. Chase's Nerve [illegible] therefore do not bother even the weakest stomach.

It will take a little patience and perseverance to thoroughly restore the system, but by noting your increase of weight and the return of color to your faded complexion you will be convinced that the lost vigor and vitality is being restored to your system.

Stuffed It Out

The stories of the embarrassment of unsophisticated diners when faced with highly unsophisticated menu cards are endless and usually amusing. A man whose career had confined his knowledge of things to eat to such standard produces as ham and eggs and pork and beans found himself among a company who ordered intelligently from an extensive bill of fare. It contains so many classified dishes that it makes a fair sized book, the pages of which he passed aimlessly and in dismay. The waiter, who needed only his order to go to the kitchen, was standing at one side deferentially, with his order slip and pencil in hand. The delay was not irksome and irritating to the unskilled diner and finally he pointed blindly to the middle of the page with his finger.

"Give me some of that," he said.

The waiter looked over his shoulder and remarked:—

"That's Mayonnaise dressing, sir."

"I know it, I can read."

"But," apologetically, "what will you have it on?"

"On a plate, you bonehead. Do you feed your customers in troughs here?"

A Pill That is Prized.—There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Parmelee's Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem, they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

Only One Who Knew

A little boy who had just joined the Anglican Sunday School was asked by his mother how he liked it.

"Why," exclaimed Charlie, "they don't know much. The teacher asked what was the Collect, and I was the only one who knew."

"And what did you say, dear?"

"Why, I told them pretty quick that it was a pain in the stomach."

"Sir, I wish to marry your daughter," faltered the young man.

"You do, eh?" exclaimed the fond parent. "Well, I have been rather expecting this, and to be thoroughly orthodox I must put a few questions to you. Do you drink?"

"No, sir. I am a teetotaler."

"You do not smoke?"

"I never use tobacco in any form."

"Well, I didn't suppose you ate it. Do you frequent the race course?"

"I never saw a horserace in my life, sir."

"Hmm. Play cards for money?"

"Emphatically no, sir."

"Well, young man, I must say you are heavily handicapped. My daughter is a thorough society girl and I can't for the life of me see what she is going to do with you. However, it's her funeral and if she wants to undertake the job she can risk it."

[illegible] England and Spain, although the German press manifest an attitude of hostility and dissatisfaction and some papers declare that Mr Cruppi, the French Foreign Minister is violating the stipulations of the Algeciras Convention by sending forces to interfere between two Moorish chieftains.

The root of German dissatisfaction is the fear that France may seize part or all of Morocco but the Spanish Prime Minister declares that, whatever happens the Cabinets of Paris and Madrid will maintain the integrity of the Moorish Empire the sovereignty of the Sultan and the open door." The London Times believes this peaceful statement, and calls it "the best possible comment on the ungracious carping at the French attitude which is again being renewed by a portion of the German press." But the Manchester Guardian is not of the same believing mind and says:

"We are grieved to see France about to impale herself on the horns of this dilemma. The truth seems to be that there is a strong party in France determined to have Morocco, and quite unscrupulous about the means that it employs or as to the degree of injury that it inflicts on France's general policy. How much support this faction commands at the French Foreign Office is doubtful but if we may judge by our own experiences under similar circumstances, the French Government is not conscious of any ulterior designs on Morocco but is in two minds, and therefore at the mercy of those who have one. France has accepted the Act of Algeciras which [illegible] the idea of annexation or of aggrandizement. THE BIGGEST SHIP AND THE BIGGEST DOCK

[illegible] layed the work, so that about seven years altogether have been occupied in the construction. The Alexandra dock, one of the largest in the world, is 80 feet wide at the entrance, 80 feet broad on the floor, with a floor length of 830 feet. The new dock is 94 feet wide at the entrance, 100 feet wide on the floor, and 830 feet long on the floor when the caisson gate is placed in its normal position at the entrance. By floating the gate out and placing it against the outer face of the dock entrance, the total length on the floor is 847½ feet.

In view of the constantly increasing length of ocean liners, the construction of the dock has been carried out in such a way as to permit of the permanent lengthening of the structure to the extent of 200 feet. Whenever this is done a normal length of clearance will be available of 1,050 feet, sufficient to comfortably accommodate the much-talked-of 1,000 feet ship of the future.

The following further particulars will of floor at sides of dock below coping level is 12[illegible] feet, and at the lowest altar course 10[illegible] feet [illegible] inches, the depth of floor at centre below level of high water of ordinary spring tides is 37 feet [illegible] inches, the top of keel blocks below level of high water of ordinary spring tides is 32 feet 9 inches, height of top of blocks above floor 4 feet [illegible] inches, level of entrance sill above floor at centre of dock 2 feet, bottom of floor at sides of dock below coping level 43 feet [illegible] inches, thickness of floor at centre 17 feet [illegible] inches, thickness of side walls at bottom of batter of face, 19 feet 9 inches.

Camp Talk for Tenderfeet

(By Dan Beard, in Field and Stream)

Of course it is not within possibility that every man who reads this can go to the wild provinces of Northern Quebec, the Hudson Bay region, Alaska, the lake lands of Canada, or the wild Northwest, neither is it probable that every one can be fortunate enough to visit the wilds in the southwest of Mexico, or one of the parts of God's country where big game and big adventure still beckon to the man with red blood in their necks. But it is possible for even men on small salaries to own a permanent camp of their own in wild and unfrequented places, places where they can be free from the presence of the summer boarders, out of reach of the sound of the trolleys and even where the honk of the automobile is seldom heard. Such places exist within a hundred miles of almost every city in America, but they can only be found by making little journeys in search of them. They are not on the list of real estate boomers because the very thing that makes them valuable to campers is the fact that they are tucked away in unfrequented corners. The mountains of Pennsylvania within a hundred miles of New York City, notably in Pike county, abound in small lakes, lakes which are usually filled with big fish or which can be stocked with bass and other fish according to the conditions of the water and tastes of the fishermen. There also exists within the circle of a hundred miles of New York City Hall a sparse supply of such big game as lynx, bob cats, black bear, Virginia deer and smaller game, including foxes, raccoons, 'possums, great northern hare, rabbits, rough grouse, woodcock, various waterfowl and quail. Of course, it is almost a [illegible]

[illegible] when the stock of our provisions consisted of some old crusts of bread two weeks old, a handful of tea, no salt, no pepper, no vinegar, no butter, no milk, no sugar, no camp kettle, no cooking utensils of any kind and yet we had a very enjoyable meal. Mr Rice had the honor of showing an Indian how to make a tea kettle of birch bark out of proving to the incredulous savage that the water could be boiled in a vessel made of such inflammable material. We toasted the bread, which was as hard as stones, to give it a flavor, as well as to make it easier to bite and masticate. We caught some trout and toasted them black. The burnt surface acted as a condiment to the meat. We drank the tea straight and enjoyed it.

But it is not often necessary to reduce one's commissary to such a primitive basis. When you have selected your camp outfit and personal baggage, have bags made for every article, bags with "pucker" or draw-string. Make the bags of different material and different colors. You will soon learn by observing the color of the bag whether it contains a fishing reel, tobacco or toilet articles. Use oil silk for your toothbrush bag, buckskin or chamois skin for your ditty bag in which you pack your nick-nacks, threads, needles and personal treasures, when you do not wish to carry them on your person, such things as your sleeve buttons, collar buttons, watch, compass, etc. Use canton flannel for your fish reels, chintz or calico for your comb, brush, fly books and other small articles. The big bags for your blankets, extra clothing, provisions, etc., should be made of waterproof canvas. Pack all your duffle first in its individual bags and then put the small bags into the big ones. WHAT FOLLOWED A CUT

A Magistrate's Wonderful Experience With Zam-Buk.

Mr. J. E. Armand, J.P., Justice of the Peace, and stationmaster at Wellington, on the Prince Edward Island Ry., has had a wonderful proof of the healing powers of Zam-Buk. He says:—"When I turn a corner, I am liable to get into a stable, and fell on a frightful track containing a nail cut on the front of my leg. I thought this would heal; but instead of doing so, it developed into a bad ulcer and later into a form of eczema which spread very rapidly and also started on the other leg. Both legs became so swollen and sore that I could only go about my work by having them bandaged. My doctor said I must stop work and lay up.

"After six months of this trouble I consulted another doctor, but with no better result. I tried all the salves, lotions and ointments I could hear of, but instead of getting better I got worse.

"This was my condition when I got my first box of Zam-Buk. Greatly to my delight that first box gave me relief. I continued to apply it to the sores, and day by day they got better. I used box after box, and I had got hold of something that would cure me, and in the end it did.

"It is now over a year since Zam-Buk healed a sore in my case, and there has been no return of the eczema or any trace of it."

Such is the nature of the great cures which Zam-Buk is daily effecting. Purely herbal in composition, it is the ideal remedy for all skin diseases, and is now in every home. Eczema, old sores, ringworm, festering sores, blood poisoning, ulcerous sores, piles, scaly sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, cuts, burns and bruises. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

WOMEN STILL ARE PRAISING THEM

MRS. GEO. BUTLER TELLS WHAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DID FOR HER.

She was tired, nervous and run down, and suffered from pains in the back.—Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Pugwash-ville, Gloucester Co., N. B., (Special)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills are suffering woman's best friend was never better demonstrated than in the case of Mrs. Geo. Butler, a well-known and highly respected resident of this place.

"My trouble was brought on by hard work," Mrs. Butler tells her friends. "For some years I suffered from pains in the back, but I had always tried to keep at my work. Finally I had to take to bed. I was very low spirited and nervous, and suffered from pains in the back. I was also very poor and sweaten.

"I was in a generally run-down condition and feeling very much discouraged when I started using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I can only say I feeled relief at once.

"The mainspring of woman's health is the kidneys. If the kidneys are right the blood will be pure. Pure blood is health. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills make the Kidneys right."

An Alarming Remedy

"Every Christmas present should be useful," said M. C. Hetherhill, New Brunswick's new governor, at a dinner in Fredericton.

"We should none of us forget our Christmas pre-ris on Sunday, as did the rich widow of Chamberlain, who sent 10 000 starts checks to 11 people to help the poor sufferers from disciples sickness."

Gallantry for Soldier Murderers

The French Senate has passed a bill under which soldiers or sailors sentenced to death by a court-martial will henceforth be guillotined instead of shot, except in cases where the offence is one which renders liability for the sentence to be carried out by the latter method. Under the law of Nov. 9, 1916, Corporal Lechat was shot at Mont Cassis by soldiers, one of whom, Grabe, was sentenced to death. His sentence was eventual ly commuted in one of the mysterious ways in which the French Government, it being deemed inadvisable to put more doing compulsory military service to form a firing party. The Chamber of Deputies passed Lechat

HOW LOUIS NAPOLEON ESCAPED

to the Disguise of a Workman He Passed the Guard at Fortress

In discussing the origin of Louis Napoleon's nickname of "Badinguet" some details were given incidentally of his escape from the fortress of Ham in northern France on May 10, 1846. Fuller details are now available, thanks to the researches of M. Thirria, and in view of the escape of Abbe Lemire from the fortress of Ham at the present moment.

It seems that the sole credit of the escape must be with Louis Napoleon himself. He made his valet, Thelin, buy a blouse, some rough trousers, a cap which were scrubbed with pumice stone and a pair of shoes. Then he cut off his moustache, put on a blue apron, a blue pair of trousers and a close-fitting shirt of coarse stuff. Some workmen were carrying out some repairs to that part of the fort. One of these Prince lodged out this valet to his disguise, so much so that the two waitresses retained no suspicion regarding the latter. Napoleon then walked out at the same time a pipe in his mouth and a plank on his shoulder. The sentinel on duty at the drawbridge was reading a letter as he passed and took no notice of him. It was then 4 o'clock in the morning.

Four times that day, the last time at five in the afternoon, did the Governor, Douguet, send for the Prince. Each time Dr Conneau replied that the Prince could not see anybody because he had taken medicine. When at last the Governor lost patience and went himself to the Prince's room and walked up to the bed he was horrified to find the supposed invalid was lying in a dress suit. The valet had meanwhile quietly had taken the place of Louis Napoleon. The discovery was made too late for that time the fugitive was over the Belgium frontier.

NEW HOTEL LAW IN FRANCE

At Least 60 Per Cent. of the Staff Must be French

From the manager downward the staff often consists of an entirely foreign element, largely German and Swiss and minus Frenchmen who make better linguists, says the Queen, and in other ways render themselves capable of looking after a big connection. Can this be wondered at, when the latter remain mostly in their present proportion?

It is only a few years since the Swiss and Germans were given on the same day the choice between the Army and expulsion, and the latter, as is clearly shown to the authorities a change was made in interpretation of the law impossible. Even the waiters and waitresses are now compelled by law affecting hotel employees, as the proportion of French to foreign servants cannot be found for the huge hostelries where a trade knowledge of several languages is essential.

A similar law governing all hotels practicing in French resorts has been in force for some years, but as it does not actually forbid foreign domination, there has been some years of delay, though the Frenchmen in the hotels bedare they are allowed to be kept out of their own, as hitherto, as even though they have the diploma of their own country.

Is Tomlinson for Hanging?

Rochester 191 needs no testimonial to prove its worth. Just ask the victim if for coughs and colds for croup or consumption, for bad throat or for pains in the limbs or body anywhere that the healing power is needed and needs no guarantee. That shows why this 191 is in great demand.

Nine Lives

He sat down with a fountain pen and with great care wrote a letter. He started a story of how he had run afoul of a terrible man, how the man had committed a murder, and then in the end he had killed the man.

He threw in a sweet little love affair, a duel and a smashing automobile, a mounted grenade and a missing hair, a brutish fight, a cavalry charge and a red-eyed woman with red gold hair. He worked about the end.

But as that the story went astray. Somehow it was not the story he had meant to write. It was not the story he originally had in his mind at all. It was not the story he had meant to write.

"To write toward the fourth is to find oneself in a blank dream," he said. "The finished letter is the one that never leaves the fountain pen and if ever I start to write a letter I will write it with a pencil."

Wear of Traffic on Roads

A machine that measures the wear caused by traffic upon the surface of highways is among the scientific instruments on show at the annual meeting of the Physical Society of London at the Imperial College of Science, South Kensington. In speaking a new Pole machine, an official of the Board referred to the wear on the chief main roads of London and its suburbs. "We said we were down about one inch, on the average, but in places we have to replace as much as three inches in depth. The wear is much greater down the middle than on the sides. The greatest wear is caused by the heavy motor wagons, and we find that those in front throw to left or right according to the amount of dirt on the road."

Needed

"I say my dear," exclaimed a mild eyed youth, gently patting the head of Hyde Park. "I wish I was a counterpart of your father."

He did," responded the girl. "I should like to have the chance of teaching you better manners."

"Do you love your parents, Reginald?"

"Oh, yes."

"And who do you love your parents, Reginald?"

"Oh, it's the conventional thing."

One Fellow Said He Spent $10,000

This all went into that old Stomach of his—in the form of nasty, but now The Fellow has just completed the Neal 3 Day Drink Cure:

He had been a Good Old Sport and hit the pace that kills, but he finally woke up to the fact that he couldn't handle it like he used to and threw up both hands, admitting it had him beat.

Why, it will get the best of 'em—all you can do is to view it.

It wasn't so long ago he said he could handle about 10 or 20 a day and wake up in the morning and take a full glass of whiskey and it would put him in shape to go to work. But as years rolled by it's a different story. A few drinks now overtakes him to just starting a little good time.

The Fellow also stated he used to drink a little more than he should, but he never let drink get the best of him in his life—he hasn't money enough—and a couple pounds more would be useless him.

Sore he took this treatment last May, and furthermore many of his friends have since taken it.

If you are a Farmer, Skilled Mechanic, Traveling Salesman or a business man—Take time to investigate our claims, and put results to a severe investigation.

HER GIFT TO MILES

A Christmas Present That He Didn't Expect.

By FRITZ KORSMEYER.

When the maid opened the door a gust of December wind, carrying with it a few flakes of snow, followed the tall, stiff form of Cranner through the vestibule and into the hall. As the maid had spent years in the service of the Garrisons, she ventured a restrained "Good evening," but Cranner calmly stalked by her over to the hall tree. When he had put aside his things and turned to her again she said:

"Mr. [illegible] is in his room, sir. Shall I tell him you are here or will you"—

"I'll go up. He's expecting me."

At the head of the stairs he knocked at his friend's room and entered.

"Sorry to keep you waiting, old man; [illegible] in a few minutes. Sit down and make yourself comfortable, [illegible] you?"

Cranner took the proffered cigar and smoked in silence a few minutes while his friend worked at his cravat.

"I had a rather peculiar talk with [illegible] today," began Cranner in a tone [illegible] Garrison to stop whistling and mumble an encouraging monosyllable; "happened to meet him on the street, you know, just as I was going into Hope's to look at a few Christmas [illegible]. He had such a long face on that I [illegible] he needed jollying up a bit. [illegible] him to need cheering, is it?"

"Scarcely," assented Garrison, with an uneasy laugh. "But of course you know that Charlie has had some occasion to look glum lately."

"Oh, yes; I've heard the [illegible] fortunes have been rather going to pot. Well, as I said, I started in to chaff him about Christmas gifts. I [illegible] a few trifles, but most of the time I was showing Miles things that I said a man with a fiancee ought to be interested in, and he was. Several times I thought he was to the point of buying something worth giving, but he finally said he couldn't decide. We walked up the street together, and Miles fell to speculating in a general way as to what girls expected of their fiances at Christmas time. He seemed to want my opinion. Queer of him to ...

... was looking into the fire. She moved the stand nearer him.

"I want these close to me this evening. Don't you think they should be? Why don't you reprove me for being sentimental, as you always do? Or are you already under the influence of tomorrow and kindly disposed toward every one, even me?"

"Even you. Now, Martha"—

"Oh, well, I'll take it back if you don't like it," she hastened to say, laughing, then in a tone of almost bantering tenderness: "My dear, I wanted to tell you about some plans for tomorrow, but how can I talk Christmas when you are in such a solemn state? You'd dishearten Santa Claus himself."

"I've been thinking," answered Miles slowly, "that perhaps you may have thought the roses—may have taken them in a way—may perhaps have misunderstood them a little." He rose, took a few steps around the room and then began again with better courage. "It occurred to me after I had sent them that as they would arrive this evening you might not take them as—as my gift. I must tell you something that has been troubling me for a long time. Things are not quite the same with father and me as they were when I first met you. Perhaps you know it?"

There was a questioning inflection in his last words. The girl's face [illegible] paled a little, but just the faintest smile curved her lips. She was gazing steadfastly at the rose jar, on which her hand rested, and she made no answer.

"Until Christmas came I did not realize the change in our prospects," he went on steadily. "Perhaps I [illegible] not want to think of that, but if it does make a difference, why, [illegible]"—

Martha was looking straight into his eyes with an expression of infinite tenderness.

"It has made a difference, Cha[illegible] all the difference in the world. I have been wondering for weeks what you would like for a Christmas gift, and what you have said tonight solves the problem." There was a queer little catch in her voice, but she went on bravely. "And I've decided, sweetheart, to give you that which I think you need most of all"—her hand crept tremulously into his—"myself."

Miles stared at her in a dazed fashion, and she smiled at him gently.

"I realize now, dear, how selfish I was to insist on being a June bride just because my mother and Nell had been married in June. The family will all be here tomorrow, even Aunt Helen from Toronto. Of course it would be such a quiet wedding—no finery, no gifts—but I thought that now, when—you were in trouble, you might need ...

A WONDERFUL BRIDGE.

Largest Natural Span in America, If Not in the World.

The largest natural bridge in America, if not indeed in the whole world, is located in southwestern Utah, not far from the state boundary line, and is known as the George Natural Bridge. Its total length between the huge natural abutments is about 300 feet, the width of the roadway is some 23 feet, while the span in the clear is 90 feet. From the bed up to the span is 160 feet. At the bottom flows a small water course that during the long hot summer months dwindles down to a [illegible] rivulet. Just what produced this [illegible] of nature has for some time puzzled the leading scientists of the country. It [illegible] scarcely have been created by the wear of water [illegible] there was a very large and swift current flowing where the little brook is now. The general explanation given for the creation of this natural bridge is that volcanic action, occurring at some distant period of the world's history, was the active agency.

The existence of the bridge is of comparatively recent knowledge to the public, though the Indians in that region have long known that there was such a work of nature. The red men often spoke of this bridge to the early settlers of that part of Utah, but little credence was ever given to their stories. About ten or twelve years ago it was first discovered by some mining prospectors. It is located in the heart of a very rugged region that is difficult of access. Of late years it [illegible] visited by a great many tourists and sightseers. Very recently some travelers visited this freak of old Mother Earth in automobiles, and one venturesome motorist drove his car across the bridge, passing safely [illegible] the yawning chasm. The stone [illegible] which the span is composed is dark brown sandstone of an unusually hard quality, and the thickness of the span is twenty feet or more. Engineers who have made a careful examination of this bridge pronounce it perfectly safe and secure and fully capable of [illegible] an immense weight. The span is free from flaws or seams.—Wide World Magazine.

PETTICOAT IN BLACK AND WHITE SILK

Fashion prefers little fullness in the silk undershirt. In many instances the knitted tights are used in preference to skirts of any kind.

Skirts are all straight and narrow in effect, but there's a tendency in the high class lines to slash at intervals at the foot, presumably to add to the walking comfort of the wearer. The striped silk petticoat seen in the illustration is cut on the newest lines. Black and white is the smart color scheme.

The city dude now takes his dog

And goes into the country
To have a lot of fun.

He could not hit a barn door

His dog was raised on chocolates
And don't know how to bay.

He surely looks courageous
With his gun and fine suit,
But if a cow just mooed at him
He'd up a tree quick scoot.

He'll sit before the cook stove
And drink hard cider down,
While Farmer Brown is shootin' game
For him to take to town.

Old Brown will shoot some chickens—
They're pheasants, don't you know—

You bet old Brown's not slow!

Then he will take those deer horns
That hung there twenty year
He'll brush the cobwebs off of them
And on them fresh blood smear.

The dude will give us all a wad
And say to all, "Goodby!"
Then quick to a photographer

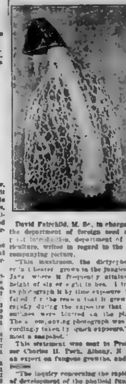
A Fungus That Grows Over an Inch a Minute.



David Fairchild, M. Sc., in charge of the department of foreign seed and plant introduction, department of agriculture, writes in regard to the accompanying picture:

"This mushroom, the dictyophora, or 'basket' grows in the jungles of Java, where it frequently attains a height of six or eight inches. I tried to photograph it by time exposure, but failed for the reason that it grew so rapidly during the exposure that the outlines were blurred on the plate. The accompanying photograph was accordingly taken by quick exposure, almost a snapshot."

This statement was sent to Professor Charles H. Peck, Albany, N. Y., an expert on fungous growths, and he [illegible]

"The inquiry concerning the rapidity of development of the phalloid fungus figured therein is a perfectly natural one, for this marvelous growth seems at first thought too great to be credible. Nevertheless these fungi grow very rapidly when they have begun to elongate their stems. In Mr. C. G. Lloyd's Mycological Notes he illustrates photographically the development of Phallus aurantiacus, which in ...

H. C. N. Shortell, harness maker, was in Edmonton on business during the week.

W. N. Trimble has 30 head of horses at the City Livery for the convenience of parties wanting to pick up a good horse or two.

Don't delay in securing your seed grain while the opportunity is afforded you. A considerable quantity is yet to be had through Standard advertisers.

A good house greeted C. J. Dancroft in "The Private Secretary" at the Royal George theatre Monday night, and it was a delighted audience that left the hall at the close of the performance.

Rev. J. P. Westman, Field Secretary for Epworth Leagues and Sunday Schools in Alberta and British Columbia, will preach in the Methodist church next Sunday.

"For the next few weeks prior to returning to Edmonton, I will be at the office of C. V. Caesar in the Town Hall, for the purpose of collecting my accounts and will be pleased to have all those indebted to me call and settle at once. R. G. Dunsmore.

The Annual social evening given by Ladies Aid in the Methodist church on Friday evening last, was a most enjoyable affair. This evening is open to the young people of the town. Upwards of one hundred were present.

M. Mecklenburgh, A.M., the only University Graduate sight specialist in Edmonton, will again be at the Brunswick Hotel, Vermilion, Tuesday March 19, and at Islay Hotel, Wednesday March 20th. It will pay you to consult this eminent authority about your eyes.

F. T. Beckrocher, the Islay auctioneer, had a large set of posters printed at this office Tuesday for Leslie M. Morgan, N. W. 2? 51 3, who is having a sale on March 27th. There is a splendid list of stuff to be sold including a number of fine farm horses. Remember the date and the place, 7 miles north east of Islay.

H. J. Payne, formerly engaged on the C. N. R., has opened up in the contracting and building line and is at present engaged in erecting a large two storey workshop, 24x24 to the rear of his premises on Vermilion St. We bespeak for Mr. Payne, who is an expert carpenter in all its branches, a large share of the building contracts to be undertaken this season.

The old timers smoker in the Conservative club rooms Friday evening was a very successful and enjoyable affair. The rooms were fairly well filled and a good programme of instrumental and vocal music was rendered. The orchestra comprised Messrs. Broughton, Brunette, Mackie and West. Their selections were excellently given. Among the vocalists were Messrs. Joseph L. Pean, A. M. West, W. Pearl and S. C. Crome.

J. J. Bell of Islay has returned from the west with a car of sheep.

Jas. Kennedy, Lumber Merchant, is building a large extension to his sheds.

J. L. Payne of New York, has been visiting his brother H. J. Payne town.

Vermilion hockey team were defeated in the finals for the C. N. R. championship by 3 points by the Fort.

"All parties indebted to me will kindly settle their accounts at once as I am leaving Vermilion." - R. G. Dunsmore.

Born. At Vermilion on Wednesday, March 6th, 1912, to Mr. and Mrs. Percy H. Abercrombie, a son.

Remember date of Marris & Maughan's big Stock Sale, which is March 20th.

J. G. Clark, conservative candidate for the local legislature for this district was in town last week and attended the conservative smoker Friday evening.

"The Barrier" was played before a crowded house Thursday night last and was received with much enthusiasm by the audience. The play is stirring from start to finish.

The Alberta Union Club are to hold a sale of "Old Maids" at the Union Schoolhouse, March 29. All ladies are requested to dress old style, bring a plain box with lunch for two also to bring a mask. Admission 50c. All bachelors bringing an old maid will receive his 50c back.

Word has reached here of the suicide at Union Lake of Joseph Paterson, a half breed of the district. In a drunken frenzy he shot himself through the head. Prior to taking his life he made a brutal assault upon his wife and beat his children until they were almost reduced to unconsciousness.

The farming community will be pleased to learn that an active move is on foot towards the operating of the Creamery this spring. A meeting of the directors of the company is to be held on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the Standard expects to have an interesting announcement to make in its next issue.

Judge Taylor has rendered judgement in the action of Prichett vs C. N. R. for loss to plaintiff's hay occasioned by fire spreading from the C. N. R. right-of-way near Innisfree finding in favor of plaintiff with costs. Murray & Ekbetz represented the plaintiff; Short, Cross, Bigger & Collison, the defendants.

At the election for councillor for the local Improvement district at Landonville in January, Joseph Keller and J. H. Landon were the candidates, the latter being elected. Subsequently Mr. Keller took proceedings to oust Landon of office. Before application could be heard, Landon resigned. A new election was called by the secretary of the district and this one was held last Friday, the candidates being Keller and James Johnston, the former winning by 21 votes to 11. Landon had been nominated but subsequently withdrew.

A Tragic Death

Young Norwegian Instantly Killed While Working on Portable Sawmill.

On Tuesday, March 12, while engaged on a portable sawmill on the homestead of A. Algoe in the Angle Lake district, a young Norwegian, 21 years of age, named Ole S. Odegaarden, was struck on the head with a piece of flying scantling from the saw and instantly killed. The forehead of the unfortunate young man was badly smashed by the force of the blow.

There were several other men engaged about the saw besides the deceased and all witnessed the sad fatility. Odegaarden was picked up immediately after the accident only to be found lifeless. There is no doubt that death was instantaneous owing to the force of the blow throwing back his head and breaking the neck.

Ole Johnson, also a Norwegian, who was one of the eyewitnesses, was the first person to convey the news to Vermilion, notifying Constable McPhail, R.N.W.M.P. Constable McPhail left for the Angle Lake district last Monday morning to institute an investigation of the actual occurrence as is always necessary in cases of this nature.

Deceased was a native of Ron Valdris, Norway, coming to Canada about a year ago and settling first in a Norwegian settlement at Millet, Alta. On or about March 1st, he settled in the Angle Lake district and since being there has been employed on a portable sawmill. Enquiries already made by Constable reveal the facts that he has no relatives in this country. His aged father and mother are still living in Ron Valdris, Norway. Mr. Odegaarden was very popular in the district and his tragic and sudden death has cast a gloom over that district.

Agricultural Society Not Favorable To Town's Offer

P. Long New Secy. Treas Agril. Dept to be Asked to operate Park in Connection with Demonstration Work

The regular monthly meeting of the town council was held Monday night, all members of the board present except Coun. McLay who was out of town. A long list of general and routine business was gone through and it was a very late hour when the meeting adjourned. Among the communications received was a letter from Vermilion Agril. Society turning down the offer of the Town re the taking over of the grounds recently acquired by the Society upon which it was intended to expend $4000.00 in event of agreement being reached and By-law successfully voted upon by the ratepayers. The Secy was instructed to write the Society outlining the Town's position as the issue seemed somewhat cloudy.

Three applications were received for the position of Secy-Treas viz from Messrs. Brown, Lawes and Long. Mr. Long being elected on the vote his appointment was made unanimous by resolution. He assumes office April 1st.

Balance of payments on electric plant and to Can. Bk. of Commerce were authorized subject to being O. K'd by Finance Committee. Regular accounts were also passed.

Several committees made reports on pertinent matters. A suggestion was made that an effort be put forth to have the Dept. of Agril. take charge of the Town Park in connection with their demonstration farm work here. It was 11:30 before business concluded.

MONEY IN SUNKEN HULLS

L'Orient, Sunk off the African Coast, Has Over $8,000,000 in Treasure in Her Hold

Evidently fortune hunters these days want something easier than delving at the bottom of oceans, lakes, etc., for sunken treasure ships. They have undoubtedly become aware that the sea has its own system of retaining whatever it took the trouble to relegate to Davy Jones' locker, and as the years go by one hears less and less of companies [illegible] and private parties spending their money and time on ventures with such remote prospects.

But still there are many persons who believe in the eventual discovery of the hiding place of one or more of these treasure hulls, and occasionally we hear of a hopeful who has become possessed of "dope" tending to be an exact chart of the location of a famous sunken bullion ship, and not long after we hear of him again, as returning from a fruitless search for those riches.

There are very few authentic treasure ships which still lie at the bottom of the ocean and which the more hopeful treasure hunters believe will some day be discovered. Not the least of these is the L'Orient sunk off the African coast somewhere and reported to have stowed away in her vaults some $[illegible] in gold and jewels.

Ancient Spanish records are authority for a large number of vessels lost with priceless cargoes of gold, silver and jewels, but there is a very slight chance that any of them will ever be discovered. However, expeditions in search of these treasure ships often prove pleasant and healthy excursions for some enthusiastic hunters of riches.

It can hardly be said however that sunken vessels do not yield profit especially in these days, when with the improved methods of salvage it is an easy matter to raise a ship that ...

SORES FROM ELBOWS TO FINGERS

Zam-Buk Worked a Miracle of Healing.

Reverend Gentleman Fully Corroborates

Miss Kate L. Dolliver, of Caledonia, Queens Co., N. S., says: "I must add my testimony to the value of Zam-Buk. Ulcers and sores broke out on my arm, and although I tried to heal them by using various preparations, nothing seemed to do me any good. The sores spread until from fingers to elbow was one mass of ulceration.

"I had five different doctors, and faithfully carried out their instructions. I drank pint after pint of blood medicines, tried salve after salve, and lotion after lotion, but it was of no avail.

"My father then took me thirty miles to see a well-known doctor. He photographed the arm and hand. This photograph was sent to a New York hospital to the specialist, but they sent word they could do nothing further for me, and I was in despair.

"One day a friend asked me if I had tried Zam-Buk. I said I had not, but I got a box right away. That first box did me more good than all the medicine I had tried up to that time, so I continued the treatment. Every box healed the sores more and more until, to make a long story short, Zam-Buk healed all the sores completely. Everybody in this place knows of my case and that it is Zam-Buk alone which cured me."

Minister corroborates.—The Rev. W. R. M. Parker, of Caledonia, Miss Dolliver's minister, writes: "This is to certify that the testimonial of Miss Dolliver is correct as far as my knowledge goes. I have known her for a year and a half, and her cure effected by Zam-Buk is remarkable."

Wherever there is ulceration, blood-poison, sores, cold-cracks, abscesses, cuts, burns, bruises, or any skin injury or disease, there Zam-Buk should be applied. It is also a sure cure for piles. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. per box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto ...

S. WHEELER ON DRY-FARMING

How to Raise a $1,000 Bushel Hard Winter Wheat

My farm lies five miles east of Rosthern, about three miles from the south branch of the Saskatchewan river, and about twenty-eight miles west from the north branch of that river. We have an abundant rainfall in an average season. The soil is a fibrous loam, carrying a heavy crop of prairie grass. It is principally dark loam and clay, with a slight mixture of sand. It has a chocolate subsoil, deepening to a depth of four to five feet. There is an abundance of good water all over this district, and no stone at all.

Our rains come first in the spring with a light shower to a heavy rain about the second week in May. There are no more rains until June, which is generally our rainy month. We usually have a hot spell in July and August, with more showers in these months and in September. The ground freezes about the first week in November. The snow fall in winter is from 1 to 3 feet on an average, and the snow goes off from April 1 to 25. Of course, conditions vary some years.

Before I outline my system of farming I will state in a few words, my idea as to what is necessary to produce a good quality and to increase the yield of grain crops. There are three very important essentials, good seed, a good seed bed and uniformity.

The Great Essentials

It sounds simple, doesn't it? It looks simple in print, but how few farmers in this great west of ours observe these great essentials in the farming operations? We have an abundantly rich soil and nature helps those who help themselves. Let man do his part: nature will do the rest. Climatic conditions are surely against the man who farms in a haphazard manner, but are on the side of the man who observes these essentials I have named.

The great secret is that no matter how many acres a man farms he must ...

A Tribute To Miss Mattie Robinson

The many friends of Miss R. Robinson will be sorry to see by yesterday's issue of the Edmonton Journal that she has been obliged to resign her position as teacher of the Strathcona Collegiate Institute, owing to ill health. Miss Robinson has been a faithful member of the staff of the Strathcona Collegiate Institute since its inception, and has been a most successful teacher. She has endeared herself to her pupils by her kindness of heart and her sympathetic nature, and has always been ready to help those who were in need of assistance. Miss Robinson has been a member of the Methodist church for many years, and has been a most active worker in the Sunday School. She has also been a member of the Women's Canadian Club, and has been a most enthusiastic worker in the interests of that organization. Miss Robinson has been a resident of Edmonton for about 15 years, and has made many friends who will be sorry to learn that she has been obliged to resign her position on account of ill health.

Women Suffer More Than Men

We now have more than three times as much sickness and pain as other humanity. They may claim they do in spite of pain should be doing better, but the fact remains they do. Mrs. Edward Atwood of 1225 Harold Street, Fort William, says:

"I suffered with dull shooting pains, backache, weakness in my back and in my sides for months. They would catch me so badly at times that I could scarcely move. I was also troubled with headache and dizziness. I recently ran down. At last I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills without much faith, as I had tried so many. But I am glad I did, for they have done me a great deal of good. I am now feeling well and strong, and can do my housework without any trouble. I am glad to recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to my friends, as I know they will do them a great deal of good."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are 50 cents a box or 6 boxes for $2.50 at all dealers or from The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Eat What You Like

And What Agrees With You, but Do Not Eat Too Much

Digestion Will be Good if You Regulate the System With

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY - LIVER PILLS

Overeating is the great cause of liver troubles, biliousness and constipation. The digestive system becomes charged with poisonous waste matter, the liver fails and then follow kidney disorders of the most painful and fatal form, such as rheumatism, Bright's disease and dropsy.

The beginning is almost invariably with the liver and should be overcome by the prompt use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills before serious disease is developed.

An occasional dose of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills when the liver gets sluggish and the bowels constipated will keep the whole digestive system in healthy working order.

Hundreds of thousands of people have found this out by their own experience and would not think of being without this medicine in the house. Others have been restored to health by this treatment after their cases had reached more serious and complicated stages.

There does not seem to be any medicine obtainable which is so successful in awakening the action of both liver and kidneys as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Merit alone can account for their enormous sales.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

QUEER WEATHER DEVICES

Nature Has Furnished Many Simple But Interesting Ones

One of the oldest and simplest ways of telling whether the air is dry or moist is to suspend a piece of seaweed out of doors, or even in an apartment where there is no artificial heat. The weed is crisp and dry at the approach of fine weather, while it is flabby and moist when rain is likely.

A common toy, the Swiss weather house, is really quite trustworthy in its forecasts. The woman, of course, emerges from the little house in fine weather, while the man comes out when wet conditions are to be expected.

In a medium state of the atmosphere both figures stand just inside the house. The movements are due to the twisting of a cord of catgut, a substance which is highly sensitive to changes in the humidity of the air.

Two very singular weather devices are those in which a frog and a leech are employed. In the former case a glass jam jar is filled about two-thirds of its capacity with water. A little wooden ladder is constructed, and this is placed inside the jar.

A frog will live quite happily in such a position for a few weeks, and it will be found that in fine weather the creature will climb out up to the top of the ladder. In stormy weather, however, the frog will remain under the water.

Even more reliable as weather prophets are leeches. A single leech is placed in a broad glass bottle with a piece of perforated bladder or leather over the mouth. On the approach of fine or frosty weather, the leech remains almost motionless, curled up at the bottom. When rain or wind is coming the creature rises to the surface, while a coming thunderstorm will cause it to be much agitated; at times the leech will even leave the water altogether, so sensitive is the animal to an electrical disturbance.

The chameleon barometer is a curiosity which has puzzled many people, but its construction is really very simple. The animal changes color according to the weather, being pink in damp conditions, purple in a variable state and bright wine red when the air is dry.

A cardboard mount is prepared, and this may be lettered in sections Fair, Storm and Change. The chameleon is stretched out on a blotting paper, and then immersed in a solution of chloride of cobalt, to which are added chloride of sodium and gum arabic. ... [illegible]

Power of the Potato

Potatoes will soon form the power for driving all kinds of engines.

How can they do this? By the alcohol which can be extracted from each potato.

Alcohol, or spirit, is produced by the fermentation of sugar. Potatoes contain a large amount of starch which can easily be turned into sugar by the addition of malt. When the starch has been converted to sugar, yeast is also added, and the sugar is then fermented.

At present potatoes are worth, roughly speaking, 35 cents per bushel, but turned into spirits they would be worth over ten times this amount.

It is estimated that a plant with a daily consumption of eight thousand pounds of potatoes would cost approximately $12,500.

A Thorough Pill.—To clear the stomach and bowels of impurities and irritants is necessary when their action is irregular. The pills that will do this work thoroughly are Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are mild in action but mighty in results. They purge painlessly and effectively, and work a permanent cure. They can be used without fear by the most delicately constituted, as there are no painful effects preceding their gentle operation.

"What seems to be the matter with him?" asked the doctor as he approached the bedside of the man, who lay swathed in bandages.

"He found the gas-leak," briefly explained the nurse.

Shiloh's Cure

quickly stops coughs, cures colds, heals the throat and lungs. 25 cents.

A very bald-headed man went into a barber shop in Ottawa, and plumping himself down in the chair, said "Hair cut."

The barber looked at him for a moment and then replied, "Why, man, you don't need a hair cut. What you want is a shine."

SILAS OF HEBRON VALLEY

A Wall Street Deal and What It Brought Him.

By M. J. PHILLIPS.

John G. Davidson, with his ... shaven, comely face, cleft chin, blue eyes and firm jaw, might have been from appearances an actor. He might have been mistaken for a popular preacher or a professional baseball player. His age was apparently anywhere between thirty and fifty years.

He had the air of good living and prosperity which the man of the world is supposed to wear.

All guesses as to his profession, however, would probably have gone wide of the mark. He was senior member of the firm of Davidson & Cole of Wall street, a firm which bore a rather shady reputation. Even now he was hurrying home from a hunting trip in Maine which had been cut short by the tip, irregularly received, of a big "killing" to be made the next day on the Stock Exchange.

In other words, Davidson & Cole were preparing to garner several hundred thousand dollars because the Hillmans and the Silvers were about to close in a death grapple for the control of the New York and Western. Each faction held about one-third of the stock. Speculators and investors held the other third, mostly in small blocks. ... [illegible]

THE WHITE HOLLAND TURKEY.

The first White Hollands are said to have been bred in Holland over a hundred years ago and brought to this country by the thrifty Dutch. They were sports from the original turkeys taken to the old world over 400 years ago and at first were small and delicate.

This made them unpopular with breeders of market turkeys, for a small turkey cuts a poor figure as a Christmas table centerpiece, so American turkey breeders at once got busy and crossed them with white sports from the Mammoth Bronze, the ... of poultrydom, and this infusion of new blood not only made them hardier, but built them to a size very popular at market, as will be seen by the new standard weights for this beautiful variety: ... Edmonton Annual Spring Show

The annual Edmonton Spring Show, which will this year be held on the Exhibition Grounds, and under the auspices and management of the Edmonton Exhibition Association, on April 15-17, promises to be a big success. The Department of Agriculture has this year made a liberal grant to the Edmonton Spring Show, with the result that a very attractive prize list is being offered for Horses, Cattle, Sheep and Swine. The entries for this Show with the exception of the pure-bred Cattle and Swine offered for sale, close on Saturday, April 3. Prize Lists, Catalogues of sale, and any information regarding the Show may be obtained by writing to the Secretary, W. M. Moore, Box 216, Edmonton.

Will Its Style Suit Your Style

Modern methods of ready-to-wear clothes production have removed man's greatest clothes problem. In the days of custom tailoring you had to imagine how the chosen material would look on you, when made up in the style you selected.

To-day, you can go into a good shop and try on suits until you find the cloth and style that suit you best.

When everyone admits this great advantage, why not go just a step further and be careful to purchase in a shop where there is endless variety to choose from?

We can show you—in the "Fit-rite" line of high grade clothes—every type of suit and overcoat sanctioned by the prevailing mode.

Ladies Curling Competition

Mrs. A. R. Jones' Rink the Victors In Great Finish Saturday Night

The immense excitement occasioned by the Ladies Curling Competition is now subsiding, the final game in the stirring event being played last Saturday night before a crowd so dense that air space was at a premium. Mrs. Jones' rink were the victors in the round having won two splendid games and many of the rocks that went up the ice were the envy even of that famous curler Joe. McKone.

Friday night the first game was played between Mrs. Jones (skip) and Mrs. Telford (skip). The game was close and well played throughout, resulting in favor of Mrs. Jones with a score of 12-9.

The final Saturday night was between Mrs. Jones and Mrs. McLay and proved an exciting as well as close contest until the 12th end. At the sixth end the score was 8-4 in favor of Mrs. McLay but the tenth end saw the teams evened up 9-9. On the eleventh Mrs McLay lay 2, leaving them two up coming home. The big surprise took place right here, Mrs Jones coming back with no less than a [illegible] end winning the game 15-11 and the competition.

CHAPTER XXII.

FOR nearly an hour Boyd Emerson sat alone on the deck of the Grande Dame, a prey to conflicting emotions, the while he waited for Mildred to appear. There was no one to dispute his presence now, for the tourists who had followed Dr Berry from the shore in hushed excitement avoided him, and the sailors made no effort to carry out their earlier instructions, hence he was allowed opportunity to adjust himself to the sudden change. It was not so much the unexpected downfall of Willis Marsh and the new light thus thrown upon his own enterprise that upset him as a puzzling alteration in his own purposes and inclinations. He had come out to the yacht defiantly to make good his threat and to force an understanding with Mildred Wayland, but now that he was here and his way made easy he began to question his own desires. Now that he thought about it that note, instead of filling him with dismay, had rather left him relieved. It was as if he had been freed of a burden, and this caused him a vague uneasiness. Was it because he was tired by the struggle for this girl for whom he had labored so faithfully? After three years of unflagging devotion was he truly relieved to have her dismiss him? Or was it that here in this primal country, stripped of all conventions, he saw her and himself in a new light? He did not know.

The late twilight was fading when Mildred came from her stateroom. She found Boyd pacing the deck, a cigar between his teeth.

"Where are those people?" she inquired.

"They went ashore. Marsh doesn't care to press a charge against the Indian."

"I hear he is not badly hurt, after all."

"Yes, George! Do you care more for business than for me? I don't think you realize how terribly hard for me all this has been. I'm still frightened. I shall die of nervousness without some one to talk to."

"It's quite impossible! I—don't want to go back now."

"Indeed! And no doubt it was impossible for you to come out here last night for the same reason."

"It was. The fish struck in and I could not leave."

"It was that woman who kept you!" cried Mildred. "It is because of her that you refuse to leave this country!"

"Please don't," he said quietly. "I have never thought of her in that way"—

"Then come away from this wretched place. I detest the whole country—the fisheries, the people, everything. This isn't your proper sphere. Why not come away now, at once, and begin something new, something worth while?"

"Do you realize the hopes, the heartaches, the vital effort I have put into this enterprise?" he questioned.

But she only said:

"I don't like it. It isn't a nice business. Let father take the plant over. If you need money, I have plenty"—

"Wait!" he interrupted sharply. "Sit down. I want to talk to you." He drew the wrap closer about her shoulders and led her to a deck chair. The change in him was becoming more apparent. He knew now that he had never felt the same since his first meeting with Mildred upon the arrival of the Grande Dame. [...] had repelled him by her lack of sympathy. She had shown no understanding of his efforts, and now she revealed so complete a failure to grasp his code of honor. It never occurred to her that any loyalty of man to man could offset her simple will. She did not see that his desertion of George would be nothing short of treachery.

It seemed to him all at once that they had little in common. She was wrapped completely in the web of her own desires. She would make her prejudices a law for him. Above all, she could not respond to the exultation of his success. She had no conception of the pride of accomplishment that is the wine of every true man's life. He had waged a bitter fight that had sapped his very soul; he had made and won the struggle that a man makes once in a lifetime, and now, just when he had proved himself strong and fair in the sight of his fellows, she asked him to forego it all. Engrossed in her own egoism, she required of him a greater sacrifice than any he had made. Now that he had shown his strength she wanted to load him down with golden fetters—to make him a dependent. Was it because she feared another girl?

LIFE IN DENMARK

A Country Where Almost Everybody is Poor, But Happy

"In Denmark everybody is poor," declares a writer in the English Queen. "There are no coal or mineral deposits in the country. Consequently there can be no manufactures, and a nation of farmers, even of Danish farmers, is not rich according to the standards of commercial countries.

"Incomes are small. Where the salary of a Minister of State is only $3,750 a year, humbler individuals [...] get along on much smaller incomes. But the Danes know how to live within their incomes, and to do it comfortably. Denmark is as obviously happy as she is poor.

"The Danes are wise enough not to demand perfection. If it comes they can take instant pleasure [...] when it does not come they still are placid. Conformity to rule, even though it be so small a matter as a fixed meal times, does entail some coercion upon the natural man. So punctuality is not a Danish virtue.

"In few Danish households are there fixed and unalterable hours for meals. Pay a call when you will and the custom of the country will [...] you, but it will not ensure you against finding your friends at table. The hotels follow the very reverse of the American method, and while you can get snacks all the time, you cannot be certain that at any time you will find a dinner ready cooked and waiting.

"Even the national food lends itself admirably both to simplicity and unpunctuality. Its staple is bread and butter—in well-to-do houses immense thicknesses of excellent butter and fairly thin slices of several varieties of bread. The staple food of our working class is also bread and butter, but their butter is bad and scraped, and their bread is uniformly innutritious.

"Smorrebrod (literally butter bread) or smeared bread, the Danish for butter being smor-smeur, is the one food that is to be had at all hours and in all places, in hotels and restaurants, by day or night on steamers, in the famous Tivoli Gardens. It consists of a thinish slice of buttered bread, white, grey or black, on which is placed a pålæg or overlay.

"This overlay may be cold—ham, veal, sausages, hard boiled eggs, fish (fresh or salted), salad, cheese. They are not large, and most persons eat several and like a variety. Could there be any better way of making a little go a long way? And what difference it would make to our housekeeping!

"There are not many fashionable occupations, people live as they list, and are in no terror of their neighbors. All over the land Danes are able to meet together in pursuit of art and literature, or of national ideals, without feeling themselves compelled to drink anything extra or unusual. They drink a good deal of beer, which is [...]

PARALYSIS YIELDS TO DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

MANY FORMS OF THIS DREAD DISEASE ARE CURED BY THIS REMEDY.

Mrs. Ritchie, of Galt, Ont., Says She Believes it Saved Her Life—Doctors Said She Had Not Long to Live When She Began This Treatment—Read Her Grateful Statement.

Scarcely a day passes but fresh proof is offered of the wonderful power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills over disease. In many of these cases relief and new health comes to the sufferer after the best efforts of medical men had been in vain. One such case is that of Mrs. D. M. Ritchie, of Galt, Ont., who writes:—"I feel it my duty to let other people know what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. I was taken sick first in May, 1910 [...] Treatment at home having failed [...] I went to Grace Hospital, Detroit, where I remained for some weeks but instead of improving I became absolutely helpless, as if from paralysis, and could not move hand or foot. I was under the heavy expense of a trained nurse and the best of medical treatment, but seemed to be growing worse. Finally about the middle of July my husband decided to bring me home to Galt, where I remained under medical treatment and with a nurse constantly attending me until October, when I took a further turn for the worse. Then the doctor told my husband it was only a matter of a few weeks as I could not possibly get better. Up to this time over six hundred dollars had been spent [...]

[...] dence given to the benefit of suffering humanity."

Writing again under the date of August 16th, 1911, Mrs. Ritchie says: "As to my general health I can say that I have not felt so well in years. My stomach is in the best of condition and I can eat things I have not eaten for years. I can walk quite well, but use my cane when I go out, as I have not quite confidence in myself yet. But if you had seen me when I started to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills you would realize what a miracle they have worked in my case. All that I have stated is absolutely true, and I may add that the pills have cured my husband of kidney trouble that other medicines seem to have no effect upon, for which we are both thankful."

Again under the date of January 10, 1912, Mrs. Ritchie says: "I am fully recovered and [...] all the housework. I [...] always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and trust some sufferer will receive as much benefit in reading this as I did through a faithful use of the pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure such apparently hopeless cases as Mrs. Ritchie's because they make new, rich red blood, which feeds the starved [...]

Railway Surveyors At Vermilion

Third Trial Line Now Being Run From Bruderheim

A survey party of the Canadian Northern railway in charge of Mr. J. MacKenzie have been for the last few days endeavoring to get an easy grade into Vermilion from the west in connection with the Vermilion-Bruderheim line. The party have run two or three trial lines, one coming out of Vermilion valley west of Mannville, another near Claysmore and now they are seeking entrance by following the valley down to a short distance west of the town, and by gradually rising along the bank of the river they hope to get a grade sufficiently good enough to enable them to get over it somewhere about the hospital site and then round through the eastern subdivision to the Y. After the surveys are completed the result will be submitted to the executive of the company for consideration and if the scheme is approved construction will be started on whichever line is found to be most suitable. The Secretary of the Board of Trade is in receipt of a letter from [illegible] Manager McLeod in which it is stated that the matter of having the proposed road built rests with the decision of the executive when it has a full report from the survey department. From the activity displayed by the company in the matter it would seem as if there was no doubt of its intention to have the road built. [illegible]

PAINTING WINONA

It Drove the Man She Loved to Declare Himself.

By ETHEL HARRINGTON.

Against the autumnal yellow and crimson glory of the maples the girl's golden hair and dull red dress made a harmonious picture. Wilfred Clay, artist, brought his wheel to a sudden stop, wondering if he ever had seen anything so exquisite before. Surely it was toward this that he had been journeying, this wonderful breathing picture. Already he mentally planned the blendings of madder and lakes, of chromes and yellow, to reproduce the charm as, steadying his wheel against a rock, he climbed the bank.

"Is there any place near by where I can put up for a few days?" he inquired, standing bareheaded before the vision.

"Folks sometimes stay at the farmhouse."

"Any you particularly recommend?"

"None," was the laconic answer. The young fellow laughed, noting the discontent that dimmed the girl's real beauty. "How about that one?" indicating a red chimney that showed among the trees.

"I live there. It's no worse than the rest."

"It has attractions that the others lack," he declared gallantly, but the compliment flew wide of its aim. "Will you accompany me to present my cause?"

Silently the girl acquiesced, keeping a little in advance; then, suddenly waiting for him to join her, she began to talk rapidly. Her eyes never wavered from the advancing figure of a man, a farmer from his dress, who with a switch lashed moodily at the goldenrod and passed without a word, the rising color above the loose collar alone betraying his consciousness of their presence. After he had gone the girl fell again into silence.

She left the artist on the wide porch and sent her mother to interview the stranger. Clay promptly accepted the terms and was soon smoking in homelike ease, wondering how he might persuade the girl to let him paint her, his fingers already itching to be at work.

During supper, which he shared with the family, Clay endeavored to draw Winona—he had discovered that to be her name—into conversation, but she repelled such advances with monosyllables. One of her brothers chaffed her on her ill humor, arousing her to sharp retort, whereat he laughed roughly.

"Fortune's soured sis's temper. Funny how some folks can't stand good luck."

Later Clay found her leaning against the trellis where the vines still clung.

"I congratulate you on being an heiress. Independence is not the least gift that riches confer."

The girl raised her head rebelliously. "Why should Aunt Liza give me her money? I don't want it. I hardly ever saw her and cared less. What right had she to spoil my life?" Her voice vibrated with resentment, and a low whistle escaped Clay.

"Truly an unusual view to take. If you are in trouble possibly I can help you. I'd like to try."

Winona shook her head. "Guess no one can."

"What about the fellow we met?" A chance shot, but it made the color surge painfully to the girl's face, though she kept silent.

"I stayed over to paint a picture," proceeded the artist, abruptly changing the topic. "I'm going to try for the rioting splendor of a New England fall, and—I want you in the shadow of the maples—just as you were today."

"If it depends on me you may as well give up your picture."

"It would mean a great deal to me."

"I don't hold with such," returned the girl indifferently and went indoors. Musing, Clay continued to pull at his briar. It took a good deal to discourage him. The subject was an inspiration. He would paint now as before he only dreamed of doing.

But as the week passed he found himself no nearer his object. Winona, who now conversed on ordinary topics, was dumb when he advanced the picture, nor did he gain in her confidence regarding her personal affairs. It was from her mother, Mrs. Eager, that he learned the facts.

Previous to her aunt's death Winona had "kept company"—the local phrasing for courtship—with Keith Adams, but there had been no formal engagement, for which fact the mother now rejoiced, as with her improved prospects the girl might do much better. Mrs. Eager herself had privately administered some broad hints to the aspiring farmer, which he had apparently accepted. Did Winona care? Well, she supposed that Winona thought she did, but she was young enough to have slyly he whispered a suggestion, a hint for their mutual benefit. At first she made no sign of having heard, but little by little she grew calm and as he finished caught eagerly at his hands.

"[illegible]" she [illegible]. "Who ever won anything by moping?"

When she retired Clay sat lost in meditation. "It's playing with fire, but the picture's worth it," was his verdict.

From that night the girl's demeanor changed. During the long autumn days she posed for the painter beneath the maples and chatted gayly with him at dusk on the porch, but always where her red gown might be seen by one passing on the road. Her mother smiled knowingly at the neighborly gossip that reached her ear.

Meanwhile the picture grew, and Clay knew it was the best he ever had done, though the exquisite tints of the girlish face were his despair, and the sweet companionship caused the memory of a certain compact to dim.

Each day the young farmer passed and repassed, and the more depressed he seemed the more gayly Winona's laugh pursued him on his way.

One morning Clay was putting finishing touches on the foliage when a shadow darkened his canvas. Glancing up, expecting Winona, who was to join him, he encountered the angry gaze of Keith Adams. For a moment neither spoke; then all the pentup jealousy and rage broke forth in the lover.

"How dare you paint her, making her name and face alike common?"

"Who are you?" inquired Clay coolly.

"I speak as man to man," replied the other. "She's nothing but a child for all her years. Leave her alone."

"I think I've helped her," remarked Clay.

"Do you love her?" demanded Keith Adams. "Are you going to marry her?"

"What business is it of yours?"

The half smile in the artist's eye maddened Keith, and he gripped him savagely by the collar, thrusting his own face close.

"It's this much—that while I live no man shall slight that girl. I know you painting men. You think you own creation, believe yourselves free to take or leave and pay no bills. That girl's name is being mixed with yours, and it's time for you to go unless you mean honest by her. Which is it to [illegible]"

"What possible right have you to question?"

"What right!" cried Keith, his voice thick with passion. "What right! Why, I love her—do you understand? I love her!"

"Then tell me so."

Keith dropped his hold, and, turning, the two men saw Winona close beside them, with all the witchery of love in her eyes. Clay spoke slowly, a grim acceptance of the inevitable hardening his face.

"It seems that my friendship has been questioned, Winona, so you must forgive me if I seem abrupt. Will you be my wife? I"—

"Hush!" cried the girl. "Don't spoil the kindest friendship that ever a girl had. It was not necessary between you and me," she added, with a laugh. Then, turning to the man of her choice, his name fell tenderly from her lips.

Clay considerately turned his back and, collecting his painting outfit, left them in the golden glory of the maples.

"It's a good thing the picture is about done." Then his mouth closed inscrutably as he went down the road alone.

Dropping the Medicine.

Medicine so strong that a dose must be limited to seven drops had been prescribed for the man with unsteady hands. His family also had shaky hands, and so there was no medicine dropper in the house it looked as if somebody would have to make a midnight trip to the drug store. But a visiting relative that they had put up for the night suggested an alternative.

"Take that half of that raw eggshell—raw, mind you, cooked eggshell is too brittle and crumbles too easily—that I saw lying on a saucer in the cupboard, drill a hole in it the size of a pin head and let the medicine trickle through that. It will be sure to fall out in drops of the required size, and you couldn't make a mistake if you wanted to."—New York Sun.

Even in Polite Japan.

The street car conducting of Tokyo is getting bis. The Japan Mail of that city says:

"Conductors ought to be positively forbidden to push passengers by main force into crowded cars. It is most unpleasant to have a conductor order you peremptorily to go into a car that it is quite impossible to find room in. When a car is full it is full, and there is no way to get into it except by being rude to those occupying it. Now, if the conductor is honestly convinced that there is room for an extra passenger in the crowded car he ought himself to be compelled to find the space for you before ordering you to enter. But this does not bother him in the least. He simply tells you that you must go in and compels you to make room for yourself."

BUGHOUSE KILLER.

[illegible]

If chestnuts round your bald head cling
And jab you with their poison sting
Anoint with citronella oil,
The devils will at once recoil.

If the joy ride upon your head,
Tincture of larkspur kills them dead.
Dip your comb in kerosene
To catch all nits and crawlers mean.

When crab lice take a hold on you
Then strong tobacco tea go brew.
Just take a bath in tobacco juice,
And the vile bugs will quick let loose.

When nasty roaches come around
Just sprinkle borax where they're found
And if the moth the carpets bore
Go scatter salt upon the floor.

When fleas torment poor tommy cat
Pennyroyal tea is good for that.
Just sprinkle kitty well with it
And the mean fleas will soon be nit.

When fleas make good old Towser yell
Drop carbolic acid in his tub,
And if your caged bird has lice
A sulphur bag o'erhead is nice.

When mites infest the chicken coop
A coat of spray quick makes them droop
And if your hens have any lice,
Persian powder for quick demise.

If you have bugs not mentioned here,
Here is the way to kill them, dear:
Just lay them on the cook stove quick
And hit them with a heavy brick.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS

Q.—What becomes of the fuzz on chicks? Do they shed it when they get their adult feathers, or where does it go? A.—Behind the fuzz on chicks are feathers, and these push out, the fuzz remaining on the ends until finally worn off. You may see this clearly illustrated by watching the feather growth of a little robin, the fuzz sometimes remaining on the feather tips till the birds are quite large.

Q.—What do you think of sending a distance for eggs for hatching? A.—We consider it more wise to look around home first for what you want. We have known fanciers to send across six states for eggs, pay express, and the few chicks hatched were very ordinary, while within ten miles was a flock that would have given them more and better chicks at half the price.

Q.—In trap nesting hens to discover the heaviest layers what is revealed in regard to the percentage of fertility? Which hen gives the more fertile eggs, the 100 egg or the 200 egg hen? A.—Two hundred egg hens have been found to give eight infertiles in ten eggs. The more eggs the less fertility.

Q.—What do you consider the best advertising medium for one who is in the poultry business in a small way? A.—Your town paper or, if there is no town paper, your county paper with largest circulation in your town.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

When on grass run in summer Indian Runner ducks cost about $1 per year per duck for feed. As they lay from 150 to 200 eggs per year they pay well.

Oats are a splendid feed for summer and the molt. They are not heating, are relished and contain protein and carbohydrates in almost proper proportions to afford a balanced ration.

The English Dorking, that dates back to Caesar's invasion and has been England's national bird, has come down off the high perch of popularity and is now trailing behind the Orpingtons, the Dottes and the Rocks.

WISDOM'S COMPROMISE.

Wear Good Clothes and Laugh at the World's Folly.

"O sage," said the young man, "I am surprised, almost grieved, to find that one who has such a reputation for wisdom as you should pay so much attention to his clothes. You are as immaculate and as nobby as a young lover."

"And why not?" asked the older man.

"Why not, indeed?" rejoined the young man. "I am afraid I cannot explain. Many people have told me it is foolish to pay so much attention to clothes. That's all I know."

"It is a common error," spoke the sage, "but it is nevertheless an error and one which once possessed me. When I was young as you are I was attracted by the external things only, and of these external things clothes were by far the most important. When I was a little older I underwent a reaction. I had a revulsion of feeling. Somehow I gained the idea that clothes were an absurdity in toto. I thought that the inner spiritual man was everything. According as my thoughts became introspective I neglected my external appearance and went about unkempt and slovenly."

"The two extremes," suggested the young man discerningly.

"Yes, the two extremes, but with neither alone was I happy. Without clothes I found I could not go among my fellows in comfort, and thus the social side of me became atrophied. Without knowledge and an inward appreciation of the important fundamentals of life I could not be happy in my own company."

"Wherefore," observed the young man, "you struck a happy medium by compromising on both."

"Yes. Now I pay strict attention to my external appearance, while inwardly I laugh at the folly of the world which makes it necessary."—Life.

Brand Whitlock's Story.

"Civil service reform has given us a splendid army of civil servants. It wasn't always so."

The speaker, Mayor Whitlock of Toledo, smiled.

"When I was writing my first short stories," he resumed, "we had civil servants of a different stamp. An elderly resident of my native Urbana sought out, back in those days, his congressman.

"'Congressman,' he said, 'I supported you at the polls, and now I expect you to get my boy a good civil service job.'

"'All right, friend,' the congressman answered. 'What can your boy do?'

"'Do?' snorted the other. 'What can he do? ... [illegible]'"—New York Tribune.

TWO MEN.

Bill Brown is dead! Upstairs in grief
His widow weeps, while down below
The neighbors now in charge of things
Are softly moving to and fro
And now and then come men to speak
Their word of sympathy and cheer,
To sound the praises of poor Brown
And place their roses on his bier.

Across the street Tom Green plods on,
Alone, unaided in his fight.
To keep his wife and children clothed
He has to hustle day and night.
A word of praise would do him good.
He's hungry for a bit of cheer,
But all his neighbors take their flowers
To decorate a dead man's bier.

Brown doesn't know what's going on,
But poor Tom Green across the way
Turns to his wife and softly says:
"I'll have a lot of friends some day.
Some day you'll hear my praises sung,
And men will bring me roses red.
They'll all rush up to honor poor me
The minute that they hear I'm dead."

Leaving cards instead of calling is the usual procedure after going to entertainments. In this case there is no necessity to ask if the hostess is at home, but there is one exception to this rule, and that is a dinner party, after which the guest usually makes a call on the hostess, and it is only in the event of the hostess not being at home that cards are left.

A husband's cards are left in any case unless the husband accompanies his wife in making the call.

Communication

Editor Standard,

Dear Sir:—

As a farmer north of town, I am naturally deeply interested in ... the road up the north bank ... the town's ... Begin by breaking the wire fence at the side and the pigs in the middle. Let someone who is inclined to defend the town in this matter consider the extra cost of hauling up the hill over what it might be. A team that will haul 2000 lbs. on an ordinary road cannot take over 1000 lbs up the hill and sometimes this winter the empty sleighs alone were a very heavy load. One of the very first things a practical farmer notices in that road, and that first impression, is often, ... to make him get on the train again bound for some place with better roads.

OPENING OF SIBERIA

Russia Planning to Spend Half a Billion Dollars on Railroads

It is now beginning to be taken for granted that outer Mongolia, with its 1,000,000 square miles of territory and its 2,000,000 of people, is to be added to the Russian sphere of influence.

Ever since the war with Japan, Russia has been devoting her energies to the expansion of Siberia. This vast territory stretching from the Ural Mountains to the Pacific Ocean, was once looked on as the dreary land of the exile. Today it is the promised land of the emigrant. There is room for many millions.

Siberia, with an area of 4,817,687 square miles, has at present a population of only [illegible]. There are vast stretches of rich black earth awaiting the farmer. Coal, iron, silver and gold are ready for the pioneer. Huge forests have in readiness great wood harvests.

Some day Siberia must play a great part in the production of the world's food. At present the cultivated part is a mere patch on its huge area, yet it produces 170,000,000 poods of cereals a year, a pood being equal to 36 pounds. Its immense coal deposits have scarcely been touched, and the same is the case with its timber. In the Amur and Maritime Provinces there are [illegible] acres of forest land.

The railroad is naturally what is looked for for the development of this great country. The first great achievement in this direction was the construction of the Siberian Railroad. [illegible]

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill temper, the pale and wrinkled face hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the [illegible] symptoms.

THERE'S no mistaking the expression of a man whose farm is well "improved." He looks as prosperous as he feels.

It isn't the size of a place that counts most, nor its actual dollars and cents value. It's rather that "well kept," thrifty appearance, the appearance that makes you think of fat stock, and well filled barns and comfortable, contented living.

Neat, permanent improvements go further in giving a farm this appearance than any other feature.

Concrete Is The Ideal Material

for such improvements. It is most harmonizing with its surroundings in the country. Everlasting, it cannot be injured by fire, frost, wind or lightning. Age, instead of causing it to decay, actually makes it stronger.

Concrete never needs repair. First cost is last cost. New improvements can be added year after year with less expense than would be required to keep wooden structures in repair.

Concrete walks, feeding floors, dairy barns, ice houses, root cellars, well curbing, fence posts, silos—which of these does your farm need most? Whatever you want to build, it's best to build it of concrete.

Do you want to know more about this subject of permanent farm improvements? Then write for your copy of

"What The Farmer Can Do With Concrete."

THE TALE OF THE SARDINE

Goes Through Forty-two Processes Before it Reaches its Final State

Most of us are familiar with the silvery little sardines as they come to the table nestling in their bed of olive-oil, and it is interesting to follow the various processes through which they are put before they reach our homes. Amidst the magnificent scenery of the Norwegian coast, in the ice-cold waters of the picturesque fiords, are the feeding beds of the sardine. During the sunny summer days, from July to September, huge shoals of them crowd in from the open sea to these familiar haunts, which seem to breathe an air of peace and security. Alas! however, the fate awaiting them proves to be quite the reverse. The fishermen know so well that the sardines are coming, and keep a sharp watch for the silvery sheen and rippling surface of the water which indicates the approach of the little fishes in their millions. From faraway Stavanger come these fishermen, racing over the water in motor-boats. With wonderful quickness and precision immense numbers of the fish are surrounded by strong nets, and their doom is sealed. Slowly but surely the nets draw closer and closer, the heaving, glittering mass becomes more compact and in a comparatively short space of time the boats brought for the purpose are filled with fish and hurried away to town.

At Stavanger—originally a small fishing village, but now the centre of the Norwegian canning industry—all is bustle and excitement on the arrival of the little launches. After soaking for twenty minutes or so in a strong brine the fish are taken to the sorting rooms to be graded according to size and prepared for the cutting chambers. A Purely Vegetable Pill.—The chief ingredients of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are mandrake and dandelion, sedative and purgative, but perfectly harmless in their action. They cleanse and purify and have a most healthful effect upon the secretions of the digestive organs. The dyspeptic and all who suffer from liver and kidney ailments will find in these pills the most effective medicine in concentrated form that has yet been offered to the suffering.

"And what happened in the interim?" a solicitor asked a witness in a public house case.

"I don't know," was the reply. "I didn't go into the interim. I stayed all the time in the smoking room."

Forestry Press Bulletin No. 57

The survey party sent out by the Forestry Branch of the Interior to explore the country around Lesser Slave Lake, Athabasca, has found that here, as elsewhere throughout the northern forest country, a greater part of the merchantable timber has been destroyed by fire. The whole country was originally covered with a dense growth of white spruce, black spruce and jackpine pine which appear to have escaped fire up to 1885. Fires which have started since that date have denuded large areas. Timber which has escaped fire shows that the previous forest was both dense and valuable. The forest here produces even locally as much as thirty thousand feet, board measure, of timber per acre. This is a greater quantity than is found in either Manitoba or Saskatchewan.

The survey party reports that around Lesser Slave Lake there is a large [illegible]

[illegible]

The timber from such a forest reserve would be accessible to the Edmonton district. It could be floated down the Athabasca river to Athabasca Landing, and then carried down by rail at a comparatively low cost.

Hon. Clifford Sifton also urged very strongly the necessity for appointing an officer of rather high rank and professional qualifications to act as Chief Fire Inspector for the Dominion. Such an official would have charge of the administration of the forest fire law.

At the present time these regulations are being drafted and will no doubt, be put in force during the coming summer.

Mr. J. E. Armsmit, a justice of the Peace, and station master at Wallington, on the Prince Edward Island Railway, says:

"Four years ago I slipped in the station and fell on a freight truck, sustaining a bad cut on the front of my leg. I thought this would heal, but instead of doing so it developed into a bad sore, and later into a form of eczema, which spread very rapidly and also started on the other leg. Both legs became so swollen and sore that I could only go about my work by having them bandaged. My doctor said I must stop work and lay up.

After six months of the trouble I remembered another doctor, but was no better result. I tried all the nostrums, liniments and ointments I heard of, but instead of getting better I got worse.

"This was my condition when I got my first box of Zam-Buk. Greatly to my delight that first box gave me relief. I continued to apply it to the sores, and day by day they got better. I could see that at last I had got hold of something which would cure me, and I stuck to it until it did.

It is now over a year since Zam-Buk worked a cure in my case, and there has been no return of the eczema."

Zam-Buk is the nature of the great cures which Zam-Buk is daily effecting. Purely herbal in composition, the Zam-Buk balm is a sure cure for all skin diseases, cold sores, chapped hands, tired feet, ulcers, blood-poisoning, ruts, cuts, sores, piles, scaly sores, ringworm, eczema, rashes, itch, burns and bruises. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., upon receipt of price.

Two of the University of Pennsylvania rowers passed a learned and intelligent professor showing a young lady through the garden.

"It's a delightful cold—can't be too sultry without strikings.

The professor looked flattered by a remark from someone competent to tell if there was a breeze.

Then he said:

"Are you?"

A Deserving Pair.

A lawyer in the neighborhood of Washington was recommending a lawyer for some of his clients.

"He's a deserving man," he said.

"Deserving?" asked one of the clients. "Why, I thought you said he was a lawyer."

"I did," replied the lawyer. "And I'm a lawyer, too. Now, what I mean is that we both deserve to be hanged."

rather plainly-clad and unpretentious, but even her stout husband had a "swell" appearance in comparison with the neat but little better-dressed woman.

"Please, ma'am, mother sent me over to borrow a cupful of cutting and a pinch of tied off yeast."

Value of Ashes in the Garden

The value of wood ashes as a fertilizer for certain gardening, does not seem to be realized even by many practical gardeners. The saving of the litter is much preferable to burning it, and for the planting of a few hundreds of perennials in and around the garden. They will be saved from two possible evils—that of burning and that of being carried away by the ash man.

A Prize Puzzle

"That is a pretty name for making that very tariff speech, by-the-bye, and I don't remember—"

"Neither can I," said the other, "but I'm going to find out."

After you-know-it, it was not long before the name was found.

SOOTHING MIXTURES DANGEROUS TO CHILDREN

Mixtures sold under the name "soothing" are usually dangerous to the life of the baby. They contain opium in some form or other. They consist of nostrums and narcotics which stupefy the child—put it to sleep—to be plainer the little thing is drugged into unconsciousness. The absolutely guaranteed remedy for little ones—the one positively backed by the guarantee of a government analyst, that contains no opium, morphine or other harmful drugs is Baby's Own Tablets. They relieve baby's little ills in a way always do good. Then baby's health is established and baby thrives. They help not only the new born babe but also the growing child. Mothers have found trouble unknown after using them and they promise that no family should be without them. Mrs. Isidore Lapointe, Ste. Rose du Lac, Man., says: "My baby was troubled with indigestion and constipation. Baby's Own Tablets relieved her promptly and I am glad to recommend them to other mothers." Decided Objections.

A rural clergyman had one of his parishioners served successively on four juries in one week. The man asked Sandy to go. I have reasons for objecting to go."

"Well William I never seen you have a leave for anything before. What are your reasons for objecting?"

"Well, sir, I don't like to tell you, but I'm afraid I may be disliked."

"Tut, tut, man, that's no reason. Come, sir, I decide you'll no excuse."

"Very well, sir, if you decided against my opinion. The first is that I don't believe in hell; second, I don't believe in the devil; third, I don't approve of the second in that I deem heaven to be a state of mind and not a place to go to; fourth, I don't believe in the third and last, and made important witness, and I don't think it wise to put there that I put on my oath."

Sandy was excused.

WEIRDEST THING IN CLUBS.

Physical Research Its Sole Object—Camping Ground For Magicians.

Up several flights of stairs in Regent street there is one of the weirdest clubs in London for its size. I mean that the Psychic Research Club has no rooms with more ghastly things. Its members are plodders in the high-thought, the thought that life part of the earth, and makes you one solemn, dream wonderful dreams, but with the mantle of the beyond, and walk about ostensibly into nowhere.

Although the club has only been founded a few years it has already over 500 members. Every possible kind of person is there—doctors, magicians, spiritists, physiologists, mediums, spiritualists, scientists, men and women. Nearly every room in the house is used for the study of some branch of the unknown and the undefined.

Just now the craze for presenting a man's fingers' arrest is booming. At this thing of no present use, an imaginary finger is placed on the table, and the man who can most successfully feel the real world in his darkened room, or who can most successfully fit to and fro, when chairs and tables are placed in the most extraordinary parts of the darkness. There do the members sit, in the dark, and feel around, and in the darkness to mysterious things.

It is the only club in existence that has a room for no other purpose. It is indeed, the only club that has a room at all with no uses. There are members of psychological—and there are members of palmistry whose a thoroughfare can drop in and look at the hands of anyone. A reporter can compare notes with a professional medium, and a professional medium run the risk of talking with a member of the police force. Here, in short, all the strangest forces and the strangest men and women of the universal brotherhood of thought have their rendezvous, and in this room of nonsense today constitutes the psychical, which may be the science of tomorrow.

Look for lose members the club occasionally to return to the world of men. Some of the members are known to have departed on the astral plane.

There are reception rooms, dining rooms, a library, a magic room, and smoking rooms. The rooms are filled with curious things, and it is said that the directors of higher thought have no objection to smoking. The result is capable of bringing a smoke to the nostrils of the most sensitive.

The secretary, George G. Knowles, is there nearly every day, and he is always ready to show members and strangers over the premises. Every psychic of importance in London has been there, and the serious work is done in the library, presided over by W. T. Stead, is one of the principal members.

Friend in a Crocodile's Head

On one occasion a native ambassador was, according to Burgt for another tribe, and on his way he had to cross a river infested by crocodiles. The chief of the tribe to which he was going had given him a crocodile's head and told him to bring it to the chief's country. Therefore, as he was about to cross the river he put the head in the water and addressed it, saying: "Friend, the water is deep, but you must carry me across." Then he put his feet on the head and crossed the river in safety.

Queen Victoria's Memory

Queen Victoria's memory was remarkable. Her Majesty was fond of telling stories, and she told them well. Here is one of her stories, which I have heard her tell more than once. Her Majesty was driving in the Highlands, and she noticed a man working in the field. She asked him how many children he had. He replied that he had seven children. "Seven children!" exclaimed the Queen. "Why, I thought you were a bachelor!" "So I am, your Majesty," replied the man, "but I have been married."

Young Wife—Do you think it is justifiable for a wife to take money from her husband's pocket?

Older Wife—It isn't a case of justifiable, my dear. It is a question of finding any to take.

POLICE CURED HIM 9 YR 10 DAYS

Mr. Thomas Gilbert, Ex-Police Officer, Dunnville, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with Kidney Disease for nine years. I was cured in ten days by Gin Pills."

SHOUT THE NEWS FROM THE HOUSETOPS

THAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE SUFFERING WOMEN.

Mrs. Samuel Tufts Now They Cured Her Kidney Disease After Doctors Had Said Such a Sufferer For Many Years.

St. Simeon, Dorlet, Charlevoix Co., Quebec, August 20.—(Special)—Women have suffered know the blessings of perfect health. They have been told into little lives' useless them want to about the good news from this favored town. They want other sufferers to know the secret to health, is the cure with Mrs Alfred Savard of this place.

She has been a sufferer for many years and like many others, has tried remedies. Reading an advertisement telling of the wonderful cures Dodd's Kidney Pills are making, she decided to give them a trial. She had nothing to lose and she could only benefit.

What Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for Mrs. Tufts, they have done for thousands of other sufferers all over Canada. The daily papers tell of cures made by them every day. They always cure Kidney Disease and Backache by the cause of sickness at the troubles from which women suffer.

Needed It.

"So over and over that big talk," the city editor told the new reporter. "They say that some society writers are proud to pull off some Oriental degree of politeness. Have you a good story in it?"

The reporter went. When he came back to the city editor's desk he threw the Oriental degree of politeness on the most skeptical of his beating citizens.

In Good Standing

Business Man—What reference can you give, young man?

Young Man—Why, sir, I have been asking men to give references to my self-respecting character.—Boston News.

Medical Genius.

An old doctor, seeing a young man who had just begun to practice, asked him what a fever was. The young man had a fever which looked very serious, and he was very proud of his medical knowledge.

"Why, sir," he replied, "a fever is a disease which looks very serious, but which is not dangerous."

"Well," said the old doctor, "you have got the definition right, but you have got the fever wrong. Your patient has got a fever which looks very serious, but which is very dangerous."

Sufficient Cause

"What started the row at the performance?" asked the police judge.

"Why, Hamlet held the skull and said 'Alas, poor Yorick,' you see, and the only deadhead in the house—" Kansas City Times.

Straight and Narrow

Hampton—Gaddy always follows the straight and the narrow path.

Brampton—Yes, he always did with a lantern in his stays.

A Redeeming Feature

The old man had given his son a fair education and had taken him in the business. The young fellow was very slow about a great many things. One day an order came in from a retail dealer for a dozen pairs of suspenders.

"Send fifteen pairs," said the boss, "that fifteen would leave a margin to cover the difference between the number required. The fellow—"Yes, sir," he answered, "I'll send fifteen pairs, but I never could do it." "Why not?" "Because I've only got twelve pairs in stock."

That "twelve pairs" was the redeeming feature.

Unconscious Advice

More than likely, one smart will say—"Oh, I'll try it myself." But the fatal error—and the reason for the failure of hundreds of thousands of men in this and every other country now wearing out their lives in poorly fertile regions that have never yielded by a Dominion Government quarter-section of unemployed remittance—is that they have not had the advice of 30,000 former settlers, all within reach of the—we were going to say—pocket, but we'll say pocketbook.

Not Needed.

"The speed limit is 25 miles an hour," explained the traffic officer to the motorist who had been arrested for exceeding it.

"Yes, I like this," explained the motorist. "The police department ought to see that the street orders yesterday to call things off and replace the speed limit and didn't go to bed till 2 o'clock."

An egg of the Great Auk has had a fortune history. After being in the possession of the Viscounte de Lunde for 20 years, in 1825 it passed with five others out of a collection to Boulogne Museum. The curator exchanged them in an Englishman for an ostrich skin. The new owner sold them in London to Mr. Pettie, who in 1841 the curator of the Christchurch Museum bought them for £5 each. Mr. Lyngal Field bought one, and a specimen of the Great Auk's egg was in Mr Hewland Ward. Mr Ussher subsequently purchased it, and it is now in Middlestreet, and Gilbert of Tenby, Mr. Thayer Warren, Lancaster, Mass., F. A. Wheat the only other egg in private hands. Canadian Government Annuities System Has Not Been Abolished.

The Superintendent of Annuities has received the following request from an ardent correspondent who, evidently, had read of the abolition of the annuity staff of the Mother, and had been discontinued:

"I'll talk to ask, is it a fact that the Annuities System has been abolished at all? If it has, I am terribly disappointed, as I have intended for some time to put an Annuity next quarter-getting the full price I have thought that the Act could be abolished, and have been using the money in other ways for the purpose of paying for it. Do you not, I and many others have thought that the Annuities was a fine provision for poor people (as I am) to provide for their old age, and I am sure that is not true, and I hope that it is not true. I am sure that the Annuities has been abolished, as I have not heard anything about it, and I am sure that if it had been I should have heard of it. I am writing to you to ask you to do all in your power to get the Annuities reinstated, as I am sure for old age. Dr. Pomeroy Jones' Annuities are the only hope for many who have only paltry savings of the Post Office Savings Bank, which is not enough to keep them in old age. Hoping that you will

Nagging

To correct the bad habits of others is often to form a bad habit yourself. A nagging disposition is natural to few, it comes [illegible] nerves, or from supersensitiveness, or from a too free indulgence in sharp criticism—which is likely to lead a person into a minute and [illegible] scrutiny of the life about him. So long as criticism does not react unfavorably either on the critic or on the criticised it is beneficial, but when it is accompanied by a sense of impatience in the one and of resentment in the other it becomes nagging, and should be dropped —even if [illegible] that it "just" objects to continues to flourish.

The naggers and the nagged are as a rule, extremely fond of each other. You are not likely to nag anyone that you do not care about. In other words, nagging is primarily a family custom, and is chiefly practiced between husband and wives, parents, brothers and sisters. A certain affectionate intimacy seems to be required for it. Few people nag their servants even if the corners are seldom dusted and the silver and brasses polished only under protest. The mistress endures such a state of things as best she can and when she can endure it no longer she "makes a change." But long suffering mistresses are sometimes nagging wives and mothers — for the reason no doubt, that in their conjugal or maternal pride they are always striving to raise the standard of those most dear to them. In the same way a man may nag his wife, but he either tolerates or discharges his office boy.

For each of these there are certain persons whom it seems worth while to take pains with; but we should take pains with them at the right time and in the right tone of voice. In short, when the feeling of affection has sufficiently overcome that of annoyance. If we observe that only those who have hitherto been the victims of our nagging may soon come to counsel our [illegible]

THE GHOST OF A CHANCE

From It There Came a Double Wedding.

By MARTHA MC-WILLIAMS.

"Everybody else is going," Bessie said, with a sigh. "Oh dear! I wonder why it is one has to stay at the good times?"

"It is in punishment for the original sinner," Dene answered, with a smile of the head. "All our sins must be punished, and I, for my part, have brought up more activity than ever since I was born. Sometimes when I think over it all I feel fairly afraid for me too. We're here on prayer trust our reviews—we must break out after awhile."

"Stuff," Bessie Wilcox would have it if she heard you," Dene said. "Do you think she was ever young, Dene? I can't fancy her was time sixty and over, and I do believe she encourages us to bind and really wants us to be happy."

"Yes, in her way, which isn't mine nor anybody's. The two sexes are passionately. "Her way is to have everything just so. MO day in the year We have all sorts of amazed good things—we eat well, sleep well, dress well—but the poetry is gone out of them. How many times did we ever go into Paris to see anyone? Not more! And it's going to be the same this season. Proper never see us things any more because they know we won't resist."

"I don't mind that so much as the flowers. Rhoda's just like, first chance to run riot in the garden, pulling whatever you like!"

"Poor Bessie! Aunt Wilcox would have never done this to your mother if she heard that. I think one loves flowers, and however they are dreadful and beautiful, but because they are her own"—

"The same as her slaves," a deeper voice said from an unkept at the hedge. Next minute the hedge shook violently. It was and gnarly, behind a sorry house and therefore by Aunt Wilcox rented. The end of the shakings was a young man, slim and merry eyed, who bowed very low to the two persons named, then added, ingratiatingly: That's Irene me be sure I am to love you. I know I said it the last really this time the end justice it. I'm a committee of one my self—pointed, to find out how why the three girls in town are out of everything."

"Will you leave?" Dene silenced Rhoda, whose answering shaking though her face was preternaturally grave as she answered: "I've nothing to do with Joe Ilerwell's lie, no lie so sleepy."

Hartwell laughed at his being used Aunt Wilcox's lawyer, he knew the Ford girls. Aunt Wilcox was worse her than anybody in Cresent town. It was a knowledge that ran back to the road life period, although the latter knew no more of most you and your machine than could be gathered from stray-like hints carelessly thrown over olive of the hedge.

Now, for two years he had been wondering how to make contact there bringing on. Irene, he was sure, was full of kind sense for the life she was done. About Dene he was not so sure. She seemed to him a little too much of sophisticated—big and tangled herself into the domestic design of all hours. Therefore he reasoned entirely her possible. Rhoda, on the contrary, was Aubrey Aunt Wilcox's move than ever. Portable Hartwell realized, and to think that people would say Dene had married him through sort of above favors; maybe some that his father had encouraged his case to keep her here more so sectioned out of reach for the interests of his son. Anyway on that though, was the rebellion against this whining by the defiant. How would they be sure she freely loved him when she had had no chance of answering him against other several.

It was with a hope of giving her that chance he had called at this friend, knowing, for a month's visit. Dene was his hindrance, why and wanting him coming, duly advertised, had set scout Cortwell all a flutter. There were already things panned for all the first Barbados. Bessie and Dene had been discussing the most spectacular of them, the hen party at the end of the men place. It was to come off by moonlight, and was alarmed by Japanese lanterns. There would be dancing, of course, and supper in the big hall of the deserted mansion. Everybody was to wear fancy dress and masks, and Dene had chosen for that, Bessie and Dene might have been Pierrettes, but Aunt Wilcox threw as foot toward making it an event in her so much of being out of the theater.

If Hartwell had known that a bad speculation in the Cresent property had indeed where Bessie let him see how had he any [illegible] and it up against on you might desire your 50," he said earnestly. "I'll tell you what I'll do, wash the slate clean and begin at zero with the game. Let's forget it ever happened, and you'll be as good to me as you were before."

"Such a thing can't be said," Bessie cried Dene, springing up and wanting down in front of the garden where Aunt Hartwell stared at her Swiss modest pounded. Dene stopped short in her dancing to put her finger on her lip and say, pointing angrily between the words: "Promise not to faint when you see us, Joe. I think we're coming though we have just the ghost of a chance."

The town party had to take its Paris down on trust. No more events arrived in the sky the last on night's dance and undiscussed. The third brewsy night kept the crowd close about the house. It was big and unassuming, and if the worse came to the show of this dazzling round go an inside. True, a few nervous persons said that would bored to die. Of course it was all idle talk. None the less there had been talk of a ghost.

Dene ghosts indeed—those of the Vernon twin sisters, who had loved the same sweetheart and had refused to marry him out of regard for the other. They lived lived to a great age, fading and failing at last the withered room they in the family mansion. They had been dead twenty years, with never a good words to follow them. If they did not save something to their many graves then were years there and good deeds too. Nevertheless there ghosts was the talk, now one, now another, glimpsed there wailing head to head or the arms weep or flitting past the dark through the overgrown rose garden.

Donelson heard all this avidly. He liked whatever was old world and unnatural. Perhaps that was why, when the fete at last sent everybody scurrying within, he drew a little apart from the merry-making and stood starting up the dim vista of the great stairway, and there he was fired to see two white, slim and girlish, floating sideways down the stairway, one after the other, gliding, gliding, gliding, faint into the shadows. They were all in vaporous white—stirs of it covered their heads and arms. They had the perfect time and moved as in unison as if one like the rhythm of one soul rather than two.

Donelson felt his heart beat faster and his feet become rooted to the ground dancers as but new come members. He was conscious that, seeing in there even a ear "Don't you hate mosquito? Let's break that one up."

Then he turned whispers he told that he had seen Dene. Harwest suppose as a whistle, then said with a quirk breath: "I'll go you. Take the later one."

"No; I'm going to dance with the other Chinville masquerades don't demand formal presentation." Donelson answered back as he shot out to intercept the wearing woman, in a wish he had his chosen one first, and Dene turned upon the other. The greater they made the round of the long hall, the more, many times, the ghost dancers moving so lightly they did not even involve more quickly, although their merry partners at last were panting.

"How did you think of it? How dared you do it?" Hartwell asked as he whirled and whooped. The crash in his arms answered evenly: "We've been doing it a long time. It was a sort at outlet, fiction first thought of after we had found the last key to the big gate, but she never would have had the courage to do it if I had not egged her on. She wouldn't dare to be here tonight if I had her think. We have always been home. I have it climbed in by the library window. This time we shall late to get home before morning. I've got a key on the boom of the mullions and of course we shall be away before the masking time. What would Aunt Wilcox say if anybody told her we had been here?"

"Probably disbarred you at I should like that," Hartwell answered. "But you wouldn't think, you wouldn't. I am fortune hunting when I say I love you"—

What more he might have said nobody knows. Just then there came a wild cries of fire and after them a general panic. Despite the pouring rain, helped by the rapid wind it was soon upon—long and tangled harvest into the deserted dance hall at once. Therefore he reasoned entirely her possible. Rhoda, on the contrary, was Aubrey Aunt Wilcox's move than ever. Portable Hartwell realized, and to think that people would say Dene had married him through sort of above favors; maybe some that his father had encouraged his case to keep her here more so sectioned out of reach for the interests of his son. [CONTINUED.]

No sale for the Bible was awaited with a brighter expression, or that one more ready to help in the furtherance of the work. That is an assertion I would make without fear of contradiction in any part of the world. He had been a missionary in China, and had suffered many hardships and privations in the course of his duties, perhaps more than he would have cared to mention, but he was a man who loved his work, and thought no sacrifice too great for the cause.

Mrs. Hardy knew very little of all this he had lost a great quantity of blood, and for few weeks his days hovered on white and weak ground between life and death, but his wife, who had made it her work to get fresh flowers in the sick room every morning, and her own room was filled with the fragrant blooms she loved best.

The morning she had risen earlier than usual, and arranged them in a vase near the bed she was to occupy during the time when Mr. Hardy who was tired with his fatigues would be left alone. She had placed them in a low vase, I should like those in a tall one better, nurse."

Now the nurse was taking a few minutes rest in the next room, Ruth thinking it necessary to do further her, as the sun was now in another part of the room, and therefore not so pleasant for the invalid, turned towards the bed. But Mr. Hardy whose ears were all the keener because of his eyes having become almost useless, had detected the momentary hesitation, and guessed the reason for it. Without a doubt even half turned his head in the direction of the flowers, and then, with a sigh, he closed his eyes and shuddered quickly from the room.

While the nurse was arranging the pillows Ruth was thinking—oh, dear, how awkward and stiff and perhaps unfeeling he must think me" and Mr. Hardy was feeling acutely but indifferent as he unthought—as it was—and even a vase of flowers, white roses in particular, was associated with the memory of his wife, and was left to pass away, and was left to pass away, when he belonged him that the best

King George at Home.

When King George entered his private room on his return from his Indian visit he found a mass of correspondence arranged for his examination that made him smile. "Enough work here for a month, I suppose," he remarked to Lord Stamfordham. It was plain that he was only too anxious to get to work. His quick, alert manner, of moving about, glancing with pleasure at various objects in his apartments, pausing every now and then to make some brief reference to matters that immediately interested him, was gratifying to behold, since it indicated better than anything else could have done the downright joy that he felt at being back in his London home, while it equally conclusively demonstrated that his health had not been impaired by the fatigues of the last few months.

Industrial Accidents.

According to the record of industrial accidents kept by the Department of Labour, 81 persons were killed and 178 injured during February, 1912. This record compares very favourably with the of January, when 86 workmen were killed and 214 injured. Compared with February 1911, the record is still more favourable, as 93 were killed and 157 injured in that month. The worst disaster of the past month was the premature explosion of dynamite on construction work near Fort Frances, Ont., on the line of the Canadian Northern Railway, by which 12 construction hands were killed and six others seriously injured.

Two-year-old Harry had never seen a live lamb, his only knowledge of that animal being derived from a toy one on wheels. While visiting grandpa on the farm he was taken to the sheep pen to see the lambs. After looking at them for a few minutes, he looked up at grandpa with a puzzled expression and asked: "Where's the wheels?"

The term "illiterate" includes all persons at least 10 years of age unable to write their own language, a majority of them being also unable to read. The last reports on illiteracy are not in, but according to the last 46 of every 1,000 of our white native born over the age of 10 could not read or write. The great majority of such illiterates are found along the Appalachian mountain range and in the remote piney woods of some of our Southern States, where the distance and the scarcity of the population make Public schools well nigh impossible.—Christian Herald Almanac.

The customer had waited fifteen minutes for the fish he had ordered. He was very quiet as he sat there, but internally there was a seething.

At the end of the sixteenth minute the waiter, who had been in total eclipse for fifteen and a half minutes, bustled up.

"That fish will be here sir in five minutes."

Five minutes elapsed three times. Then the waiter bustled up again.

"The fish will be here sir in a minute."

The customer turned to him. "Tell me," he said quietly, but with a certain emphasis, "what bait are you using?"—St. Louis Republic.

Why Should I Use Cuticura Soap?

"There is nothing the matter with my skin, and I thought Cuticura Soap was only for skin troubles." True, it is for skin troubles, but its great mission is to prevent skin troubles. For more than a generation its delicate emollient and prophylactic properties have rendered it the standard for this purpose, while its extreme purity and refreshing fragrance give to it all the advantages of the best of toilet soaps. It is also invaluable in keeping the hands soft and white, the hair live and glossy, and the scalp free from dandruff and irritation.

While its first cost is a few cents more than that of ordinary toilet soaps, it is prepared with such care and of such materials, that it wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of other soap, and making its use, in practice, most economical. Cuticura Soap is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, but the truth of these claims may be demonstrated without cost by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. 7M, Boston, U. S. A., for a liberal sample cake, together with a thirty two page book on the skin and hair.

Weighed the Argument.

When Charles A. Dana was at the head of the New York Sun, a young graduate of Cornell was assigned to the reviewing of books. One of the first handed him was a massive volume purporting to be a life of Napoleon, written by a college professor.

The young reviewer had, as it happened, specialized on the life of Napoleon under a great authority at his university and he thought but little of the effort that was submitted to him by his editorial chief. He glanced over the illustrations, laid the book aside, and turned in this comment:—

"Life of Napoleon, by Prof. ——. This book weighs ... pounds."

Mr. Dana read the review and sent for the Cornell man.

"Did you write this review?" he growled.

"Yes, sir."

"Did you read the book?" growled Mr. Dana, with a fiercer look than before.

"No, sir. I weighed it."

"That will do," growled the chief.

Then he sent word downstairs to the cashier to raise the young man's salary.

The wages earned last year by Spanish settlers in South America amounted to 110,000,000 pesetas, or about $25,000,000 according to a statement by the Chilean Consul in London.

Sweet and palatable, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator is acceptable to children, and it does its work surely and promptly.

Getting the News.

The young girl sat in her bedroom with a novel. Her hair was down and her feet were in red slippers. Now and then, extending her white arms, she yawned.

You see, it was very late and downstairs in the parlor her older sister was entertaining a young man. She naturally felt a deep interest in the entertainment ...

MARCH WEATHER RHEUMATIC WEATHER

Victims Can Cure Themselves With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

With the coming of March people who are afflicted with rheumatism begin to have unpleasant reminders of their trouble. The weather is changeable—balmy and springlike one day, raw, cold and piercing the next. It is such sudden changes of weather that sets the pangs and tortures of rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica going. But it must be borne in mind that although weather conditions start the pains, the trouble is deeply rooted in the blood and can only be cured through the blood. All the lotions and liniments in the world can't cure rheumatism. Rubbing may seem to ease the pain while you are rubbing, but there its value ends. Only through the blood can you cure rheumatism. That's why Dr. Williams Pink Pills have so many thousands of cures of this trouble to their credit. The new, rich blood which they actually make drives out the poisonous acid, and rheumatism is vanquished. Here is an example. Mr. W. F. Douglas, Westwood, Ont., says: I was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism which spread through my entire system. For two months I was not able to go about and seemed to be hovering between life and death. My joints were swollen and my legs and arms twisted until I expected that they would never return to their normal shape. The doctor seemed to help me but not to cure me and I would be better one day and worse the next. At this time a friend ... urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got a dozen boxes. ... after beginning the pills ... was a change for the better ...

HIGHER RENTS BUT HIGHER WAGES TOO

Conditions in America Much More Favorable to Wage Earner Than in England

In proposing to make changes in Canada's fiscal system, it will always be necessary for the advocates of free trade or a reduced tariff to convince the people absolutely that the change will not interfere detrimentally with existing conditions. For one thing, the workingman must be assured that tariff reduction will not deprive him of any of the comforts or advantages he now enjoys. The present well-being of the working classes is certain. Their continued prosperity under a condition of free trade is a matter of doubt. To propose then, that Canada should experiment and find out what would result from cutting down the tariff, is a line of action that she cannot afford to take. She must be sure of her ground before taking steps in that direction.

Free Trade England vs. America

It can be proved conclusively that in countries under a system of free trade, the industrial classes are worse off than they are in countries where protection is accorded to industry. Thanks to the careful investigations of the British Board of Trade, it is possible to demonstrate that the artisans of the United Kingdom taken in the aggregate are not in the enjoyment of such comforts and advantages as are [illegible] England [illegible] free trade country and the United States [illegible]

A MARINE AUTOCRAT.

The Captain of the Battleship and His Absolute Authority.

Over the vast establishment rules the captain in supreme and isolated authority. All his accomplishments must be those of the seaman, for he directs the movements of the ship in all evolutions, and his decision upon all professional points is final. His responsibility at all times is grave and exacting. In time of war it will strain the stoutest nerves. In the hour of battle it is nothing short of appalling when he stands alone in his conning tower, having control of all the tremendous forces lying latent in his ship only to be released at the proper moment by a touch of his hand. He is the guiding spirit of an enormous projectile of 15,000 tons that rushes through the water at a speed, it may be, of fifteen knots, and he knows that the slightest mistake of his head or heart may mean a national disaster.

But besides being the naval and military chief of the establishment he is a lawyer, a kind of justice of the peace, as it were, who holds court every morning, investigates reports of misdemeanors and assigns punishment to the guilty. The delinquents are brought to the "mast"—the quarter deck—with their accusers. Both sides are heard, and swift judgment usually follows. In this capacity it will be noted that the captain is court, judge and jury. Not infrequently he acts as clergyman and as such is the bishop of his diocese, acknowledging no ecclesiastical superior, reading the service on Sundays, officiating at the burial of his dead and in the old days occasionally marrying lovers.—Lieutenant Commander Gleaves in World's Work.

A Parallel Case

A Story Where Truth Proves Stranger Than Fiction

By AGNES G. BROGAN

The big westerner was evidently not enjoying his journey. He appeared to be possessed of a hunger for human companionship, and after several unsuccessful attempts at conversation with fellow passengers in the smoker he stepped out on to the observation platform and stood drawing long breaths of fresh air, as though the proximity of the trees along the wayside stifled him. Then, turning abruptly, he entered the car. Its occupants still sat absorbed in their own affairs as his towering figure passed down the aisle. Then as Boynton sank into his seat his glance fell upon a girl who sat opposite. He had not noticed her before, but now his bored expression gave way to one of frank pleasure as he gazed admiringly into her charming upturned face.

There was an indefinable air of joyousness about the girl which curved the corners of her lips and twinkled in her laughing eyes. She regarded the westerner with good humored interest for a moment, then returned to her survey of the ever changing scenery. But to the man her very presence had changed the dreary atmosphere like a breath from the sweet, wild prairies. He saw as he covertly watched the girl her unaffected delight in the new surroundings and [illegible]

... a great tenderness so as not to [illegible] the sleeping girl.

After what seemed an interminable time she looked up at him like a sleepy child.

"Nearly there?" she asked.

He leaned forward tensely.

"Yes," he answered. "We are desperately near your journey's end, and—and I can't stand it any longer. I've simply got to tell you right here and now how much I love you. We haven't known each other long, but my love for you isn't new. It's as old—as old as the beginning of the world, and I do not ask for a return—oh, not yet! By and by, perhaps, when some of my rough edges are rubbed off and when I have grown a little more like other people, then I will dare to ask you—most humbly. But now I want you to know that I'm loving you all the time wherever you may be, and if you think that there might be a glorious possibility—some time—that you would be my wife"—the big westerner's voice trembled—"oh, my dear," he whispered, "I would try so hard to be worthy."

The girl stood up before him. Two scarlet spots burned in her cheeks, and her eyes were filled with tears. "You must not talk like that to me," she said severely; "it is so—so absurd. Why, you do not even know my name. We are going into the station now, and my father will be there to meet me, so I will tell it to you." She laughed unsteadily. "I am Henry Hobbs," she said—"Henry Hobbs, do you understand, writer of that—that awful rot? When I spoke to you this morning it was only because I was so anxious to see the illustration of my story. I had been too hurried to stop and buy a copy of the magazine. Then when you spoke of my story so discouragingly I wanted to prove to myself that such an occurrence might actually happen. So I have been leading you on, deliberately trying all day long to persuade you to make love to me. You see now what a horrible, despicable creature I am! But that is not all. I [illegible]

THE STANDARD

Thursday, April 26th, 1917

Elsewhere will be found the official notice of the Board of Trade meeting to be held on Friday evening next. All business men should make it a point to be present, as matters of importance will be discussed.

Many of the settlers in the district are busy getting in their crops, but there are still a number who have not commenced seeding. Some are waiting for the frost to get out of the ground, while others are waiting for their horses to get in condition for work. Those who have not commenced seeding should get busy at once, as the season is getting late.

The Vermilion Board of Trade is in receipt of the following letter from the Honorable the Minister of Agriculture and which we will be of interest to the farmers in our district having to do with the raising of poultry:-

J. W. G. Morrison, Esq.
Vermilion, Alta.

Dear Sir:-

I have received your letter asking for information as to the best way to conduct a poultry raising plant. Mr. Harcourt has put your letter before me and I am pleased to say that we carry on poultry raising on the farm by extensive fashion and have had demonstrations done and I believe in some further in the province. Mr. Scott, who is manager of the Vermilion farm, was in charge of this poultry experiment at that time and I think is still in charge of the poultry plant at the farm. I would suggest that you communicate with him and get information in regard to the matter.

Yours very truly,
Chas. Stuart,
Minister of Agriculture.

Card of Thanks

We wish to return our heartfelt thanks to the neighbours and friends for their many kind attentions and expressions of sympathy in our late bereavement.

Big Alberta Programme By G.N.R.

If the Canadian Northern cash and scrip are sufficient men, and a Pacific supply obtainable, the road from Edmonton to Vermilion will be completed and in operation by the end of 1917. The company has announced its intention of building the connection to the Coast, and has commenced it at both Lake and Edmonton. After this it will cut across the C.P.R. line east of Vermilion, through the Battle River Valley in the direction of the G.N.R. line in the north of the G.N.R. main line. It will proceed direct south through Wainwright, across the C.P.R. track at some point between Hughendon and Collingwood, and after passing Sounding Lake, Beaverhill Lake and Gooseberry Lake will join the Edmonton-Calgary line. After this it will cut across the C.P.R. line east of Calgary, through the Bow River Valley, and through the Rocky Mountains to the Coast. Such is the announcement made by Mr. Mackenzie, president of the company. Mr. Mackenzie, who outlined communication. Then it will pass over the company's Saskatchewan-Calgary line, which will give the company a direct line through the Rocky Mountains to the Coast. Surveying Routes

Surveyors have already been engaged on the route, and the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible. Mr. Mackenzie stated that the line would be completed to the coast in 1918. The line will open up a vast area of new territory, consisting of lands somewhat similar to those being taken up immediately to the west of Vermilion. The villages which will receive direct benefit are: Wanhoek, Soda Lake, Harry Hill Pioneville, Lemoke, Nottingham, Chailly, and Wembley. The road will follow very closely the valley of the Vermilion River.

From Vermilion the road will run straight south, offering railway transportation to the settlers locating in the Battle River Valley in the territory south of the G.N.R. main line. It will proceed direct south through Wainwright, across the C.P.R. track at some point between Hughendon and Collingwood, after passing Sounding Lake, Beaverhill Lake and Gooseberry Lake will join the Edmonton-Calgary line. LONDON STORIES.

When Customers Enter They Are Attended to Promptly and Politely.

First and foremost the London mind is acknowledged. Once having got a possible purchaser inside the door, they reason he should be made profitable to them. The floor manager does not assume that attitude of royal indifference to which we, the visitors to the struggle between salesperson and customer. If the latter shows signs of escaping into the open with his purse intact another clerk is brought forward as a non-commissioned officer commands 4d.D by those on ricrks who do not collect him, and the agonies of the victim the salesforce to its utmost efforts to persuade him to remain a little longer.

The second great London store boys of letting a cash girl conduct a customer who has finished his purchases to a central cash desk and wrapping counter. Here she stands in long, lanky an anxious eye on his goods till they are parcelled, secure in a receipt and counterfoil. An Oxford street merchant, however, ruinous differently: "When a person has finished his purchases he is better out of the way of new customers. English men and women prefer privacy when they are making purchases, which would be impossible were customers allowed to sit at the counter, awaiting their packages. Then the wrapping force works more rapidly when the parties receive their urges haste."

The customer can see how that particular force could work any more slowly, but his other argument might have some truth in it.

SHETLAND'S TAME GULLS.

Each Family Has Its Own Flock and the Children Feed Them.

There are many small villages in the world that can only be reached from Lerwick, in Shetland, bonbon boy and a single street, sometimes not even one. There are no birds there, not even a sparrow, but the seagulls are plentiful.

The seagulls are the sparrows of Lerwick, and as such they have a certain claim to the crumbs of the sparrows of London. In the morning you will notice that a seagull sits on every chimney pot. Seagulls sweep and hover over every roof in town. The air is full of their strange, wild, plaintive, haunting cries.

Every house has its own familiar seagulls and every street its own band of them. But when you come to the figures in the models manner over a clinging trained skirt of navy blue satin.

If you want to dress in silk and metal brocade, the whole edge of the kid is finished off with a cord of heavy silk and gold, gold or silver. Any simple design can be worked out but the more elaborate the design is simple One does not wish to cover too closely the body of the kid.

A favorite adoption of the work is the Greek key design. It is also worn beneath the fashionable bonnet of cloth or velvet.

The kid is cut to the space between the fronts of the bolero and reaches to the belt line. It is then embroidered and finished off to the front form of a fan that corresponds with the color of the gown.

Kid laces are placed at the sides and these fastened to hooks sewed to the bodice. Fancy braids in metal or gold are frequently used for the purpose. The work has many other uses in side dress trimmings. It can be made into charming opera bags, holders for various things or mounted on cardboard for picture frames, fancy boxes, etc.

LOUIS NAPOLEON'S ESCAPE.

Disguised as a Workman He Fooled the Most Fortress Guard.

From the researches made by M. Thiers come some interesting details of the escape of Louis Napoleon from the fortress of Ham, in northern France, on May 25, 1846.

It seems that the sole credit for the escape must be given to Louis Napoleon himself. He made his valet, The a, buy a black wig, some rouge, a cap which was scrubbed with pumice stone, and an old workman's blue dress, out of his wardrobe, put on a loose apron, a blue pair of trousers and a dress frock coat of the period, and, retiring the valet force to its utmost effort, left the premises and walked coolly out of the fortress.

The governor of the fortress, Monsieur Demole, and for the prince. Each time the valet answered that the prisoner could not see anybody because he was ill, and finally, when at last the governor had gotten and went himself to the prince's room and walked up to the bed on which the supposed invalid was lying and discovered that a very presentable dummy had taken the place of Louis Napoleon. The discovery was made too late. By that time the fugitive was over the border in the frontier.—Paris Journal des Debats.

A REAL MAGIC CAP.

Curious Experience of a German Organist in St. Petersburg.

Not very long ago a German organist who went to St. Petersburg to take up an appointment in a church was rewarded for a time with most handsome fees. The cause of his success was a magic cap that he wore.

The organist bought the cap during his first day at the Russian capital and found that it was a real magic cap. For a week he returned to his lodgings after each performance with a handful of gold pieces in his pocket, one of which was handed to him by the organ blower.

The next day, after his usual walk, he found four pennies in his custody instead of the usual gold piece. Not a penny more was forthcoming. A third day, with a still more disappointed air, he found the number of pennies he had to count reduced to two.

The following day the detective to go with the German to the teller and there he found that the latter had been robbed the first time it had been entrusted from the organ blower's cap, which he was the means of to the organist.

The detective then handed the organ ground through the streets of the city, when the mystery was solved. The organ blower, in the course of an organ of Russian working capacity, had managed to slip one of the pieces of it into the pocket of the first person who had passed him, and had treated the Germans, and he had reaped the rewards.

With this clew it was an easy matter for the police to find the thief, and the organist was presented with a new cap, which he used to the end of his days.—London Tit-Bits.

The Part of Workless Men.

Poor laborers who are unable to acquire an income-producing machine may nevertheless do much to help those who have. Many hundred men—and women, too, for that matter—are to-day rendered incapable of earning a large amount of bread owing to the fact that they are separated from the other men of the order side of the channel by a broad belt of water and land. These cities bear a heavy burden of the war, and are in sad need of help.

In addition to these general laborers there are many artisans and craftsmen whose services could be used upon our hardware lands with great profit to all concerned.

A happy combination of workmen and employers of this nature is what is known as the Bessemer steel works, which is situated on the north bank of the Ohio river, a few miles below Pittsburg. The owner of this plant is Henry Bessemer, the inventor of the process which bears his name. Mr. Bessemer has for many years been a liberal employer of labor, and his workmen have always shown a keen interest in the success of the business. Mr. Bessemer and his workmen have always been on friendly terms with each other.—Success Magazine.

THE SHEPHERD.

Let the Sheep out in the yards on Fine Days, but never expose them to storms.

Old ewes should be fattened and disposed of before they lose any teeth. They are all right, as a rule, up to six years or a little older.

Two tons of hay will feed 100 sheep one year. The hay should be clover, alfalfa or mixed grasses, or oats and straw, pea straw, also clover, etc.

Sheep like other animals are fond of salt, and a small quantity should always be handled by the sheep themselves, that should not be given to them greedily and after exposure to the weather. Be careful in the fall.

It is not wise to let the lambs catch for themselves salt under the sheep.

Sheep should be salted by them at least once a week. Every salt is given in the pen or pens and keep salt in a dry place. If deprived of salt for a few days they will eat too much of it when they get it.

Sheep should have salt by them at all times in the winter. Keep salt in a dry place. Salting sheep once a week is sufficient.

THE SUCCESSFUL COW.

Points That Indicate a Profitable Dairy Animal.

The three points to look for in a successful dairy cow are: Capacity for feed and work, constitution and quality. Capacity for feed is indicated by a large body, strong digestive organs, indicated by a large barrel, and a broad and deep middle between the fore and the hind legs. Capacity for work is indicated by a good heart girth, a large chest and strong lungs, indicated by a large space between the fore legs and a strong constitution, indicated by a large head, a broad muzzle, large nostrils, a large windpipe and a broad chest. Quality is indicated by fine bone, fine hair, a soft, pliable skin, etc.

Beauty Hint For This Girl.

The hint given in the morning, after a sponge bath with a thorough rub, is to make use of a glycerine and rosewater lotion. When appetite is poor a well-beaten egg, a glass of wine and sweet bread thoroughly baked and dry, buttered and, a little while after, a cup of tea—never hot tea, may be taken. The woodsy meat should be avoided, and the vegetables be cooked steak or roast beef, a little boiled rice and a salad with either oil or dressing and some simple dessert; for instance, a baked apple or a baked pear when a sweet bread was buttered. At noon a cup of tea and a bit of bread or chocolate is taken and another of hot milk in the evening.

Personal Toilet Articles.

Clean up your personal toilet. Most of the women of exquisite taste, one of the first things they do when they get their toilet articles of the best—and get the best—is to throw away their cheap and worn out brushes and combs. Nothing will so quickly destroy the appearance of the hair and scalp as these worn-out articles. Get the best you can afford and keep them clean. Do not replace your toilet requisites try having them of your favorite.

A Practical Manicure.

A practical way of keeping the finger nails well in order is that to treat it as one of the regular duties of the every morning. First have them cut to the desired length and shape, and then, with the cuticle softened by the water in which you have washed your hands, push back the skin with a towel or orange stick. It is the amount of thought and care that you give to the nails that will make them look well.

Polish the tips slightly after the morning's bath, but do not use the buffer until the nails are beat, as this causes them to become brittle.

Cure of False Nails.

If neglected the most costly bought nails become unsightly. The polish, curled or loose formation should be brushed as rapidly as the real nail and no delay. The best way to do it is to put a towel on the lap or table and, spread the paws on it, brush with a rather hard nail brush briskly from one side, then the other. Then remove tongue and deep and rest the nails, as deep a comfort.

A two-in number record of fifty pounds of milk and 40.20 pounds of butter fat during seven days is the best herewith given of the Holstein-Friesian cow, Pontiac Korndyke, owned by Ex-Governor Woodbury of Connecticut. This cow is now in the herd of Senator Clark of Montana. Her record was made at the state fair of Illinois. She is the mother of Pontiac Korndyke, the sire of the world's champion milk cow, Segis Pontiac Korndyke.

Make Your Own Rouge.

If you are dissatisfied with the rouge you are using try making your own. A very simple way of preparing a harmless rouge is by taking a portion of a dried and true red rose petals. Be sure that no spray for insecticide has been used for the rose. Pulverize the petals in a mortar and pestle and add a pinch of powdered alum. Mix well and sift through a fine sieve. Keep in a tightly corked bottle and a little will go a long way.

MANY HOMESTEADS OPEN FOR ENTRY ALONG THE C.N.R.

It is estimated that there are over [illegible] free homesteads open for entry in the three prairie provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This means that over 25,000,000 acres are being given away for less than ten cents an acre. The entry fee for one homestead of 160 acres being $10 will mean that when all these homesteads are disposed of the government will have received $1,560,000 for twenty-[illegible] million acres of land. Of these homesteads [illegible] are located adjacent to the Canadian Northern Railway and [illegible] of them are within twelve miles of existing C.N.R. lines, many of these being within two or three miles of a railway service.

Full detailed information as to where these homesteads are, the nature of the soil and the general description of the country in which they are located is given in a pamphlet recently issued by the Canadian Northern Railway.

The pamphlet is beautifully printed with [illegible] color half tones, the cover [illegible] recently arrived from [illegible] from the village [illegible] his homestead. CONGO GUN RUNNING Alleged Illegal Traffic by Belgian Authorities.

A correspondence has taken place between the Congo Reform association and the foreign office at London in respect to "the international illegal traffic in arms pursued by the Belgian government" in the Congo. Sir E. Grey having pointed out that "steps are being taken by the Belgian government to remedy the evil," Mr. Morel replies that "that statement does not appear to be in any sense conclusive. He states that the traffic in ivory and rubber [illegible] goes on in which payment is made to the natives in guns and ammunition. He concludes: "The evil in question is a creation of the Belgian government's predecessors. It has been perpetuated ever since annexation by the Belgian administration. The Belgian administration has admittedly obtained large sums by thus carrying on a traffic which is an offense against the law of nations, and which, as Sir Edward Grey's strong remarks [illegible] is a menace to the tranquility not only of the Belgian Congo, but also of the neighboring colonies."

The First Thimble

There is a tradition that a Dutch silversmith pondered long and silently in the slow-working genius which he deemed his brain—a nothing for a trinket, a fallal, for a dignified lady of Holland. It must be a useful trinket, albeit a costly one, meet for so good a sempstress as Dame Anne Van Rensselaer. When the notion took definite shape, the thing was quickly wrought in precious metal by fingers as deft as the brain was slow, and the industrious housewife proudly wore not only her first thimble, but the first thimble possessed by any Dutch frau.—Century Magazine.

Poverty

Poverty has been designed by an all-seeing Providence in order to make the rich humble. Without poverty the rich would not know how well off they were and if they did not know this they would have no opportunity to sympathize with the poor, thus no condition of humility would be possible.

Poverty is also useful in many other ways. It enables sociologists to write books and by constant practice gives them remarkable facility. It affords a splendid field for the theologians and helps him very much in his illustrations.

Education in Crime.

Medical men and others interested in the psychology of crime understand that crimes are often imitated. One sensational murder is followed by another similar in character. A society woman elopes with the coachman and another soon follows. One suicide jumps from some high place, another will imitate the example. One young lady disappears, another is liable to follow. Thieving and holdups are as common, they seem to be contagious. Human beings are followers of fashion in their acts and crimes as they are in the clothes they wear. From this standpoint the newspaper publication of all kinds of misconduct is open to censure. The claim put forward by the press that the public demands sensational news and it is their duty to furnish it is not based upon sound reasoning. The publication of the details of crime or indecency whets the appetite of the imitator, and may be fairly considered an inciting cause of crime and indecency.—Medical Recorder.

"It never struck me before," said Mr. Wimpleton, "but Dr. Temple stopped me this morning to tell me what a big, handsome, manly-looking fellow our son had grown to be."

"I don't see how you could help noticing it," his wife replied. "I have been aware of it all the time, but I guess a mother is more likely to look for such things than a father is."

"Oh, I've realized that Will was handsome and manly-looking all right. You never have been any more proud of him than I have been."

"But you just said it never had struck you before."

"I mean it never struck me before how much he resembles me."

"Penny wise and pound foolish" is the way it runs—but we think it ought to be turned around.

Left Handedness.

The question as to whether left handedness is inherited is still doubtful but a man of science has investigated seventy-eight families dealing with [illegible] individuals and his evidence goes to show, says Professor J. Arthur Thomson, that the trait passes from father to son.

They were talking of a friend who stuttered, upon the fact that he had never been married.

"I ha-ha-have, boys, that I've never-[illegible]."

"This is where I get off," observed the awkward rider, when his horse proceeded to do some fancy bucking.

Help From Little Johnnie

"What were you and Mr. Smith talking about in the parlor?" asked her mother.

"Oh, we were discussing our kith and kin," replied the young lady. The mother looked dubiously at her daughter, whereupon her little brother, wishing to help his sister, said:

"Yeh, they was, mother. I heard 'im. Mr. Smith asked for a kiss and she said, you kin."

For The Nervous Woman,

Or the woman who experiences hot flashes nothing is so good to soothe, quiet and calm the nervous system as a pure glyceric extract of native medicinal plants, and made without alcohol, which has been sold by druggists for the past forty years, and most favorably known as Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In younger years some women suffer from dizziness, or fainting spells, hysteria, headache, bearing-down feelings and pain. All these symptoms of irregularity and female disturbance are relieved by the use of this famous "Prescription" of Doctor Pierce.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system, and in particular to the organs distinctly feminine. For over-worked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, it is an excellent appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

Stover Family Deported

James W. Stover and family, who have been living at Landonville for the past three years, have been deported to the United States. The deportation, as far as the Standard can learn, was ordered by the immigration authorities at Winnipeg. The cause of deportation is given in the Edmonton Bulletin as follows: "Dr. Barrow, of the public health department, stated that the Stover case had been brought to the departments attention sometime ago, and that the department considered that as it had been supporting the family for some time that they had become a public charge. The removal of Mrs. Stover to the hospital had been made on the recommendation of the physician in charge of the case at Vermilion. The family, the department considered, were degenerates, and this with becoming a public charge, had brought about their deportation. The doctor further declares that the department had been maintaining Stover for some time.

A MAN OF EXTREMES

Will Usually Swing as Far One Way as the Other.

By MARGARET BROTHERTON

Edgar Crane from the time he could talk was considered peculiar. As a little boy he evinced a distaste for little girls, and as a youth his antipathy for the opposite sex increased rather than diminished. By the time he came of age he was a hardened woman hater. Such men usually are devoted to their own sex. Not so Crane. He had but little more use for men than women.

An aunt vainly endeavored to get what she called "this nonsense" out of him and, failing, told him that he would some day become a convert to her views and surrender under circumstances no more sensible than was his opposition. When she died her nephew was still of the same opinion. The old lady left him her fortune, $100,000, with the stipulation that if he married half the amount was to go to a foundlings' home. Thus did she arrange to show her spleen after her death.

Edgar Crane had $10,000 of his own, and, taking his fortune with him, he went west to become a rancher. He bought a large tract of land and built a house in the middle of it, thus keeping as far as possible from neighbors. His house was comfortable, and his domain was attractive, being made up of plains and rolling land, partly wooded. He stocked it with a few sheep, but spent more money for books to put in his library than for sheep to stock his ranch.

His lands were so extended that it was some time before he had visited every part of them. Indeed, he spent most of his time at home reading. When he did ride out it was for the purpose of seeing if there were trespassers on his grounds. Several years passed and he showed no signs of dissatisfaction with his mode of life. Then one day when riding up on an eminence he saw a little shanty built of a few logs, some boards and considerable brush on a spot that he knew was within his bounds.

[illegible] and decisions would have given [illegible] riding up to his house one evening and said to him:

"Mr. Crane, did you know y' got a foundlin' asylum on yer ranch?"

"What do you mean?"

"Some one has put up a wood and board shanty over by the creek and left a baby in it. I rode past there as I come in and, hearin' a child squallin', looked in, and there was no one there but the baby."

"I'll go and see about that," replied Crane with severity, though in his heart was a fear that the pink toed baby had been deserted by its parents.

Somehow the conditions under which his aunt had left him her fortune came up to mock him. She had predicted that he would eventually do something erratic in the way of marriage, and in case he did he must turn over the legacy to a foundlings' home. He had just been informed that he had a foundlings' home on his ranch. There was something uncanny about the affair.

Nevertheless he rode on. When he came near the cabin he heard the child crying piteously. All was dark. He entered and after a search found a candle and some matches. Striking a light, he went to the baby and began to pat and sing to it as he had heard mothers and nurses do. The baby ceased to cry. Taking the candle to the bunk, he let the light fall on the baby. The little thing blinked its eyes, and Crane held the candle where it was not to be seen. Then the tiny face broke into a smile.

But the child was hungry, and its good humor did not last long. Crane, divining the cause, went to a cupboard made of a box, where he found milk, and since there was plenty of wood for a fire he soon had the food warmed and in the baby's bottle. Then, putting it between the pink lips, he had the satisfaction of seeing his charge pull lustily.

Ten o'clock came, but no human being. Eleven passed, and when an old loud ticking Connecticut clock which ed 12 Crane came to the conclusion that the baby had been left to [illegible]. Lying down beside it, he determined to remain with it till morning, then take it to his own house.

He awoke to see the sun shining in at the open door. And he saw something else—a woman about twenty years old, standing, looking down at him and the baby, who was using his breast for a pillow and had one arm thrown over him. On the woman's face was an expression of terror, which as she looked faded into one of satisfaction, then broke into a smile. For a few moments while Crane was awakening [illegible]

A BIRD OF LIGHT.

The Arctic Tern Chases the Night by Flights From Pole to Pole.

It used to be thought that the golden plover bore off the palm for length of flight between summer and winter homes, but an article in the National Geographic Magazine awards that distinction to the arctic tern. This bird breeds as far north as it can find anything stable on which to construct its nest. It has been found within seven and a half degrees of the pole itself. And that nest was found surrounded by a wall of newly fallen snow, which the mother bird had carefully scooped out from round her eggs.

The tern arrives in the far north about June 15 and leaves again for the south toward the last of August, when the young are able to fly strongly. Two or three months later the birds are to be found skirting the edge of the antarctic continent, 11,000 miles away.

What their track is over that vast space no one yet knows. A few individuals are occasionally seen along the New England or Long Island coast in the fall, but the flocks of thousands and thousands of these are which alternate from pole to pole have never been seen by any [illegible] or competent to learn [illegible] path and their time [illegible] must travel at least [illegible] day—apart from their [illegible] or in pursuit of food—[illegible] within ten or twelve [illegible] end of the world to the [illegible].

The arctic terns enjoy more hours of sunlight than any other creature on the globe. The sun never sets during their stay at their northern nesting grounds, and during their stay in the south they have more than continuous sunlight and practical daylight for two months more. The birds have twenty-four hours of daylight for between six and eight months of the year.

SPOKE TO A GHOST

Queer Incident In Which Bishop Wilberforce Figured.

THE STORY THE SPIRIT TOLD.

Singular Disclosure That Was Said to Have Been Made by the Quiet Clerical Specter That Had Long Haunted an English Country House.

The following remarkable incident in the life of the late Samuel Wilberforce, bishop of Oxford and afterward of Winchester, is related as absolutely authentic, and the good bishop himself is said to have many times rehearsed the story to his friends.

On a certain occasion the worthy bishop had accepted an invitation to stay at a country house not far from London. Entering the drawing room previous to dinner on the evening of his arrival, he noticed a clergyman sitting by the open fire and taking no part in the general conversation. The bishop was somewhat surprised at not being presented to the clergyman, and his astonishment was great when a few moments later, dinner being announced, the guests retired, leaving the clergyman at his place by the fire. The hostess having assigned Bishop Wilberforce the seat of honor at her right hand, as soon as an opportunity offered he remarked:

"I beg your pardon, madam, but may I inquire who was the clergyman we left sitting in the drawing room?"

"Ah, you have seen him, then?" replied the lady. "It is not every one who has that privilege. I cannot tell you who he is or whence he comes. [illegible]

Connaught and Kerr Join in Movement For Good Roads

Moved by the same high public spirit and the single purpose of bringing the roads of Canada up to a standard that will be a credit to the nation, and an example to the world at large, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and W. J. Kerr, hold the two highest positions in the gift of the Canadian Highway Association, that of patron and president respectively.

The Canadian Highway will be an accomplished fact within the next few years, and the outside world will then know that in this broad Dominion there is a road more than 3,000 miles long over which an automobile can travel from coast to coast in safety and with comfort. The country that offers the wealthy tourist the splendid roads that Canada will have, the magnificent scenery and exceptional opportunities of investment, will reap a large harvest from its visitors.

This association was formed in New Westminster, B. C. last November, and it was at this meeting that Mr. Kerr, a wealthy resident of the coast and the principal mover in the convention that resulted in the formation of the association, was elected president. Some time later the Governor-General of Canada, whose activity in the cause of good roads is well known to those interested in this work was approached and requested to permit his name to be used as that of Patron, the following resolution being forwarded to him after a meeting of the executive of the association:

Moved by President W. J. Kerr,
Seconded by V-Pres. A. E. Todd,

"His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, having in many ways shown his interest in good roads and more particularly in his speech from the throne at the last formal opening of parliament, be it therefore,

"Resolved, that the secretary extend to His Royal Highness the thanks of the officers of the Canadian Highway Association for lending his influence to the cause of roads improvements, and further,

"That the secretary respectfully informs His Royal Highness that it is the earnest desire of the members of this association that His Royal Highness should consent to become Patron of the Canadian Highway Association."

The following reply was received a few days ago by P. W. Luce, secretary of the Association:

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
OTTAWA

Dear Sir,

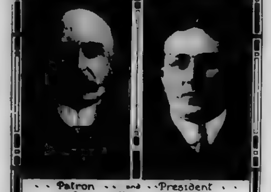
I am desired by the Governor-General to acknowledge receipt of your letter, and to inform you in reply that His Royal Highness will be pleased to become Patron of the Canadian Highway Association as requested by your executive committee.

His Royal Highness is much interested in the subject of Good Roads, and wishes your association every success. I am,

Yours faithfully.
Arthur F. Sladen,
Private Secretary.

The Duke of Connaught has long been interested in good roads and has shown in many ways that he is strongly in sympathy with any movement that will tend to better the transportation facilities of this or any other country. Travelled man as he is, and trained in observation of things that make for the public weal, His Royal Highness has put to practical use the knowledge gained in Canada, England, on the continent, and in foreign countries, and he believes he has acted wisely in allowing his name to become associated with the enterprise fathered by the Canadian Highway Association.

"Good Roads are a social and economic necessity, and good roads we will have all over Canada before I am ready to acknowledge that the work of the Canadian Highway Association is finished," says President W. J. Kerr. And he means every word of it.



Patron and President of the Canadian Highway Association

Occupants of House Slept While Out-Buildings Burned

On Wednesday morning when the family of F. E. Simms awakened they found that fire had destroyed the blacksmith shop, chop shed, wagon, sleighs and other implements and burned holes in the bottom of a new democrat a few yards from the house. The loss is estimated at $1000.00 with no insurance. Mr. Simms was working till 10.00 the night before and as a high wind prevailed it is thought to have been the cause of the fire.

The house and stables are only a few rods from where the other buildings were situated and that they did not burn is attributed to a rain that fell during the night as the manure and straw around the stable was seen to have been on fire. The stable contained four horses and a number of cattle, and Mr. Simms and the family, some ten in number, were in the house. The location of the family is at Deer Lake, Sec. 30-52-4.

Wainwright Star, Says

Although composed of entirely amateur actors and actresses, the Vermilion Dramatic Club attained a pronounced success here on Friday evening last with their popular comedy entitled "What Happened to Jones", and hold the distinction of having presented one of the most enjoyable and successful comedies in the local Auditorium. From the fact that it was an amateur company from a neighboring sister town, local theatre-goers turned out in large numbers and showed their appreciation throughout by generous and frequent applause.

Mr. R. G. Dunsmore, as Jones in the disguised role of the Bishop, was easily the star of the evening, and handled his part with particular finesse. Ebenezer Goodly, represented by Mr. M. G. Brinsmade, also played his part well, and affected a large percentage of the humour with his many difficult and peculiar predicaments. Mrs. W. S. Cook as Mrs Goodly took a very difficult part, and dealt with it accordingly. Although taking a minor character as Helma, the Swedish servant, Miss Wetherbee was one of the most popular of the company, and her negress dialect was first class. The other members also came in for much deserving credit, and in this connection Mr. Ken Miller, as the original Bishop, should be mentioned among those in the front benches.

The several high class specialities between acts were well worthy of distinct applause and were received in this manner. Mr. A. E. Pilkie with his popular song entitled, "If the Wind Had only Blown the Other Way", could easily be rated among the best of amateur comedians, although he displayed nothing more than his usual and everyday wit and humor.

It is understood from those who accompanied the troupe here, that the proceeds of the evening will go towards a hospital or some other beneficiary institution. From the well filled house, the proceeds should net a good sum, although the admission fees did not correspond with the high-class entertainment presented. Had the prices been higher, no lack would have been forthcoming for the comedy was one of the best seen here, and could easily be classed with higher priced and more favorably known show troupes.

On the whole, the Vermilion Dramatic Club merits the praise of even the keenest critics, and should be considered so by all interested parties of our sister C. N. R. town.

Royal Bank Purchases Choice Site

The most important deal of the week in Vermilion was put through by R. L. Craig & Co., real estate brokers, who sold lot 20 Bl. 5, belonging to M. W. Hopkins to the Royal Bank of Canada, who, it is understood will shortly erect an office building. The location is a choice one being the corner of Main and Bulyea Sts. and is the centre of the financial district.

All Oddfellows are requested to meet in their lodge Room Royal George Theatre Building at 1:3 5p.m. on Sunday, April 28th, for the purpose of attending Divine Service at the Methodist Church of her it covered—as she stood beside me that beautiful summer morning so long ago, and said the words that made her mine for ever."

I have said long ago five years with you, darling, would seem short indeed but away from the light of your eyes, from the charm of your presence, counting the days of separation, it was a century of dull grey hours.

I need not now dwell on the events that have kept us parted so long. We will soon be together again, and with hand in hand and heart to heart how much easier to explain all the inevitable disappointments, all the hopes and fears of those long days of waiting.

I send this note by a trusty messenger to prepare you, darling, for my coming the Friday eve, the 12th, at 8 p.m. I will look for my little wife at the old trysting place.

Your devoted husband,
Frederick Hardy."

Charles groaned aloud as he began the letter. "His wife! Oh God!" he muttered, then with a face that seemed turned to stone he read the letter over once, twice, three times, and then with the letter still in his hands he turned and walked slowly up and down the room. Edith in the next room started to the slow measured tread as he seemed to pass and repass where she was sitting and prayed as she never prayed before that he might get strength to bear it manfully.

Charles however was thinking not so much of this bitter ending to his dreams of bliss, nor of his mother's terrible grief when she should learn the disgrace and misery that had fallen upon her little family circle, but of Edith herself, pure, high-minded, sensitive, married to a professional gambler with the possibility of being dragged into it, was no knowing what abyss of infamy.

He told himself again and again that he was entirely to blame for the whole affair. What a blind fool he had been and how plain it all seemed to him now. How often he allowed Mr. Hardy and Edith to go walking and driving for hours alone that summer, and what could a simple little schoolgirl, as Edith was then, know of this scoundrel's wiles?

Then Edith's strange manner afterwards, her dullness and her coldness towards himself and his mother, her plainly expressed wish against accompanying them to England, her coldness on their return [illegible]

CROCODILE CATCHING.

Superstitious Natives Kill the Creatures Only in Spirit of Revenge

It is a common sight in Borneo to see a large crocodile sunning himself on the muddy bank of a river. He takes no notice of the natives, even though they pass quite near him, so common indeed is the sight that the Dyaks themselves pay no heed to these dangerous reptiles, and yet it is no unusual thing in Borneo to hear of some human life being taken by a crocodile.

For months perhaps the crocodiles in a river live at peace with mankind and then suddenly one of these creatures will carry off some lad bathing in the river or even attack some one paddling along in his boat. I know of a Dyak girl who, when sitting and paddling at the stern of a canoe, was knocked over into the water and carried away by a crocodile and her companions could do nothing to save her.

There seems to be no reason why the crocodile should suddenly show a man-eating propensity in this way. The Dyaks account for it by curious [illegible]

Where He Was

On St. Patrick's Day in the Morning

By [illegible]

It was the evening before St. Patrick's day, 1785, in Ireland. The moon was at the full and shone with unusual brightness. Dennis O'Donohue, a young man of twenty-two, mounted on a black mare, was trotting on a road between Killarney and Tralee on his way to a ball at the latter place. Suddenly catching sight of a light some distance from the road, he drew rein and thrust his hand in under his waistcoat to pull his watch from his fob. It was not there, and he remembered that he had left it at home.

Now, what he wished his watch for was to note the time that he might decide whether to attempt something that popped into his head at seeing the light referred to. In the house where it shone lived Eileen Mavourneen, a young girl whom Dennis would have gladly wooed had he been permitted to do so. Dennis was inclined to be a trifle wild, and Eileen was warned by her parents to have nothing to do with him.

Nevertheless the young man was especially attractive to girls. He was tall and lithe, and a mass of light curls fell down over his shoulders. Tender hearted to a fault, it was suspected that for the benefit of others in distress he had trespassed on the law by taking a purse on the highway. The O'Grady, a rich landowner, had been stopped one night on the road, and later one of his tenants, a poor woman for whose eviction he had given orders, paid the rent in coins, one of which, a pocket piece, The O'Grady recognized as having been taken from him by the highwayman. The story got abroad that Dennis O'Donohue, sympathizing with the woman, had robbed the landlord [illegible]

[illegible]

"Have you a good horse?"

"No better in Ireland. I borrowed my friend Mike Shaughnessy's mare. She's not only won races for him, but has great endurance."

"Well, ride all night, and in the morning talk with some one you can get for a witness to testify that you were with him."

"On the morning of St. Patrick's day! Ah, Eileen you're a jewel!"

And so after a dozen kisses Dennis remounted the mare and away he went in the moonlight. Riding on to Tralee, which place he made in half an hour, he took a road leading northeastward to Limerick. It is just fifty miles from Tralee to Limerick. It would not do to ask for relays of horses, for this might give away the secret of his ride. It was 10 o'clock when he started. He rode thirty miles of the distance, rested his horse for two hours, then went on, reaching Limerick at 7 in the morning. But instead of going into the town he left it on his right and, crossing the river Shannon, struck out for Ennis, some twenty miles farther on. But he had no idea of using the mare to do this distance and, now that he was so far from home, concluded to leave her with a farmer and take a fresh mount. This he did and at 10 o'clock in the morning rode up to an inn in Ennis.

The bells were ringing for mass, and Dennis joined a throng going to the church. Seeing a priest going from his house to the church, Dennis joined him and said:

"Father, I desire to make a contribution on this blessed day of our patron saint, and I beg of you to receive it."

To this the priest agreed, and Dennis gave him his contribution.

"Now, father," said Dennis, "will you tell me the time?"

"There's a clock in the tower of the church beyond. You can see for yourself."

"I'm nearsighted. Will you use your own eyes for me?"

"It's 10 o'clock and 25 minutes."

"Are you sure?"

"I am."

"And I'm giving you 20 shillings for a contribution to the church at twenty-five minutes past 10 on the morning of St. Patrick's day, and don't you forget it."

"I'll not do that," said the priest.

RUNNING AMOK.

A Mania For Murder That Is Peculiar to Oriental Countries.

The expression "run amuck" is the Anglicized form of a term used in some parts of the orient to describe a form of homicidal mania, accompanied by a frenzied plunge in any and every direction. In the countries where the malady originated the word applied to it was "amok." The corrupted form of it is now applied in a score of ways—without much warrant.

In Malacca, Siam, Java and adjacent regions the mental state which causes amok is well defined and much dreaded. It is attributed almost invariably to excessive drinking of stimulants. The victim first turns morose, generally remaining in this state for several days. Then he is suddenly seized with the mania for slaughter and starts on his mad run with the first weapon he can reach.

Extra precautions against these mad ravages are taken in some of the more civilized places, especially Batavia. There the police are armed with what is called a catch fork. The instant the victim of amok starts on his mad dash he finds himself hooked by a minion of the law and held firmly the length of this odd human spear. He can harm himself, but that is the limit of his insane power.—Exchange.

AN ERRATIC VOLCANO.

Rose From the Sea, Formed an Island and Sank Again.

On June 10, 1810, the Sabrina, a British sloop of war, observed smoke arising from the sea near St. Michael, off the Azores, and made for it, believing that a naval engagement was in progress. Her crew found, however, that great tongues of flame were issuing along with the smoke and that they had cleared for action to fight a volcano.

Forty-eight hours later an island made its appearance, having risen from a depth of forty fathoms in that period, and in another day it was fifty-one feet above the surface, with a length of about three-quarters of a mile. By July 4 the Sabrina's people were able to land on this new shore, which was then 300 feet high, with a circumference of fully a mile, with a [illegible]

The By-Laws

The vote of the burgesses of the town of Vermilion is to be taken on Friday the 3rd of May (a week from Friday) from 10 a. m. until 7 p. m. on the three By-Laws which are published in the Standard for the third and last time this week. It is proposed to raise all told the sum of six thousand dollars by the issue of debentures viz., four thousand dollars for the purpose of acquiring and improving a public Park and Exhibition ground; one thousand dollars for the construction and building of sidewalks and one thousand dollars for the extending and adding to the electric Light and Power System of the Town.

The agricultural society were fortunate in purchasing for the insignificant sum of $1000.00 something like 2? acres of land from the C. N. R. directly opposite the Pilkie sub-division and between it and the track. The restrictions were that the ground must be used for all time for exhibition ground purposes. Not being in a financial position to undertake the required improvements to put these grounds into shape, the society has reached an amicable agreement with the town to handle the same hence the By-Law for $4000.00 [illegible] to fence the grounds and erect sheds and main building for agricultural purposes. It is hardly conceivable that any votes will be polled against this By-Law [illegible]

[illegible]

In reference to By-Law 12? very little comment is needed [illegible] of sidewalks we never have too many in a young town [illegible] appreciated [illegible]

Vermilion is going ahead by leaps and bounds and it will be a matter of a short period of time when the town's assessment will reach such figures that the current revenue will permit of the expenditure of several thousand dollars a year on permanent improvements without resorting to the issue of debentures for the purpose as is now found necessary.

Town Council

The regular monthly meeting of the town council was held Monday night in the council chamber. His Worship Mayor Rosebrough in the chair and all members of the Board in attendance.

The secy read the minutes of the last regular meeting and three special meetings, which with one or two corrections and additions were adopted.

A party named Richardson who had been stopping in the town for the past fortnight, a guest at the Vermilion hotel, waited upon the council. He stated that he had lost a roll of bills from his room recently amounting to $185.00. The matter had been reported to both the town and mounted police but no clue obtained as yet. He asked assistance from the town to start in his trade as furrier. With a partner he had come to Vermilion from Vancouver and intended to go north to buy buckskin from the Indians. The board promised to take his application into consideration.

After discussing the case in so far as they were aware, the board thought it unwise to establish a precedent by acceding to the request of Mr. MacDonald, but advised voluntary contribution as a relief to his position.

W. Telford was granted permission to move the portion of sidewalk along the west side of the Alberta Hotel while engaged in excavating and making extensions to the property, on condition that a footway was provided around same and proper protection afforded to pedestrians while work was progressing.

Contraventions of the early closing By-Law were reported to the council, the guilty parties had been warned by the Constable but persisted in violation of same. Secy was instructed to look into the By-Law and to have infringements dealt with accordingly.

Attention was drawn to the disgraceful and filthy condition of lanes in the business section and the general laxity or slowness in a general spring cleaning up. The secy was instructed to give orders to the town constable to sound a general warning and in the course of the next few days it is expected that the town will compare favorably with the latest spring hat from Paris.

The vexed question of signs overhanging the sidewalks, etc., [illegible] an animated discussion [illegible] that all such [illegible] removed.

Letters were received from Supt. Brown of the C. N. R. re [illegible] to electric light plant; also [illegible] Government Inspector re [illegible] of the town meters.

A letter was read from J. W. G. Morrison, Secy of the Board of Trade which among other matters asked that a grant of $300.00 for publicity purposes be made by the town to the Board for the work of 1912.

A motion was put and carried that the B. of T. be granted the sum of $[illegible] for 1912.

Another motion carried requesting that Norman Murray, barrister be asked to act as town solicitor, and that he be paid a retainer fee of $[illegible].

A very healthy bunch of accounts were gone through and the bulk ordered paid, after which the meeting adjourned.

TERRIBLE RESULT OF BLOOD POISON

After Three Operations Zam-Buk Was Tried and Proved Successful.

If people would only use Zam-Buk for chronic sores, blood-poison, etc. before permitting an operation, scores of limbs would be saved.

Mr Robt. Patterson of North Pelham, Welland Co., Ont., writes: "My daughter, Annie, had blood-poison in her finger. The doctor operated twice on the finger, but did not obtain the desired result, and a third operation was considered necessary.

"Three doctors were present at this operation, but after it had been performed the wound did not heal. Try as we would we could not get anything to close the wound.

"We at last tried Zam-Buk and it was really wonderful to watch how this balm healed the wound. Each day there was a marked improvement. First the wound in the palm of the hand closed, and then the finger which had been bad so long began to heal. The diseased flesh seemed to rise out of the wound and then drop off, and new healthy flesh formed from below, pushing off the diseased tissue. In a short time the wound was completely healed. Had we applied Zam-Buk at first we might have saved the finger.

"We had another proof of Zam-Buk's power in the case of my son. When two years old he had his hand badly mangled. One finger had to be amputated and it left a running sore for some months. This wound, also, was finally healed by Zam-Buk."

For chronic sores, blood-poison, ulcers, abscesses, scalp sores, piles, eruptions, inflamed patches, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases Zam-Buk is without equal. 50c box all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. The King Owns Sandringham.

The statement is again being published that Sandringham is the absolute property of Queen Alexandra. As a matter of fact, in the will of the late King Edward the whole estate was left solely to King George, his late Majesty merely stipulating that the Queen-Mother should have the entire use of it during her lifetime and adding a wish that in the future the place might become the dower house of the Queen Consort. King George is, however in no way bound by this, and is at liberty when the proper time arrives to dispose of it in any manner that seems best to him. In the meantime he has entire charge of the estate, pays all the outgoings and receives the income.—The Gentlewoman.

Terrible Itching Got Little Sleep

Mr. T. Williams, Winnipeg.

Until Cuticura Remedies Cured Him

Those who have suffered long and hopelessly from torturing skin eruptions will read with interest this letter from Mr. T. Williams, 118 Pacific Ave., Winnipeg (dated Jan. 14, 1911): "The Cuticura Remedies certainly did work finely and I am thankful that there is such a remedy and that I tried it. About three months ago a terrible itching commenced on my body. I could not understand it. It gradually grew worse and covered a large portion of my body. There was also a slight eruption of the skin, sort of a rash. I suffered greatly with the itching and at night time I had little sleep. I tried one or two remedies which did no good, and then I tried Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent. In about ten days I was completely cured."

For more than a generation the Cuticura Remedies have afforded the speediest and most economical treatment for itching, burning, scaly and bleeding skin and scalp humors, of young and old. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, with 32-p. book on the care of the skin and treatment of its affections, send a postal to the Potter Drug & Chem. The World Jewry

According to the latest statistics there are 11,483,276 Jews in the world 8,976,290 of whom are in Europe and 1,899,579 in America. The Russian empire contains by far the greater number of Hebrews, it having no fewer than 5,215,805. The United states follows second with 1,890,000, New York city alone having a Jewish population of 906,000. This veritable Jerusalem embraces one-thirteenth of the entire Jewish race, more Jews than ever before being gathered together in one city.

BABY THIN—HAD NO APPETITE

Mrs. Uldecie St. Georges, St. Mathias, Que., writes: "I am writing to say I am well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets. My baby was ill and I tried several remedies, but the result was discouraging. He became very thin, had no appetite, hardly slept at all and was extremely weak. I got Baby's Own Tablets and they soon set him right again, till at the age of eleven months he was able to walk and was a strong healthy child. I do not say I am well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets for little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Deserved to Die.

A Parisian gentleman the other day was cleaning his revolver when his wife called him to lunch, and laughingly said that he would have none unless he came at once. "If you are going to starve me I may as well shoot myself," he said, putting the revolver barrel to his ear. "Don't be so silly," cried his wife. "The thing might be loaded." When the unsuspecting joker pulled the trigger the revolver discharged and the victim was instantly killed.

China's Stone Libraries.

There is a public library of stone in Peking. It is a library of the Kuo Tze Chien or School of the Sons of the Empire, an ancient university that existed a thousand years before the Christian era. This library is of stone. On 182 tablets of stone composing it are carved all of the Thirteen Classics, the summary and essence of all Chinese culture.

In the imperial lecture hall of this Kuo Tze Chien the Emperor would go once a year to hear a discourse on the responsibilities and duties of his office and would receive reproof and exhortation from the heads of the institution.

The stone library in Peking is only a copy of that in Shi An Fu in Shensi which was the capital of the empire.

QUEBEC FARMER TELLS GOOD NEWS

FOUND COMPLETE CURE FOR CRAMPS AND KIDNEY DISEASE.

Suffered For Six Years, But Found Health and New Life in Dodd's Kidney Pills—Warm Praise For Old Reliable Remedy.

Marie East, Bona venture Co., Quebec.—(Special)—Mr. Peter Bernard, a prosperous young farmer living near here, is spreading the good news that he has found a complete cure for his kidney troubles.

"I suffered for six years from cramps in the muscles and kidney disease," Mr. Bernard says, "but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely. Yes, I am feeling so well that I want other sufferers to know just how easy it is to be cured."

It is a good old saying that it is easy to do anything if you just know how. And Mr. Bernard and hundreds of others are telling you just how to cure kidney disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure it. And as kidney disease is the direct cause of rheumatism, lumbago, Bright's disease, heart disease, pain in the back and urinary troubles, Dodd's Kidney Pills cure them by removing the cause. If you haven't used Dodd's Kidney Pills yourself ask your neighbors about them.

The Plowman.

Starting the plow in the side-hill stubble,
Or down in the meadow's sod,
Where the swollen waters of the brooklet bubble,
And the willows wave and nod;
Turning so smoothly the cleancut furrows,
Patiently, one by one,
The plowman follows his sturdy team,
Till his daily task is done.

Long-Lived Musicians.

A physician with a weakness for statistics has been studying (says the Family Doctor) the effect of wind instruments on the life of musicians. The average life of the wind instrument artist is 63, that of others is 62. Thirty-four per cent. of the former category attain 70 years. Performers on the flute reach on the average the age of 61, while the hautbois executant lives two years longer. Buglers go two years better and the clarionet players live till he is 65. He of the cornet only fails the allotted span by one year. The ophicleide artist beats them all. His time of life is from 75 to 80.

Worms That Eat Iron

A feasible explanation of the disease which attacks old metal coins is suggested by the recent discovery of some Italian engineers of a microbe which feeds on iron. The discovery was made through the frequency with which railway accidents occurred in one particular portion of the railroad in a certain district.

An examination of the rails was made and the presence of severe corrosion was revealed. A rail was taken up and broken. It was then found to be hollow and further examination showed the presence of a thin grey threadlike worm about a third of an inch in length. A careful examination was made of the habits and appearance of this worm. Upon its head it carried two little glands filled with a corrosive secretion, which it ejected every few minutes on to the iron. The ejection had the property of rendering the iron soft and spongy when the worm at once proceeded to devour it.—The Chicago Tribune.

FARMING AND GRIT

Going Back to the Soil Isn't All Roses And Hammocks.

Making a living on a farm does not consist solely in gathering in stone rolling in blossoming clover and picking pears. There is a crop of blisters, backaches, muddy boots, washouts, bugs and droughts. One never makes a change in life without giving up some things he likes and taking some he does not like. He must strike a balance, go where he finds the greater good and bear with grit and patience the unpleasant part.

The city man who has not pluck should stay in the shop or at his desk, for on the farm he will find a life, also environment that will hit him with appalling regularity on every soft spot he owns. He will miss the street cars, electric lights, vaudeville, people. He may resent slowness, physical tiredness, inconvenience, stillness. Getting back to the land is profitable pecuniarily and spiritually only to those who are more for independence than for steam heat and granitoid walks, or think more of health than of musical comedy, or would rather accumulate a competence for their old age than have the privilege of street cars and janitor.

The successful farmer must be willing to work until his muscles get sore and then work until they get strong, to learn of simple folk and be neighborly with people who have lived in a different way. [illegible] good time and harvest. Also he must be able to forget the amusements he has left behind and the annoyances he has found until the slow content of country life gets hold of him and the sweet spirit of the open places envelopes him. Then will he have found a home and the land will have found one more man to feed the nations.—Exchange.

The Dutch at Church.

Men still wear their hats in church in many parts of Holland. Moreover smoking in church is not considered irreverent by the Dutch when service is not in progress and the ministers themselves indulge in this practice.

Altogether, according to a recent visitor, "Dutch Protestantism is a very comfortable form of religion. You keep your hat on in church and that saves you many a cold. You take [illegible] and in [illegible] natural [illegible] in a shopper you have a [illegible] maid in a white cap and apron and nothing is more cleanly and charming than a Dutch servant maid to show you to your seat or to offer you a chair. You have nice drab pews of painted deal all around you and a cheerful two-decker pulpit above."—London Chronicle.

The Acquisition of Riches

To get rich at all hazards and [illegible] get rich as [illegible] possible seems to be the object to which most men are bending their energies nowadays. Even [illegible]

The humble man out yonder who is working in the ditch

If it were not so many a man who is now old [illegible] upon the [illegible] of his fellows would be compelled to seek other employment. The Chief Post Office Inspector of the City of New York reports that last year "Members of the Suckers' List" lost seventy-seven millions of dollars in trusting in the get-rich-quick schemes, and it is safe to say that all the "suckers" were not caught on the other side of the line. The man who goes through life taking a flyer at this and that under the impression that he will some day strike it rich is in 999 times out of 1000 only wasting his money and making rapid preparation for an old age of humiliation and penury. The sooner he awakens to the fact [illegible] the better [illegible]

[illegible]

The Wrong Answer.

Junior officers of the army and navy will do well to take the heart the lesson in the story told in Col. Callwell's reminiscences in Blackwood's Magazine. An irascible old admiral had apologized to a junior officer for his harshness. The subaltern, wishing to appear magnanimous, replied "Oh, that's all right, sir; I really did not mind what you said a bit." "D—you, sir," thundered the admiral. "What do you mean by that? You don't mind what I say a bit, don't you?" whereupon the young officer got a worse dressing over than ever.—Army and Navy Journal.

After Many Years.

"Persistence will win any sort of a career, even matrimonial," is the conviction of Wilton Lackaye, and he illustrates it with the following story:

"She preferred the upper berth in the Pullman and so he took the lower. After the curtains had been drawn and all was quiet in the car those near the couple heard the woman lean over and whisper to her husband.

Capitalists To Invest Wealth At Vermilion

Will Interest Foreign Money In Project - The Count de Topor and James Outram Arrive at Vermilion

(Edmonton Journal)

Proof of the almost universal fame of the Edmonton district is hardly required these latter days, but "lest we forget" still another testimony to the European reputation enjoyed by the capital city is now forthcoming. Staying at the King George and on their way to Vermilion are Count de Topor and James Outram, the principals of the Vermilion Development company.

In the expressive words of the count, whose title is an Austrian one, although he has lived to all rights saturated with English, they "have had the time of their lives" since they arrived in Canada. Feted in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Winnipeg and the other cities along the route of the transcontinental trip, they yet could not be lured from their sworn allegiance to the west.

The company that they represent has large holdings, chiefly in the townsite of VERMILION, although they are also interested in properties and farm lands in the environing district. The name of the corporation is no mere ornamental label that is really a misnomer, for they are actually engaged in an active policy of development in the town which has won favorable notice. A considerable amount of building and general construction work will be carried out by the company [illegible] ready, although the principals only left Liverpool about a month ago, arranged for [illegible] frontage.

Mr. Outram [illegible] statement [illegible] been inundated with applications for office accommodation as soon as ever the structure is completed. In addition to business premises they are also to erect houses, either for sale or to rent.

Asked what induced him to forsake England, the land of his adoption, to come to this outpost of empire, Count de Topor said laughingly [illegible] the English government drove us to it. They are demanding one-and-eightpence in the pound on our incomes now, you know, and the other taxation is becoming equally exorbitant. So I decided to shift my capital to a country where such a confiscatory policy is not followed, and here we are."

The count is already by way of being as ardent a Canadian as he was so lately an Englishman. "I am more than grateful for the hospitality that Canada has extended to me," he said, "what is the most remarkable thing about the country to a man who has just come fresh from the stiffer and more stilted conditions of society that prevail on the other side of the 'pond'. One other thing I was pleased to note: you are getting a fine class of immigrants here, what I might term a vital class.

At this juncture Mr. Outram, who is, by the way, a great mountain climber and an honorary member of the Alpine Club, put in the remark that [illegible] the VERMILION DISTRICT [illegible]

THE CHINESE HOME

Curious Details of Oriental Wall-Within-Wall Life.

It is difficult for the Occidental mind to picture the wall-within-wall life of a Chinese home. Down a narrow lane one passes between two walls, behind which may be hovels or palaces, there is no telling which, since the one-storey roofs beyond are [illegible]

One pulls a string at a gateway, the address of some family of high degree. A servant appears, leads through another gateway, a flowery courtyard, a passageway, perhaps another courtyard, a little room or two, and finally into a reception room, with its carved wood wainscoting and furniture, its porcelains and jades and bronzes, its blue-and-green-and-gold ceiling and its window pattern of paper panes.

Here the hostess appears, offers her occidental guest tea or champagne, or both with cakes and candied fruit or lotus buds. Then she may lead one through other courtyards, all with the usual one-storey rooms around them, and into her secluded garden of rocks and pools, of pretty paths and bridges, of clustering trees and flowers.

In such a palace as this each courtyard, with its surrounding rooms, may be the special home of one of the sons and his wife and children, but somewhere in the maze of walls, under one of the low, tiled roofs, is the common dining room, with the kitchen beyond. Here the men of the family eat together twice a day, and afterward the women and children. And somewhere also there is a central family hall, with the ancestral tablets, which must have their tribute of incense at proper seasons. These are held in such reverence that no foot may pass above them and therefore two-storey dwellings are unknown in regions uncontaminated by foreign influence.—The Century.

Rates For 1912 Are Struck

Policy of Sinking Wells Abandoned By the Council

A special meeting of the Council was held Monday night to set the rate for the current year and to take up several other matters which had come up since the regular meeting of the previous week.

The rates for 1912 were struck as follows:—

Debenture rate	1.. mills
School rate	15 " "
General rate	20 " "

The assessment as is known is on the single tax system or on land only.

The license for the Park Theatre moving picture show was placed at $25.00 a year.

A petition was again presented from a number of ratepayers in the southeast portion of the town asking for a well. A motion was put and carried that the town council will not consider sinking any more wells in town and that notice of same be published in the Standard.

The meeting then adjourned.

NOTICE

On and after the expiration of 30 clear days from the date of this notice, that is, on and after the 27th of May, 1912 the available quarter sections in the following townships will be open for entry by the first eligible applicants.

Suicide by Starvation

In a tepee across the river from Usk, Wash., Felicite, oldest Indian in the Kalispell valley, passed away—starved to death, as did the aged and infirm in the time of her fathers.

All her life Felicite lived on the banks of the Pend d'Oreille. From the monster falls at Albany to the roaring deathtrap in Box canyon, she knew every fact and every whim of the great river. Before the white man ever saw it she caught fish in the seething rapids and paddled her canoe on its broad surface.

Felicite had been sick for years, but always hoped that some time she would recover and do her share of the ... of the ...

When the knowledge came that she was of no use any longer and had become a drag upon her people, she ... her ragged blanket ... and lay down to die. Not an ounce of food would she touch and she took only enough water to be spared the delirium of thirst.

For two weeks she refused nourishment. Her skin wrinkled like parchment and she died little more than a frame of bones.

The last sacred rites of the tribe were administered and her body lies on the bank of the river that had always been her friend.

Love's Labor Lost.

Rev. John Brown, father of the well beloved Dr. John Brown who wrote those little classics "Rab and Marjorie Fleming," was in the habit, on festive occasions, of proposing a certain young lady as his toast.

Noticing that he had abruptly abandoned the practice, a curious person asked him the reason.

"Because," he said sadly, "I have toasted her for sixteen years without being able to make her brown, and so I have resolved to toast her no longer."—Youth's Companion.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

Willing to Accommodate

A Justice got a jolt the other day, and he is telling the story of it yet. He said that late one afternoon he gave a case to a jury and that it was 4.30 o'clock the following morning before the jury agreed upon a verdict.

"I waited for the verdict," said the justice, "and after it was returned I told the jurors that as it was possible most of them were married men, if they desired I would give to each a certificate that he had been detained until 4.30 o'clock in the morning on jury service.

"The jurors consulted together for a few minutes," continued the justice, "and then the foreman arose and said: 'We thank you for your consideration and appreciate the kindness of your offer and desire to say that if your Honor needs a certificate to the effect that you were detained until 4.30 o'clock in the morning waiting for our verdict we will gladly so certify.'"

The justice hastily declined this kind offer with thanks, and just as hastily adjourned court.

A Prime Dressing for Wounds.—In some factories and workshops carbolic acid is kept for use in cauterizing wounds and cuts sustained by the workmen. Far better to keep on hand a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It is just as quick in action and does not sear the skin or burn the flesh. There is no other Oil that has its curative qualities.

"Talk about long playing," said the Yankee to Pat. "Why, your countrymen wouldn't get a look in with us. I know a fellow citizen who played 'Beautiful Stars and Stripes' on the piano for several hours."

"Arrah, close yer mouth," said Pat. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself to be talking about nothing. Sure I know an Irishman that played 'Ireland Forever' on a flute."

MOTHERS RECOMMEND BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Baby's Own Tablets are recommended by thousands of thankful mothers who have used them for their little ones and have found them a safe and sure cure for constipation, indigestion, worms, simple fevers and all stomach and bowel troubles. Concerning them Mrs. Auguste Hiler, St. Damase, Que., writes: "Please send me another box of Baby's Own Tablets. I have already used them and have found them an excellent remedy for little ones. I would strongly recommend them to all mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A certain member of a Boston club habitually evinces such a frigid demeanor that many of his acquaintances have facetiously averred that "it gives one a cold to shake hands with him."

One evening a group at the club were discussing the disposition of the said member, when a newcomer ventured this:

"Why, gentlemen, I understand that it is the custom in this club when that chap attends a dinner here to ice the claret in order that it may be at the same temperature as the dining room."—Harper's Magazine.

The Censorship in Russia.

It is pleasant to learn—the story is current in many a Russian household—that the cook books which had been condemned because a recipe contained the words "perfect freedom," words which were used in reference to some culinary process, have escaped further mutilation and have been selling without hindrance. On the other hand, the list of books which continue to be suppressed is long and varied.—London Times.

ONE SINGLE PILL GAVE GREAT RELIEF

FOUR BOXES CURED HIM

Plessisville, Que.

"I suffered from Kidney Trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions without permanent relief, my case being chronic. After seeing about Gin Pills, and as it is a well known fact that Juniper without alcohol is excellent for the Kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief. I have now taken almost four boxes of Gin Pills and find myself completely cured. No more bad humor—increase in weight—clear eyes—fresh color—more strength and vigor. This is what Gin Pills have done for me."

H. POWIS HERBERT.

Gin Pills will do the same for you—if you have any trouble with your Kidneys or Bladder—or if you suffer with Pain in the Back or Rheumatism. Try them before you buy them. Write National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Dept. N.U. Toronto for free sample. Then get the regular size boxes at your dealer's—50c. a box, 6 for $2.50.

Cited an Exception.

A religious worker, while visiting a western town, gave a "Talk to men," during the course of which he expressed his conviction that no young man should visit any place to which he would not feel justified in taking his own sister.

"Is there any young man present who thinks one may safely disregard this rule?" asked the speaker.

Whereupon a youth in the rear of the hall rose and shouted in stentorian tone:

"Yes, sir, I do."

"And what, sir," demanded the angry and surprised speaker, "is the place which you yourself would think of visiting to which one could not take your sister?"

The Farmer's Wife.

Associating and convening and deliberating has extended to nearly every conceivable human condition. Just recently it has extended to the next-to-oldest human condition. The First International Congress of Farm Women was held in Colorado Springs and was attended by delegates who were actually farm wives, from foreign countries as well as the United States.

We hear and speak a great deal about the farmer. We call him the foundation stone of all industries, the original creator of wealth and the backbone of the country—especially when we wish him to vote for us or buy another threshing machine, but the truth is, with all his merits, he is second fiddle to his wife. If there is any one class that this country should get down on its knees to it is the farm women. Whatever farm men have done, the women have done and more also. They haven't been heard from very much heretofore. It is significant that the president of this almost newest of associations is from Canada and the vice-president is from Oklahoma.—The Saturday Evening Post, Philadelphia, commenting upon the International Congress of Farm Women, which holds its second annual session at Lethbridge, Alberta, October 21-26 next.

As Good as His Word.

After having been buried for seven years in the desert, the body of a German trooper named Rogge has been found by a flying patrol in a shifting sand dune near Kolmanskop, German South-West Africa. The unfortunate trooper had been sent to convey the mails from Luderitzbucht to some remote inland stations. He never arrived.

His route lay via the Ukama Springs, a small oasis, and from notes found in a pocketbook on the body it appears that he lost his bearings, owing to desert mirages, and failed to make the Ukama Springs. He wandered about aimlessly for days, without finding his way.

"Thinking" Horses Now

"Clever Hans," the German calculating horse of 1909, and "Don," the talking dog of 1913, have two promising successors in Elberfeld, Central Prussia, in the form of a pair of "thinking" horses, Arabian by birth, and named Zarif and Muhamed. They are the property and pupils of a teacher named Karl Krall. Certain German journalists who have examined Zarif and Muhamed declare that the animals can read and understand both German and French, when spoken or written, and can perform prodigious feats in arithmetic. Answers to questions in subtraction, addition, multiplication and division are stamped out by their forefeet, with accuracy and quickness.

COLD CAUSED SERIOUS TROUBLE

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS BROUGHT THE CURE

Mr. Hugh Martin, Suffering From Kidney Disease for Two Years, Tells How he Got Back His Health.

St. Hippolyte de Kilkenny, Lake L'Achigan, Terrebonne Co., Que. (Special)—Again the people of this neighborhood are talking of a complete cure of kidney disease. Mr. Hugh Martin, Jr., a well-known young farmer, is the person cured, and he gives all the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My trouble was caused by a cold," Mr. Martin says, in an interview, "and I suffered for two years. My head would ache and I had pains in the back as well. I felt heavy and sleepy after meals. I was often dizzy, my memory was failing and I found it difficult to collect my thoughts."

The Old Stand

THE SUPPLANTER

A Modern Romance

By WILMOT KAYE

Prologue.

The tropical sun kissed relentlessly on the white beach huts, in which David Clay and Stephen Grant lay smoking their pipes of peace. It was another day of October, Nigeria in particular was not unique, but this day seemed to intensify the oppressiveness. They were said to the weakness of carelessness, and these former whites were undoubtedly disobeying their own laws.

Stephen Grant remarked: "Dave, you're a blooming fool to be out in the sun at this time of the year, and the temperature of 100 you are, as he stretched himself out on the sand.

"I don't think I should have—I'm not forgetful today!" said Clay, "I'm not a fool to be out in the sun."

"Right man. He pursued and was alone with consideration as he took up his bottle from which he had taken an occasional drink. Then he found other bottle, and poured a little of the contents into his mouth.

Then he said softly, as he threw a number to his lips:

"Dave, you're a fool!" The latter remark was not noticed, but he knew it was all a bit true. He had denied himself of the many comforts of home for her sake, and now she was gone. Not another word was spoken for a long time.

Clay sighed down and heaved a deep sigh of delight.

"That's good," he said with an attempt to smack his lips, but they almost crushed with parchedness.

Aren't you going to have one" he asked quickly.

"No, old chap I'm off out, as soon as the sun goes down a bit I am thirty considered that I have spotted the old. By the bye I've a few grains left I think you'd better have one. Grant remarked as he took a small bottle from his pocket, which he had taken about half a dozen five-grain tablets of quinine.

"Dry up. I'm not any fonder of your beastly stuff, and I've taken enough to have created this fool of a head.

A few days before, on their journey up country one of their boys had dropped a small tin box containing quinine, and he moved nervously, as though they had gone back to search, but had not succeeded in finding it. Moreover, they had sent a runner back to the nearest station to obtain some more supply, but they could not hope that he would return with it for fully a week.

Grant looked himself round the hut, and then attended to his friend. He made him sit upright, and when he had induced him to do such, he piled every available blanket on to him. Then he watched the "boy" mix a medicine for him after which he lay down against upon the drinking thunderstorm.

"That'll make you sweat," he said obscurely. "Try and sleep. I'm going out now. So long, old chap."

With this the fellow pottered in the old manner, and he moved nervously. His limbs wrestling with pain. The "boy" stood near, and every now and then would replace a blanket that had been disturbed by his master's movements.

Two or three hours passed, and the silence was intense, only broken by his quick breathing, and the cry of a bird in the bush. When Grant came back he sat down next to the bedside, and slid his hand on his friend's forehead.

"Dry up, you fool," he said tenderly. "Don't bother to go for a doctor," he said hurriedly.

NEW STRENGTH IN THE SPRING

Nature Needs Aid in Making New Health-Giving Blood

In the spring the system needs a tonic. To be healthy you must have new blood just as the trees must have new sap to renew their vitality. Nature demands it, and without this new blood you will feel weak and languid. You may have twinges of rheumatism or the sharp, stabbing pains of neuralgia. Often there are disfiguring pimples or eruptions on the skin. In other cases there is merely a feeling of tiredness and a variable appetite. Any of these are signs that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has lessened [illegible]

[illegible]

Then a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. To my surprise I soon noticed my appetite improving and [illegible] I improved rapidly until I was enjoying the best of health and I have not been troubled with weakness of any kind since.

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or can be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Prearranged Accidents.

Eighteen months' imprisonment, with hard labor, was the sentence recently given to a man in London thirty-seven years old, who in three years has "faked" about two hundred accidents, for which he was paid various amounts, mostly by shopkeepers, rather than fight the cases in court. He would fall down and then make claim to have been injured through the negligence of the persons whom he made his victims. Had the cases come into court he would have been detected. His deception was favored by a malformed wrist, which he represented as due to the accident. A confederate accompanied him, [illegible] of each accident with the particulars of the name and address of those from whom the money was to be obtained. Some years ago a man in this city received damages after falling through an open grating [illegible] a sidewalk and breaking an arm. It was strongly suspected that [illegible] he had [illegible] was then discovered to be a fraud and was punished.

BISCUITS MUST BE FRESH TO BE PALATABLE

MOONEY'S BISCUITS ARE THE FRESH BISCUITS

Fresh enough to take the place of the bread and biscuits you bake yourself. Because the MOONEY system is so perfect that every biscuit is shipped the same day it leaves the oven.

The big Winnipeg factory is so close that your grocer gets MOONEY'S in a few hours—no long haul—no deterioration.

Besides the demand for MOONEY'S—the popular biscuit—is so great that his stock is always changing.

MOONEY'S never grow stale on the grocers' shelves. That's one reason why

ZAM-BUK IN THE HOME

Read How Useful It Proved in These Widely Different Cases

Zam-Buk's strongest point is its effectiveness in all kinds of skin diseases and injuries. Just note how excellent these persons proved it in widely different directions.

Sore Heel.—Mrs. C. A. Campbell, of Powassan, Ont., writes: "One of my heels was very badly blistered by a pair of new shoes, and the poisonous dye from my stocking got into it, and made a bad sore. For a week I could not put on a shoe, and suffered great pain. I applied Zam-Buk, and in a few days it drew the poison out and healed the wound."

Bad Cut.—Mrs. J. Virgint, of Onondaga, Ont., writes: "Zam-Buk healed a bad cut which I sustained. I was hurrying across my yard one day when I slipped and fell heavily, my knee striking a sharp stone. At the moment I did not realize how badly I was hurt, but I found I had a bad cut about two inches long, very jagged and very deep. We bathed the cut and applied Zam-Buk. This stopped the smarting very quickly, and in a few days it had healed the wound completely. For cuts and bruises Zam-Buk is a splendid remedy."

Eczema Cured.—Mrs. Antoine Arsenault, of Maximeville, P.E.I., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to any person suffering from eczema. I had this disease and was under doctors' treatment for two years, without any good result. I then tried Zam-Buk and in the end it cured me."

Zam-Buk is just as good for piles, blood-poison, festering sores, pimples, eruptions, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box all druggists and stores, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Try Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

The Real Thing.

A great painter was asked by his little son:

"Father, what is a connoisseur?"

"Well, my son," the father answered, "did you notice that tall, white-haired gentleman at my studio tea yesterday?"

"The one with the sable-lined overcoat, father?" "Oh, yes, I noticed him."

"Well, my son, he is a connoisseur."

"But how do you know he is a connoisseur, father?"

"By his actions, my son."

"But, father, he acted like every one else at the tea, didn't he?"

"Certainly not, my boy! Certainly not. The others drank my Russian tea, ate my [illegible] sandwiches and took leave. But he—he bought a picture."

A Thought for Mother's Day
Before It Is Too Late

If you have a grey-haired Mother
In the old home far away,
Sit you down and write the letter
You put off from day to day
Don't wait until her weary steps
Reach heaven's pearly gate.
But show her that you think of her
Before it is too late.

If you have a tender message,
Or a loving word to say,
Don't wait till you forget it,
But whisper it today.
Who knows what bitter memories
May haunt you if you wait?
So make your loved one happy
Before it is too late.

The tender word unspoken,
The letters never sent,
The long forgotten messages,
The wealth of love unspent;
For these some hearts are breaking,
For these some loved ones wait;
Show them that you care for them
Before it is too late.

AN ODD MEETING

With One Who Had Been in a Different Position

By MILDRED LOUISE [illegible]

The social world is a boiling pot. That which is under goes to the top and after whirling about awhile sinks again. The loss of fortune among the aristocrats of Europe produces disastrous effects on the losers. There is little or no hope of its recovery, and they must drop to a lower scale. They can't bear to live among people who have considered them far better than themselves.

There is now an American colony in every capital in Europe, and those who are financially able to entertain and be entertained have an easier entree to the one main social circle presided over by royalty than any other nationality, for the reason that since we have no titles in America no rank is expected of us. Some years ago a wealthy American gentleman named Tracy spent a month in Rome. His wife and daughter, Henrietta, had always [illegible] in the [illegible] circles of America, and, having friends in the

HE WAS LUIGI BRANDINI.

Eternal City to introduce them, they soon found themselves in the swim [illegible]

Henrietta Tracy was much sought after by Italians, who would have been glad to marry a beautiful American with a fortune. Her only object in accepting their attentions was a natural desire to see the world in Rome. One young man she fancied, but he was supposed to be perfectly independent financially and did not seem inclined to join the throng of her suitors.

But the lady was not sure that indifference was the cause of his standing aloof, though she did not know. There are young men who are either too proud to enter into a competition for the hand of a girl pursued by fortune hunters or too sensitive to pay attention to such. But this young man, Luigi Brandini, was not a pauper and so [illegible] though his estate was said to be involved in a law suit of many years' [illegible]

Nevertheless Brandini showed Miss Tracy every attention he could without indicating that he was likely to become a suitor. The last time she saw him at a social function was a ball given at the Quirinal palace, where he was her partner more than once during the evening. He seemed gloomy, and Miss Tracy could not help wondering [illegible] departure, which was to take place the next day, had anything to do with his depression. When she was leaving the palace the young man bid her goodnight and goodby with a faraway look in his eye that boded some impending calamity.

That was the last the Tracys saw of Rome for some time. From there they went to Berlin, thence to London and finally sailed from England to America.

Two years passed. One day Miss Tracy entered a restaurant in an American city with a party of friends for luncheon. When they were seated a waiter advanced with a napkin on his arm to serve them. Looking up at him Miss Tracy met his eye. The hot blood rushed to his cheeks and an expression of mingled pain and mortification showed itself in every feature of his face. The man recognized her as she recognized him. He was Luigi Brandini.

He turned and went away, and she saw him no more. Presently a[illegible] waiter came and took the party's orders. It is needless to say that the luncheon had been spoiled for Miss Tracy. The face of one she had last met as a guest in the Quirinal palace in Rome changed to a waiter in an American restaurant was appalling.

Being ignorant of what had caused this downward course in the social scale on the part of Brandini, [illegible] wrote a friend who made Rome her residence and who had recently come to America for a visit. In reply she was informed that soon after her departure from Italy an important suit [illegible] many years' standing between Luigi Brandini and a cousin had been decided in the court of last appeal against Brandini and made him a pauper. He had disappeared from Rome, and no one knew where he had gone. Rumor had it that he had enlisted in the French foreign legion; that he had committed suicide; that a bandit who was terrorizing a province in Sicily under the name of Catana was Brandini. For awhile these wild rumors went from mouth to mouth; then the poor man was forgotten by the social world as completely as if an ocean had closed over him.

Miss Tracy read the information imparted, and her sympathies went out all the more to her former acquaintance, especially at learning that his fall was not attended with disgrace. It was hard for her to understand that helplessness under which gentlemen of Europe who were not born to work experience when they are thrown out upon the world. It [illegible] not exist—certainly not to so great an ext[illegible] America.

What could she do for Brandini? Nothing. The pride which had caused him to flee from such help as he might have received from his friends would prevent his accepting assistance from a woman he had known in that exclusive circle. One of the unseen abysses that beset the way of those who tread roseate paths had been suddenly exposed to her vision.

The only effort Miss Tracy felt herself in a position to make in Brandini's behalf was to inform her father of her meeting with the Italian with a view to learning if anything could be done for him. Mr. Tracy was disposed to help one who had contributed to his and his daughter's pleasure in a foreign land. He went to the restaurant where Henrietta had seen Brandini, described him to the proprietor and was told that a man answering that description had left his service on the day Miss Tracy had met Brandini. The proprietor did not know where he had gone. That ended the matter for the time being and possibly forever.

But Fate, who delights in arranging all sorts of complications for us, was working the matter in his own peculiar fashion. Many a man's career has been determined by some slight incident such as missing a train, falling into a river or running up against some one turning a corner. In this case the agent through which fate worked was a newspaper. Some eighteen months after Miss Tracy's meeting with Brandini in a restaurant she advertised for a chauffeur. Receiving several replies, she appointed a day and an hour when the applicants for the position might present themselves for inspection. When she entered the room where they were assembled and cast her eye over them whom should she see among the number but Luigi Brandini. His mortification was apparent in his scarlet face. He made a movement to retire, but changed his mind. It was too late.

Miss Tracy questioned the men one after another, dismissing them as soon as examined until she came to Brandini. The two stood alone together, Brandini looking as if he would like to escape. Miss Tracy looked as if she would like to prevent him from doing so.

For a moment she hesitated whether to speak to him as a former friend or as an applicant for the position of chauffeur. She decided on the latter [illegible]

"[illegible] name?" she asked.

"Giovanni Ricadonna."

"How much experience have you had in running automobiles?"

"None whatever, signora. I am [illegible] I would not suit you. I should not have answered your advertisement."

"Nevertheless I like your appearance and think that, after a little practice, you will be able to drive my auto very well. You are engaged."

"Pardon me, signora. I am quite sure I should not be able to"— He stopped, bowed his head and fixed his eyes on the floor.

"Signor Brandini," said the lady, "you are among friends."

[illegible] was no reply to this. He did not even raise his eyes.

"You Romans," she continued, "were very kind to us when we were in Italy. My father, my mother and I were indebted to you among others for a very pleasant sojourn in your Italian capital. Perhaps my father may be able to help you out of this quagmire into which you have fallen."

He raised his eyes to hers.

"I wish you would consult him in reference to your affairs. He would consider it a favor if you would permit him through you to return some of the favors received from your countrymen while we were in Rome."

"There is nothing he can do for me, signora."

"You mean that your ancestral pride will not permit you to accept anything at his hands. In that you are wrong. Indeed, you are absurd. You need some one to throw a switch to turn the rails of fate and place you on the main track."

"Signora, you are apt at condensing the expression of ideas."

"Give me your address."

He acceded to her request, and she secured a promise from him to answer any communication that might be sent to him. Then she permitted him to depart.

That was some years ago. Now Luigi Brandini is a member of the Italian parliament, and his wife, formerly Miss Tracy, is prominent in Roman social life and, possessing a [illegible], can afford certain important charities. The Romans have often tried to learn where Brandini passed those years that he was lost to Rome, but have never succeeded. Of all concerned the Tracy family are the only ones who know that the legislator once swung a napkin in an American restaurant.

EASTER FINERY.

Spring Parasol in New Tan Shade.

IN SHADES OF TAN AND BROWN.

Natural shantung was used for the cover of this new parasol for use with Easter tailored costumes of mohair or worsted mixture. The parasol has a carved imitation ivory stick and a hemstitched border of cream colored taffeta. Such sunshades are going to be very popular this spring.

She Never Looks Tired.

Kitty Gordon, the actress, has been called "the woman who never looks tired."

To explain her secret, "Just take a [illegible] every two or three weeks," she advises with a prankish little smile playing about her mouth, as though she [illegible] well aware of the reply she would receive. But before one has an opportunity to answer she adds quickly: "Yet it's not nearly so difficult as it sounds. By a vacation I mean a whole day's rest—luxurious rest. Just go away alone where you don't see a soul you know and take a sunny, warm room where you can bask. If you can afford it, take along heaps of gorgeous, sweet colored flowers. If you cannot, then a bit of your favorite perfume and one or two flowers. But flowers you must have. There is nothing in all the world so restful or so wonderfully soothing. Then read your favorite poems, browse in them, play, sing. Forget you ever had a worry. If your clothes hamper you cast them off and dress in a single little robe de nuit. Simply relax every strained little muscle in your face and body.

"If you are fortunate enough, call in several little folks; be young again with them. When they want you to hide under a couch, hide under it even if you have to tip it over. It will take years from your age.

"I never fail to take this 'rest' cure (sun' cure) every other Sunday. My stage work won't allow me to take them oftener. And, oddly, I never go into the country for my rest. I go to the city. There is too much temptation to go out of doors and romp in the country, and the result is that you don't allow yourself the delightful opportunity to relax that you desire. Then, too, in the city, away up in your apartment, you are isolated if you desire to be. You have but to leave word with the bellboy that you are [illegible] and not a soul knows otherwise. In the country every one knows when or you are in or out."

Coiffure For the Elderly Woman.

After sixty the arrangement and care of the hair are of prime importance, and as the face fades the hair should be made as beautiful as is possible.

VISIONS OF GHOSTS.

They Seem to Come to About One Person in Every Ten.

The modern theory of ghosts insists that invariably, when they are real ghosts and not the spurious product of credulity and deception, they are distinctly subjective in character and exist only by virtue of conditions permitting their creation in the mind of the person or persons seeing them. In other words, a real ghost is never an objective phenomenon, like a tree or a house. As a psychologist would say, it is always "a percept having no basis in external reality." Less learnedly, it is always a case of "seeing things where they ain't." That is to say, it is a hallucination.

It has been conclusively demonstrated that one person out of every ten has experienced at least one hallucination at some time in his or her life.

Proof of this results chiefly from a remarkable census of hallucinations originated more than twenty years ago at the international congress of psychology and simultaneously carried on—principally by members of the Psychical Research—in the United States, England, France, Germany and other countries. To thousands of persons the question was put, "Have you ever, when believing yourself to be completely awake, had a vivid impression of seeing or being touched by a living being or inanimate object or of hearing a voice, which impression, so far as you could discover, was not due to any external physical cause?" Of the 27,329 replies received to this question no fewer than 3,271 were in the affirmative.—Hampton's Magazine.

WEATHER SIGNS.

Some Rules That Help In Reading the Clouds and Winds.

The following formula of weather signs was adopted by the Farmers' club of the American Institute some years ago, and it has been found to give satisfaction:

When the temperature falls suddenly there is a storm forming south of you. When the temperature rises suddenly there is a storm forming north of you. The wind always blows from a region of fair weather toward a point where a storm is forming.

Cirrus clouds always move from a region where a storm is in progress to one of fair weather. Cumulus clouds always come from a region where a storm is forming. When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from the north or northeast, no matter how cold it is, there will be rain within twenty-four hours. When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from south or southeast there will be a hailstorm on the morrow, if it be in summer, and if it be in the winter there will be snow.

The wind always blows about a storm in a circle. When it blows from the north the heaviest rain is east of you. If it blows from the south the heaviest rain is west of you. If it blows from the east the heaviest rain is south. The wind never blows even moderately unless rain or snow is falling within a radius of 1,000 miles.

Whenever heavy white frost occurs a storm is forming within 1,000 miles north or northwest of you.—Christian Herald Almanac.

The "Nickel Plate."

The railroad name "Nickel Plate" found its origin in a remark made by Jay Gould. When the road had failed and was placed on sale Gould entered a bid for it. The bid was considered unsatisfactory, and Gould was urged by the interested parties to increase the amount. Though the road had not proved very profitable it was a splendid piece of construction and worth much more than he had offered. Gould tersely replied that his bid was the maximum and that he wouldn't raise it if the old line was "nickel plated."—Railroad Man's Magazine.

A Northern Venice.

The old city of Ghent, Belgium, is built on twenty-six islands, which are connected with one another by eighty bridges. Three hundred streets and thirty public squares are contained in these islands. Ghent is famous because Charles V. and John of Gaunt were born there. It has been the scene of many treaties, insurrections and revolts, and it was there the treaty was made terminating the war of 1812 between this country and England.

The Point of Surprise.

"Did you notice the man over there who took off his hat to the lady he met and begged pardon so politely for stepping on her dress?"

"Why, what is so remarkable about such ordinary politeness?"

"But, man alive, she's his wife!"—Baltimore American.

His Friendship.

He—I know how this catastrophe has crippled you, and as one of your oldest friends I should like to help you. I will buy your furniture for 300 francs. She—You're very kind, but I've just sold it for 825 francs. He—What? You allowed yourself to be robbed like that?—Pele Mele.

A Sad Meeting.

"I think we met at this cafe last winter. Your overcoat is very familiar to me."

"But I didn't own it then."

"No, but I did."—Belgrade Stutter.

Oblivion is the flower that grows best on graves.—George Sand.

JUICE OF THE POPPY.

The Flowers Are Lanced to Obtain the Crude Opium.

It is probable that few owners of flower beds are aware that the poppies they cultivate purely for ornament will, if treated correctly, produce opium. When the flower petals have fallen, leaving the seed capsule bare, there will exude, if an incision is made in that body, a sticky juice. This juice is opium. It varies in certain chemical qualities according to the country where it is cultivated and the variety of plant wherefrom it is produced.

Although the poppy will grow in almost any climate, it is in the east it is most successfully cultivated. When the land has been plowed and harrowed the poppy seed is sown, about six pounds of seed being sufficient for one-third of an acre. Just as soon as it begins to germinate, about a week after sowing in certain localities, the land is divided by furrows into rectangular beds about eight feet in length by four in breadth. These channels are employed for irrigation, as the plants need frequent watering, sometimes even until the time of maturity.

About two months and a half after germination the flower appears, and its four petals are gently removed on the third day after their expansion, to be pasted together with the leaves destined to form the outer shell of the opium cake. Then after about eight or ten days the capsules are lanced—at night—and the juice which has exuded from the incisions is scraped off in the morning with a small scoop and transferred to a metal or earthen vessel. This process is repeated three or four times at intervals of two or three days, the result being pure opium. The flower petals, the plant leaves and the stalks have also a considerable value for packing purposes. The thicker portions of the stalk are used by natives for firewood.

The crude opium having been gathered, it is stored by the cultivator and carefully watched and examined from time to time in order that no mold or taint may attack it. Finally the opium is made into cakes, dried, packed in boxes and removed to market for sale.—New York Press.

BONEHEAD BASEBALL.

This Was About the Richest Double Play Ever Perpetrated.

Double boneheads are rare in baseball—scarcer than hens' teeth, and naturally so, for the completion of a bonehead requires vigilance and quick thinking by the opposition. Still, double concretes happen ever and anon, the most famous one possibly being that pulled by Cozy Dolan and Harry Gessler at Chicago several years ago.

On this occasion Dolan had reached second in the ninth, and one was down, the score at the time being in favor of the Cubs by a one run margin. The next batter hoisted a long fly over center field. Gessler grabbed the ball and, deciding that it was the third out, tucked the ball in his pocket and flew for the clubhouse.

Dolan, instead of taking advantage of the break to score the tying run, also figured that it was the third out and followed Gessler across the field, while a raving mob of players from both teams, surrounding them, tried to impress the horror of the situation upon them.

Artie Hofman finally took the ball away from Gessler, chased Dolan to the clubhouse and made the putout at the edge of the bathtub. That was the richest double break on record, but there have been a few others almost as funny.

Royal Night Bodyguards.

For more than 400 years a body of men known as the Monteros de Espinosa have enjoyed the exclusive privilege of watching over the slumbers of the kings and queens of Spain. They are bound by tradition to be natives of Espinosa and to have served with distinction in the army. One of these is on guard at the door of the bedroom of each royal personage in the palace and the others, armed with huge halberds and wearing felt soled shoes, tread silently all through the night along the corridors and halls. Their service begins at midnight and ceases at 7 in the morning.

Japanese "Silent" Music.

A curious ceremony used to be performed in Japan by the court musicians at certain Shinto festivals. Both stringed and wind instruments were used, but it was held that no sound should be allowed to fall upon unworthy ears, and, as some of the ears present might be unworthy, all the motions of playing were gone through by the musicians, but not a single sound was heard. This strange custom dated back many generations.

Use For a Friend.

"I let my house furnished, and they have had measles there. Of course we've had the place disinfected, so I suppose it's quite safe. What do you think?"

"I fancy it would be all right, dear. But I think perhaps it would be safer to lend it to a friend first."—London Punch.

Corrected.

"Was Rome founded by Romeo?" inquired a pupil of the teacher.

"No, my son," replied the wise man. "It was Juliet who was found dead by Romeo."—London Answers.

Dividing the Task.

Tattie—Ah, we'll [illegible] a kiss and make up. Ted—[illegible] right dear. I'll do the kissing, but you've had more experience with the other part of the program.—Cleveland Leader.

THE BODICE CORSET COVER

Pictured is the new bodice corset cover, which is a boon to the stout woman. It is very much on the order of a brassiere, as it is perfectly fitted to the figure and boned in several [illegible]

Another advantage of this corset cover is that it is attached to the petticoat, giving a smooth hip line.

The materials used are valenciennes lace and the sheerest of tucked batiste. Pink satin ribbon ties the cover at the shoulders and is run through the beading.

Your Spring Hat.

A hat is the most noticeable feature of a woman's dress. It practically makes or mars her costume. The selecting of a good looking hat is simply a question of interest in the matter. The milliner is interested in selling what she has on hand. The trouble is the average woman is not as interested in selecting a becoming hat as the milliner is interested in selling what she has on hand. No milliner will take the interest in your appearance that you do yourself.

At least every woman should know her own limitations sufficiently well to be an intelligent factor in clothing her own head and not be a mere pawn moved about at the milliner's whim. It is all the matter of studying oneself, of being aware of one's own type. Don't be guilty of extinguishing a little face under an immense hat or load it with ornaments brighter than the sparkle of your own eyes or with colors that make you sallow by contrast. If you are built on the Juno type do not be persuaded into buying a toy hat regardless how your friends and the milliner insist that your classic braids are beautifully adorned with a Tommy Atkins toque.

Neither should one carry respect for one's own style to the monotonous extreme of never wearing but one kind of hat. Each year there are fashions which may be adapted to your knowledge of your own individuality. Each year it is possible for the woman who knows her own face and who has due regard for its possibilities to frame it becomingly without sacrificing every consideration of the modes. Adaptation of one's own individuality means harmony in hats.

A Joke on Father.

"Can you match this typewriting for me?" inquired a customer of the head of a typewriter's office. The head of the office looked up and saw a blond and blushing beauty of perhaps seventeen. She was well dressed and well groomed, and a Boston bull pup of purre strutted from the end of a leash in her hand.

"It's very important to match it exactly," insisted the young thing.

The head of the office just glanced at the paper in her hand. "Machine No. 3 matches it," she said. "Will you tell the young lady at machine No. 3 what you want?"

The blond beauty and the girl at machine No. 3 whispered apart. Machine No. 3 clicked for a moment. There was a frou-frou of skirts and a yap from an unwilling bull pup and the visitor was gone.

"Say, that was a queer thing!" remarked the girl at machine No. 3. "She had a receipted dentist's bill for $6. She had me insert on another line an item for $30 and add it up to a total of $36 above the signature. Say, do you suppose it was just a little joke on father—or what?"

Women Do the Work in City of [illegible]

In the little city of Fromy, sixty miles north of Paris, there is not a municipal job worth having that a woman doesn't occupy, from mayor down to "Mother" Lafarge, who tends the gate of the main street railway crossing. The conductor on the local train is a woman, Mlle. Dur[illegible]. The letter carrier is a woman, Mme. Dubois. The town crier is an old lady named Mme. Deshon, and the chief of police is a woman. Alberta Summer Schools

During the holiday season of 1912 three summer Training Schools will be held in Alberta under the direction of the Alberta Sunday School Association assisted by the Evangelical Denominations. These Summer Schools will be held at White Sand Beach, Cooking Lake, 28 miles east of Edmonton; at Sylvan Lake, 16 miles west of Red Deer, and at Banff, Rocky Mountain Park. The Cooking Lake School runs from July 10th to 19th; Sylvan Lake School, July 24th to Aug. 2; Banff, Aug. 7th till 16th, being 10 full days at each School.

Men of master minds, experts in their department, will conduct the study classes. Sessions will be held from 9 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. leaving the afternoon free for recreation up to 8 o'clock when a public meeting with popular addresses will be a feature.

The Alberta Sunday School Association provides tents for auditorium and class rooms, and will furnish sleeping accommodation to a limited number of students. Meals will be served table d'hote in cafeteria.

Detailed information may be had by applying to F. E. Werry, General Secretary, The Alberta Sunday School Association, 9 Lougheed Block, Calgary, Alta.

Tenders for School

Sealed Tenders will be received by the Secretary of the Windermere S. D. No. 1499 for the erection of a school house to be situated on the southwest corner of Sec. 12 49 7. Farewell Presentation At Landonville

On the eve of their departure from the Landonville district, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cavil, two of the most highly esteemed residents of that locality, were presented with a handsome Clock and an Address which read as follows:

"To Our Friends, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cavil

We, the pioneer bachelors of the district, deeply regret your intended departure from amongst us. We take this opportunity of expressing our gratitude for your kindness bestowed in assisting us in the first stages of our homestead life. We feel that you have very often cheered us by your welcome fireside and sympathetic conversations. Your place has always been a veritable landmark and you are the centre [illegible] you are [illegible] neighbors, you [illegible] deserved place in their social circle.

Needless to say with your departure you take with you, our best wishes for your prosperity, both financially and otherwise. We would extend to you and your family a cordial invitation to visit us as often as it is convenient for you to do so, for "should auld acquaintance be forgot".

We therefore pray you to accept this present as a small token of the high esteem in which you are held."

Signed:— "Pioneer Bachelors"

Mr. Cavil replied on behalf of himself and Mrs. Cavil, and in feeling terms stated that no matter where they might go they never expected to find warmer friends or better neighbors than those they were leaving in the Landonville settlement.

Over one hundred were present coming for miles around to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Cavil and enjoy their hospitality for the last time in their old home.

THE SUPPLANTER

A Modern Romance

By WILMOT KAYE

"With pleasure, Miss Stafford," he replied, and his eyes twinkled with good humour. "I can come now if you like."

"There's just one thing, Doctor," Vera continued with a blush. "We're both dreadfully hard up and——"

"When I ask you for my fees it will be time enough for you to——"

"But——"

He brushed aside her expostulations and they walked side by side until they reached a house in Little James Street, where Vera rang the bell. A servant of the usual lodging house type opened the door, and Vera led the way to the second floor where she entered a large room which was furnished as a bed-sitting room.

A chair-bedstead was drawn up in front of the fire and upon it there reclined a girl who was sleeping restlessly. At her side was a table which was covered with tools used in the binding of books and there was a half-finished cover which bore evidence of careful and artistic work.

"Wake up, Hilda. I've brought the Doctor to see you," Vera said softly.

The eyes opened wearily but smiled when they rested on her friend. She listlessly answered the Doctor's questions, and he made a thorough examination, during which he kept up a cheerful flow of remarks.

"You only require a rest," he said at last, "and good nourishing food," he added hesitatingly. "I'll look in again in a day or two, and I'll just send round a tonic that will work wonders. Good morning," he wound up briskly.

Vera followed him from the room and softly closed the door.

"Is she ill? Tell me frankly," she asked anxiously.

"She would be all the better for a change and that book-binding is none too healthy a work for one of her constitution. If you could only take her to the South Coast for a week or two——"

"You might just as well suggest the Riviera or Timbuctoo. But if she doesn't get this change and this nourishing food, what will happen?"

"It is difficult to say. Organically she's sound but she's not too strong."

Vera thanked him and once more entered the room.

"I'm going to boil you a couple of eggs," she began with a cheerfulness that she was not feeling. "Why do you look so worried?"

"A [illegible]," Hilda Grant replied, with a sigh that was half a groan. "He won't wait any longer [illegible]" busied herself with preparations for their lunch.

[illegible]

The room was a large one and was furnished with some taste. The small beds were covered with rugs, and there was but little to show that it was the room in which they slept.

These girls had been friends for some ten years; from the time when Hilda Grant had arrived at the Belgian convent where she had been sent by her father when he first set out for the West Coast of Africa. From the first moment they had taken to one another and Hilda fell under the sway of Vera's stronger nature.

The time arrived when they had to leave the Convent. Their positions were identical, for Vera was an orphan and was compelled to earn her own living while Hilda had just received news of her father's death. She was overcome with grief, for she had loved him passionately. Stephen Grant had confided to his daughter, and she knew that her future entirely depended upon the success of his trip to Nigeria. He had warned her that should he fail she must be prepared to support herself.

Vera had taken command and had decided that they should go to London to wage war with fortune. Hilda had not questioned the decision, and twelve months had passed since. [illegible] quickly but success had not come to them. For while Hilda was earning but little at her book-binding, Vera's theatrical engagements had been few and far between.

For the first time they were despondent. But Vera's trouble was the state of her friend's health.

She had just warmed the teapot preparatory to making the tea, when there was a small knock at the door.

"Come in," she said impatiently.

"It's you, is it?" she remarked, when she saw a young man enter.

Vaughan Seymour advanced into the room and he looked with great concern at Hilda's pale face. His lover's eyes did not detect the warm colour that his presence had brought to her cheeks. He only thought how ill she looked, but it was to Vera that he addressed himself.

"Miss Stafford," he began diffidently, "I've just been paid for a short story and, and——"

"Well," she questioned coldly.

"I know a ripping little restaurant; won't you come to lunch with me?" he asked eagerly.

Her face softened and she turned to him with a smile.

"What about the landlady? I heard her storming away at you yesterday. Have you satisfied her?"

"Oh, she can wait. Besides, I've rather a big cheque, eight guineas. Please do come. I can't enjoy it by myself, and I do want to celebrate——"

Vera looked questioningly at Hilda.

"I am so glad," the latter remarked to Vaughan. "Which story was it?"

"The Whited Sepulchre," he replied, and he was evidently delighted at her [illegible]

When Wives Were Cheap.

There is living in Horsham, at the age of 86, a remarkable old man called Henry Burstow—by hard necessity a shoemaker, by taste a singer of songs and a ringer of church bells. Even now he can sing any one of 400 songs that he knows by heart. Mr. Burstow occasionally reinforces his memory with stories told him by his father, and so can go back to 1820 when a man sold his wife at the November Fair for 2s 6d. He himself can well remember that in 1844 a lady known as "Pin-Toe Nancy" was brought into the market place with a halter round her neck and sold for 5s to a man who parted with his watch to raise the price. Nancy changed hands again a year after ward and married one Jim Smith, with whom she lived happily ever afterward.—Westminster Gazette.

Very Last Thing.

The heavy, fur-coated man owned the gunpowder factory, and the lean, cadaverous person by his side acted as foreman and general factotum.

"Yes, sir," from the latter, "the mental to the heater [illegible] and Bill is dead shot enough."

"And how did it happen?" asked the employer sadly.

"Well, sir," came the reply, "you see, sir, old Bill went into the mixing room and he mistook a stick for a match."

The boss looked surprised.

"Fancy Bill, of all people, doing that!" he cried. "I should have thought that would have been the last thing he'd do!"

"It was, sir," replied the lanky one cheerfully.—London Answers.

Why Not?

"How are you?" asked a Gentile friend, meeting Isaac in the street.

"Well, how should I be?" replied Isaac.

"And how are the children getting along, Isaac?"

"And how should the children get along?"

"And does your wife feel better?"

"How can a sick woman feel?"

"Are you earning more money now?"

"How much can a poor Jew earn?"

By this time the Gentile had quite lost his patience. "Tell me, Isaac," he said angrily, "why is it when you Jews are asked a question you always answer with a question?"

Isaac was silent for a time. Then he answered, innocently, "Why may not a Jew answer with a question?"

Unreasonable Restraint.

A wag entering an empty railway compartment lately happened to notice the legend "Wait until the train stops" above the door, and thinking to have a joke on somebody he drew a pencil through the "t" in "train." At the next station an old country dame got in and seated herself.

A Many Fingered Family.

In the village of Kamilova (Grodno Government), Russia, there are over fifty peasants who have more than the usual number of fingers.

According to particulars published in the Novoi Vremya, they are all descendants of a peasant who married in the first half of the last century and who had extra fingers on one of his hands.

In the present generation this abnormality is reproduced to the extent of two, three, four, or even five additional fingers. Some cases simply show a thumb duplicated from the first joint.

As a result of intermarriage the abnormality is spreading to neighboring villages. It disposes the young men from military service, however, about [illegible].—Pall Mall Gazette.

Not Quite Ready.

A well known Scottish architect was traveling in Palestine recently, when news reached him of an addition to his family circle. The happy father immediately provided himself with some water from the Jordan to carry home for the christening of the infant and returned to Scotland. On the Sunday appointed for the ceremony he duly presented himself at the church, and caught out the beadle in order to hand over the precious water to his care. He pulled the flask from his pocket, but the beadle held up a warning hand, and came near to whisper:

"No the noo, sir; no' the noo! May be after the kirk's oot!"

Thanks.

WIFE OF THE P.M. TALKS TO WOMEN

TELLS WHAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DID FOR HER.

She Suffered for Two Years and Found a Cure for all Her Troubles in a Single Box

Lower Caraquet, Gloucester, N.B. (Special)—Mrs. Jos. O. Chiasson, wife of the police magistrate here, who for two years has been practically an invalid, is again in the best of health, and she is telling her friends how quick and complete was the cure when she took Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My illness," Mrs. Chiasson says, "was caused by a strain, and for two years I was a sufferer. My back ached, I was always tired and nervous, there were dark circles under my eyes and after sleeping I had a bitter taste in my mouth.

I had a pressure and sharp pain on the top of my head. I was always thirsty and my skin had a harsh, dry feeling. I was often dizzy, I perspired easily and my perspiration had an unpleasant odor.

"Almost from the first dose Dodd's Kidney Pills helped me and by the time I had finished the first box I was a well woman."

Mrs. Chiasson's symptoms showed that the trouble was her kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her so quickly.

"I fear you are losing interest in the cause."

"Why?"

"I see you constantly with a young man."

"No danger," declared the militant suffragette.

"Then he is not your beau?"

"No, he's a professional bondsman."—Washington Herald.

Want Commodity Rate to Remain.

Regina, Sask. The shippers' committee of the Regina board of trade, after considerable discussion, decided to send a telegram to the railway commission, urging that the commodity freight rates remain in effect pending negotiations with the railway companies. It is urged that the new rates in the sixth class, which covers agricultural implements, still discriminate in favor of Winnipeg, and efforts will be made to have this remedied.

Sir W. Ramsey believes that something will be done in the nature of not raising coal at all, but letting it lie underground, burning it there, and taking off the gases. Americans the Biggest Meat-Eaters.

Despite the fact that the census reports show that Americans are steadily drifting towards vegetarianism, they are still (says the Family Doctor), the greatest meat eaters in the world. Their meat costs every year one hundred million dollars more than their vegetables, including imported vegetable foods. In the aggregate Americans pay every year about $6,250,000,000 for food.

Ottawa.—It is understood that the government has been approached by certain railway interests which are prepared to build a line of railway from Montreal to the Georgian Bay over which the I.C.R. would be given running rights. Don't let repairs eat up your profits

Whether they represent actual cash outlay, or only the time of yourself and your help, repairs are waste just the same. When you make an improvement—no matter how small its cost may be—let it be permanent. Then it is a real investment, something on which you can realize in cash should you decide to sell your property; and something that will pay you constant dividends in convenience, sightliness and comfort as long as the farm remains your own.

Concrete Improvements Are Permanent

They last as long as the very hills themselves. They do not require experts to build them. Their first cost, in most cases, is no more than for inferior materials.

Aren't you interested in the subject of permanent, modern farm improvements?

Then write for the book that describes hundreds of them—

"WHAT THE FARMER CAN DO WITH CONCRETE"

It isn't a Catalogue. Every one of its 160 handsomely illustrated pages is interesting and instructive. They tell how to mix concrete, how to place it, what can be done with it. The book was printed to sell for 50 cents, but we have a copy for you, free.

C.P.R. CALGARY SHOPS

Great Car Shops to be Erected by the C.P.R. at Calgary, to be Known as The Ogden Shops.

The great car shops which the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. is erecting near Calgary, Alberta, will rank amongst the biggest undertakings of Canada's great transcontinental road. They are happily named the "Ogden Shops" in honor of Mr. I. G. Ogden, one of the vice-presidents of the company, and the town which will grow up around them is also to be called Ogden. The shops are, of course, to be of the most modern construction and equipment, and will consist of a group of twenty buildings, and occupy an area of 120 acres of land, the locomotive works alone covering from six to eight acres. The Ogden shops are intended by the C.P.R. to provide for the repairs to equipment on the western lines. That they will have plenty of work to do is evidenced from the fact that the Canadian Pacific Railway makes it a point to completely overhaul its rolling stock at least once a year. The company does this so that its equipment may always be in the highest possible state of efficiency. A few years ago the Angus shops at Montreal and the shops at Winnipeg were sufficient for this work, but the C. P. R. equipment has increased so greatly within last few years that the Ogden shops are a necessity. Between two and three thousand men will be employed and they will be systematically housed on a modern plan that will make the town of Ogden one of the world's model hives of industry and an ideal residential place for the workingman.

The naming of the shops after Mr. Ogden is a particularly happy choice by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, for that gentleman is one of the real old guard of the C.P.R., a veteran indeed, having given thirty-one years of the best of his talents to the company's service.

A New Yorker by birth, belonging to a family of financiers, his forefathers having been bankers, Mr. Ogden has spent the larger portion of ...

Shortly after the publication of the Liberal began, by Brenner & McGuire, the subject of this sketch began the mastery of the printers art and when William McGuire assumed entire charge of the Liberal remained with him, putting in more than four years in one office. He was afterwards employed on the Tillsonburg Observer, spent some time on the Pacific Coast where he was employed in Seattle and Whatcom (now Bellingham) ... he after place he had charge of the job department in the office of the Reveille, but gave up the position to return to Ontario just previous to his mother's death in the fall of 1889. In 1890 and 1891 he served as foreman in the office of the Herald-Record at Walkerburg, then went to Michigan, accepting a position on the Enterprise at Cass City and in the following year buying a half interest in the paper. In 1894 he became sole owner of the Enterprise and continued as such until the spring of 1905 ... his business interests to a competitor and came to Alberta. He at first accepted a position in the office of the Edmonton Bulletin, first in the news room and later in the job department. In the fall of 1906 he went as foreman in the office of the Mail (now defunct) at Camrose, remaining until the spring of 1907, when he located in Hayaland and commenced the publication of the Press, then the only paper between Camrose and Saskatoon either on the C.P.R. or the G.T.P. Notwithstanding the fact that now nearly every town on both those lines of railway has a paper of its own, the Press continues to hold a good patronage and has moved to very desirable quarters of its own, on one of the very best corners in town. This has only been possible because of the editor's high ideals of journalism and his determination to carry them out as far as can be made practical ...

CLEAN HANDS

A Wonderful Discovery

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This [illegible] of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Co. and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

DRESS OF JAPANESE BRIDES

White Worn for Part of the Ceremony, But for a Strange Reason.

Brides in Japan follow the same custom which prevails in the Western world, that of wearing white at the wedding ceremony, at least during a part of it. But the significance attached to the choice of this color is quite different on the two sides of the world.

The Japanese bride is dressed first in resplendent garments of white silk, the sleeves of the costume usually being about three feet in length, while the sash, an important feature, measures about 11 feet in length.

But white, as the Oriental Review explains, is the mourning color in Japan, and the bride, leaving her parents' house, considers herself dead in the sense that she will never return alive, preferring death to divorce and in consequence wearing a white costume.

After the exchange of cups of sake with the bridegroom, which is the most important part of the wedding ceremony, the bride changes her costume to a red one. This is called iromaoshi (changing color). Red is supposed to have a purifying power, and perhaps clears the minds of the parties of all association of mourning.

This is the origin of the Japanese custom of using white costume at weddings, but many people in modern Japan do not any longer have time to bother their heads with these questions of color, and simply go ahead and marry according to the accepted custom, with no thought of what the colors signify.

An Appeal For More Diversified Farming

(De[illegible] Vermilion [illegible] the Interests of the Farmers of the Vermilion District)

[illegible]

Keep the Soil Rich

[illegible]

The Need for Dry Farming

The feeling is becoming generally year by year that the district of Vermilion is in reality a dry-farming district, and that the sooner energies are bent in the direction of tilling the soil under conditions obtained in semi-arid regions the better for the people themselves and the community as a whole. Mixed farming can then only be brought to its greatest degree of perfection, and the returns will amply justify the means.

What is Dry-Farming?

It is simply this: The operation of farming lands where the rainfall is uncertain or where climatic conditions make it necessary to conserve moisture by special tillage methods. It is more; it is better farming, more intensive culture. The dry farmer is not dry. He handles his soil so that two years rainfall, if need be, are [illegible] to grow one year's crop, but climatic conditions are not such in the Vermilion district as would necessitate this extreme precaution, because as a rule the rain in the spring of the [illegible]

The Standard job department turned out this week one of the best pieces of ad[vertising], in point of usefulness at least, that we believe has yet been gotten out by any of our progressive business men. The work was for Craig Bros, the Main St. department store and is a Telephone Directory of the Town and Rural lines printed on cardboard, a convenient and handy size to hang beside the Phone. The firm could not have made a luckier hit than in issuing this directory as the old telephone book is pretty well disfigured with corrections and additions. The directory as published on the card is right up to the minute and Craig Brothers are to be congratulated in meeting a want that has been felt to be badly needed.

AN EASTER HOUSE PARTY

Some of the Guests Voted It a Great Success

By VIRGINIA LEILA WENTZ

The region of northern New Jersey is extremely beautiful. There are rolling hills, some of them approaching the dignity of mountains. There are splendid lakes, some of them closed in between the hills producing scenery to catch the eye of an artist.

There are country places that are veritable palaces, for many of the wealthiest and most fashionable New Yorkers have built them for their summer homes.

The most famous of all these localities is Tuxedo, where are gathered many whose ancestors were prominent when the state of New Jersey was a colony of King George III.

It was Easter week and Mrs. James Fenton was giving a little house party in one of these beautiful homes.

April was still weaving its birthday garments, spring's coronal of blossoms remained yet folded buds and song birds were not quite ready with their richest song.

But it promised to be a prodigal spring. In the woods the bloodroot and anemone were in bloom and the violets were peeping forth from their protecting leaves.

Now and then a cardinal or scarlet tanager would flash from the cedar trees. And in Mrs. Fenton's flower beds yellow daffodils, the white narcissus and blue hyacinths made sweet places.

Of course Mrs. James Fenton had gathered together all sorts of men, from the up to date man with a fad for motor science, talking grandiloquently of lubricators, radiators and pumps, gradometers, magnetos and odometers, to the rather old fashioned man with a fad for the camera, lovingly as fait on iris diaphragms and wide angle lenses, the telephoto attachment and "hypo" and "solio" print.

"BUT DON'T LET US FENCE, LITTLE WOMAN."

Somewhere in between these two types of contemplation came the ordinary, wholesome, every day man. Tom Ormsby, a handsome young widower, was one of them.

But although he was exceedingly nice to all his hostess' feminine guests, it could not be said that he was especially attentive to any one. At least not on the first day.

"Heigh oh!" yawned Miss Chase, in dressing robe and slippers as the maid brushed out the tawny lengths of her tresses that first night. "Well, tomorrow is another day. We'll see if we can't wake him up a bit tomorrow."

Miss Chase was a gay, enterprising beauty, all unused to the dull sensation of ineffective charms. And to her particular way of thinking Tom Ormsby seemed the only eligible man worth while in Mrs. Fenton's collection. He was a widower, but what of that? They always made the best husbands, did they not? So she said to herself, "Tomorrow."

However, when tomorrow came, so, also, did another guest. Miss Chase met her on the staircase as she was going up to her room after a little chat with her hostess. There was nothing extremely pretty about her, yet instinctively Miss Chase turned to look after the ascending figure.

"Who is she—your new guest?" she asked of Mrs. Fenton a little later.

"Molly Hargraves, a dear old school friend of mine, just back from the other side. You'll like her lots; everybody does." And Mrs. Fenton was off to attend to some of her numerous duties of hostess.

That afternoon while most of the guests were playing bridge Mrs. Fenton, Miss Chase, Miss Hargraves and Tom Ormsby strolled off for a little ramble through the woods.

"At the top of that slide of rock," said Ormsby to his hostess, pointing ahead, "there used to be a little colony of white violets. I'm going to look for them now."

Hurrying up the slaty embankment "Just as they were long years ago," he exclaimed, feeling back a cluster in his hands. He divided the flowers between the women. As he handed them to Molly Hargraves Miss Chase heard him say:

"Do you remember the white violets in the myrtle bed by the old spring?"

An expression of tender remembrance flitted over the girl's face, but she answered with cold precision:

"That must have been long ago. And I have a poor memory."

"Humph!" ejaculated Miss Chase to herself, scenting a romance of bygone days. "And who would have suspected it?"

A heavy rain came on that night and was the beginning of a two days' deluge. It was hard on the house party. That dreadful gulf between luncheon and 5 o'clock may become impossible even to fascinating bridge. There were many who yawned.

Although it had been Mrs. Fenton's express purpose to bring Ormsby and Molly together, never once had she received the gratification of finding them alone. And Miss Chase watched in vain for the progress of her romance.

On the second day of the rain Molly was lying in a great cane chair reading, half screened by palms, out on the empty side porch. The dampness didn't take her hair out of curl, and she liked it. Mrs. Fenton happened to spy her and, like the kindly little woman that she was, gave Ormsby the hint.

Molly smiled rather enigmatically as he approached and gave expression to an easy commonplace or two, then her eyes dropped a moment to the open book on her knees. It was a volume of Bliss Carman's poems.

"Rather pretty, don't you think?" she murmured, handing him the volume and indicating the poem beginning:

> Make me over, Mother April,
> When the sap begins to stir—

She could think of nothing else to say, her heart was thumping so. And silence might lead to melodrama, a thing above all others that she hated.

"Look here," Ormsby said, closing the book gently, "this is the very first chance I've had, Molly, and there are some things I've been waiting to say to you for eight years."

There was a pitiful curve to the girl's lips, but her eyes smiled mockingly.

"Indeed?" said she.

"Ah, don't let us fence, little woman." The man's voice was almost a cry. "Life is so short that once in awhile surely we can afford to be blunt"—

"You wo—" broke in the girl. "I believe we can." Her soft eyes suddenly looked like a purple black cloud that has in its heart the forked lightning. "Well, then, before you tell me anything let me speak. Eight years ago I was more of a child than a woman, and I broke our engagement, Tom, because"—she moistened her dry lips—[illegible] you must surely know better."

"Yes," she answered simply, "I do. But when I received your wild, incoherent note a week after we'd separated, when you told me you'd married your cousin Nell, all the sun seemed to have been stolen from the day and the moon and the stars from the night. That's all. Now, because it was my fault in the first place, I've done my duty. I've made my confession. Of course I was too proud to grieve long for another woman's husband, so at present you owe me no debt."

There was an icy hauteur in her voice which the trembling of her lips belied.

"I was true to her, dear, while she lived—indeed, at least," said the man reverently.

Tom Ormsby had a generous heart, and he never thought of his poor wife without a feeling of remorse for ever having felt harshly about the bonds that bound them. But she's been dead now for nearly two years, and you've been traveling in Europe with your aunt for nearly three and"—

"We only arrived the week before Easter," said Molly casually, and then, changing her tone, "There is a child, is there not, Tom?"

Ormsby leaned toward her, his face transfigured with adoration.

"There is a little girl," and we call her Mollie."

He could say no more for a second. Then he crossed to Miss Hargraves' side, put his hand beneath her chin and lifted the oval face till her eyes looked into his.

"Sweetheart," he added huskily, "I would like nothing better on earth than to give her to you. But you'd have to take me too. Could you? Would you?"

Ah, the old mesmeric entreaty of his voice! She longed to throw herself into his dear, big arms and tell him that never, never once in all these years, though she had fought hard against it, had she forgotten him, that nowhere else in the whole world but with him could happiness be found!

He was wrapping her around with the old, old spell.

She made an effort to get out of her chair, but she found herself rooted to the spot as one is sometimes in dreams. A tide of rich young blood surged over the delicate face and made the man's heart throb with inexplicable joy.

"Would you dear?" he pleaded again, bending slightly over her.

Molly did speak finally, rising calmly and reaching for the book. And she said a wonderfully clever thing. Considering the fact that Miss Chase was at that moment curiously stealing out to the side porch, both the remark and the action were apropos.

"I know you'll like Carman's poem, and if the sun comes out tomorrow I'll read it to you down by that little colony of white violets."

The next day the sun came out.

LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

If There Is No Bright Side Burnish Up the Dark Side.

A gentleman remarked to us that the true theory of life was to get on the admiration side and not on the cynical and objurgatory side of life. We believe that is sensible, says the Ohio State Journal. "Look on the bright side and if there is no bright side burnish up the dark side" is a little quotation that we put in our notebook more than a score of years ago. It is good gospel. It is the doctrine of hope. Grumbling at everything is un-Christian. It will condemn a man as sure as profanity or lying.

The Bible says, "But let all those that put their trust in thee rejoice." There is philosophy for this. A person cannot do any good in a bad spirit. If one hates a man he cannot reform him. Every good thing that a man does pulls some evil up by the roots. Good deeds grow by smiles as the wheat grows by the sunshine. Boost the good and the bad will have a poor chance.

It is right to curb the evil if one does not waste all his strength at it, so that he will have to sit down and lose heart. There is no final defeat in an honest, sincere effort, and that is the doctrine of the upward look and the bright side of life.

SHOE ODDITIES.

Two Pairs Are Sometimes Broken to Oblige Finicky Customers.

When a one legged man buys a shoe the dealer sends to the factory for a shoe to match the one left remaining. In these days of the use of machinery in every process of their manufacture shoes are made with the utmost exactness and precision, and it is easily possible to mate that remaining shoe with the greatest nicety in size, style, material and finish.

Few people have feet exactly alike. Commonly the left foot is larger than the right, so that one shoe may fit a little more snugly than the other. Commonly, however, people buy shoes in regularly matched pairs, the difference in their feet, if it is noticeable to them at all, not being enough to make any other course desirable.

But there are people who buy shoes of different sizes or widths, in which case the dealer breaks two pairs for them, giving them, to fit their feet, one shoe from each. In such cases the dealer matches up the two remaining shoes, one from each of two pairs, just as he would where he had broken one pair to sell one shoe to a one legged man.

Halcyon Days.

The seven days preceding and the seven days following the winter solstice were called by the ancients "halcyon days." This phrase is derived from a fable which sets forth that Halcyone, a princess who grieved so deeply for the loss at sea of her spouse, was sent thither in pity in the form of a halcyon bird or kingfisher. According to the legend, the halcyon bird had during the time of breeding the power of lulling the waves, and it was believed that at this time the sea was always calm and might be navigated in perfect security. Experience, of course, dispelled this fable, but like many an other old world story, it has left behind it a distorted meaning. In this case the connection between the old and the new significance is clear, for the term, once expressive of peace and calm upon the waters, is equally expressive of tranquillity upon the sea of life.

The Lump Fish.

Did you ever hear of the lump fish? Well, it's a peculiar species found in salt water. This strange fish possesses a sucker formed by two ventral fins, which is so shaped that when the fish rests on a rock the fins act as suckers and hold it firmly. As soon as the eggs are deposited in shallow pits between stones, the female feeling that she has done her part, deserts them and the male at once assumes charge and guards the eggs until they hatch out and then the young until they are able to take care of themselves. In moving round he is closely followed by the numerous family which has given rise to the term "hen and chickens." At times they attach themselves to the sides of their parent by their sucking disks, thus presenting a singular appearance.

Elasticity of Conscience.

In the majority of cases conscience is an elastic and very flexible article, which will bear a deal of stretching and adapt itself to a great variety of circumstances. Some people, by prudent management and leaving it off piece by piece, like a flannel waistcoat in warm weather, even contrive in time to dispense with it altogether, but there be others who can assume the garment and throw it off at pleasure, and this, being the greatest and most convenient improvement, is the one most in vogue.—From Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop."

His Paying Powers.

Old Gotrox—I don't think much of that young Dobb's [illegible] as a parlor ornament [illegible] Pretty Daughter—Why, pa, he pays me the loveliest compliments.

Old Gotrox—Yes, and that's all he was ever known to pay, so far as I can learn.—[illegible]

Consolation.

[illegible]

[illegible] men excuse their faults. Good men leave them.—Ben Jonson.

WEIGHT OF A TRAIN.

The Dining Car Alone, Ready For Service, Weighs 140,000 Pounds.

The heaviest of all the cars in a "limited" train is the dining car, which is ordinarily of a weight in excess of the other cars by 10,000 or 15,000 pounds. Between the car construction and the necessary kitchen equipment and larder contents, a full size standard dining car tips the scales at 140,000 pounds when ready to make its customary division run.

Therefore, on the principle that in case of collision a passenger is safer in the strong, heavy coach in the center of a vestibuled train, the dining car is a good place to remain.

A sixteen section sleeping car may weigh from 110,000 to 125,000 pounds, while the buffet-library car of the transcontinental type comes next in weight at 107,000 pounds. The baggage car, weighing 85,000 pounds, may be the lightest in a train, but the postal car next to it weighs on an average 103,000 pounds, a reclining chair car is full weight at 87,000 pounds, while the ordinary passenger coach weighs 93,000 pounds.

With a locomotive and tender weighing 200,000 pounds, one may estimate by these figures the enormous weight of some of the through modern railway trains of seven cars.—New York Press.

WATCH HER AT DINNER.

A Parisian Gourmet's Way of Getting at a Woman's Age.

A Parisian gourmet thinks he has discovered an infallible method for getting at a woman's age—watch her at dinner.

If she goes through every course, chattering all the time, and is equal to an ice after dessert, not to mention chocolates and crystallized fruits, she is still in her teens.

If she makes a good start with the hors d'oeuvres, does well with the caviar, salmon and such delicacies, but shows no interest in the rest of the meal, she is between twenty and thirty and married.

When she declines every other kind of game, but takes some pheasant, she has passed thirty, but has not yet reached thirty-five.

After thirty-five she doles on every kind of game, the more highly flavored the better.

If at the end of dinner she takes cheese, showing special partiality for the odorous camembert, then, says the Parisian observer, there can be no manner of doubt about it—she is a lady of uncertain age.—Paris Cor. New York Sun.

The Meanest Man Bill.

They were discussing the freak bills that get themselves introduced into congress every year when a Colorado representative said:

"Sometimes I think the greatest boon we could have in this country would be the adoption of a federal statute in accordance with a bill as odd character in Colorado as a wanted me to offer to the state legislature. It was entitled the meanest man bill and provided for an election in every county each year to determine who was the meanest man in the county. The man receiving the highest vote was to be hanged. Think of the good such a statute would do! Just consider what decent citizens all the people would be who received a few scattering votes! And those who stood any chance of leading the ticket would move away. In two or three years every place where the law was in operation would become a model community."—New York Press.

Music of Street Boys.

One point regarding street music puzzles the writer. How does the average small boy manage to add to his repertoire the latest song from the latest musical comedy within a day or two of its production at a west end theater? It is hardly likely that he attends the theater to hear it at first hand. One can hardly imagine him having the money to learn it that way. And as for those important factors in musical education, the gramophones, the park bands and the barrel organs, he generally forestalls them by weeks. Whence then does he gain his knowledge? It is as mysterious as the passage of news in the Indian bazaar before the official telegrams have arrived.—London Spectator.

Facilities to Economize.

"Our forefathers lived much more simply than we did," said the man who takes everything seriously. "They did not hesitate to economize."

"Yes, but look at the room they had to economize in. You couldn't expect us to churn in a flat or keep chickens and a garden on the fire escape, could you?"—Washington Star.

BROODING TURKS ARTIFICIALLY.

Have the brooder dry, bedded with dry loamy sand and the hover heat up to 90 to 95 degrees, the poult's actions being criterion as to whether heat is low or high. Transfer from incubator in covered basket, slip poults under hover and confine at first to nursery.

Twelve to fifteen to brooder is correct, and the operator should note two peculiarities at once—poults are slow to learn to eat and do not take to hover readily.

To meet the first difficulty use several brooder chicks as leaders, and they soon teach the little turks to eat and drink.

To meet the second leave flap of hover open and push poults under often.

It may be found necessary to put them inside and run a wire screen around at night or they will wander out, pile up in a corner and get crushed or chilled.

We picture the hover we like the best for poults. It is ten inches high, twenty-two inches in diameter, free underneath, top heat, heat comes from lamp outside, and all fumes are piped out. Temperature should be dropped 10 degrees weekly until down to 70 degrees, where it should stand until poults are six to eight weeks old, when hover may be removed and the poults have the whole brooder with a roomy outside caged run, the brooder to be changed to fresh ground often.

At twelve to sixteen weeks poults may be turned loose, but they must be watched, as they may not be able to find their way back.

The brooder shown is 12 by 4 feet, a desirable size and style. It stands on the line of an orchard and alfalfa field, an ideal location.

Turkey brooders must especially be kept clean, so filth and foul air kill poults quickly. Fresh water, grit and charcoal should be kept before them, and nothing is better for first feed than dry sweet homemade breadcrumbs, and Mother Turkey's rule, "Feed little, but often," is the best to follow.

LIME FOR POULTRY.

A hen's bill of fare is naturally composed of animal, vegetable and mineral matter, the latter being summed up in the word—ash.

Some of this mineral matter she extracts from food and water, and it goes to aid digestion, is found in blood and tissue, but most of it, in the form of lime, builds bone and makes egg shell.

Through the depletion of the soil of certain mineral elements and increased egg production, fowls, especially in winter, do not get sufficient lime, and it must be supplied or the hen will lay soft shelled eggs or eat the eggshell to make the best.

The eggshell contains 90 per cent calcareous material, arranged in minute crystals, between which are pores, through which air and moisture pass.

Seashells contain about the same per cent of phosphate of lime and carbonate of lime as an eggshell, the only difference being that the egg shell has 1.5 per cent more animal matter, which is furnished by the albumen of the eggshell.

Clean oyster shell, cracked the necessary size, is best fitted to supply hens. This essential mineral element should be kept before them at all times, but it must not be substituted for grit, as it has no cutting edge and soon grinds fine.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

The 1,200 county fairs of the United States last year showed total receipts amounting to $[illegible]. The poultry entries at some of them reached 8,000.

The cut of a capon generally heals in about ten days and no stitching is necessary. At times wind puff will appear, and the air should be drawn off by pricking the distended skin.

The Ornithologists' union declares pheasants will soon be extinct. The guinea has already taken its place in the restaurants, and it might be wise for this bird society to keep mum for the sake of the guinea industry.

A few dirty eggs in a crate or box let spoil the appearance of the whole bunch and lower the value, even if they are all fresh. Cider vinegar is a good egg cleanser, but soiled eggs should really be used for home cooking as soon as found.

Many have the hallucination that the poultry business, like perpetual motion, runs itself. Without serious planning or a practical system, or a working knowledge of poultry culture, they tumble into it and then come bumps and a bust up.

According to the census, there are [illegible] ostriches in the United States, divided among Arizona, California, Arkansas, Texas and Florida. But the census does not include the flourishing Bloomsburg (Pa.) plant, the only ostrich farm in the east.

The New York Produce Review makes great capital over the arrest of an Indiana farmer for selling bad eggs to a grocer. Let's see—how many New York and Philadelphia egg (egg) men have been fined or sent to the penitentiary for selling tile [illegible] and spots, [illegible] remember them all. Here [illegible]

When some persons note the high price of winter eggs they conclude that all a poultryman does to get these eggs is to wave a magic wand and they come and are sold at a great profit. Winter eggs cost most in money, planning and work, but some fellows think different until they try the easy game and bust up.

At the late Crystal palace show the first in numbers was the Orpington, 916 being exhibited. Second in popularity was the Wyandotte, 612 being entered. This is speaking volumes for the Wyandotte, an American breed, for the Orpington originated in England and is England's popular white meated market fowl.

The farm papers are taking more interest than formerly in poultry. These papers have a great opportunity to spread reliable poultry information, to improve the farm flock and thus to raise the [illegible] poultry product. The day is coming when every owner of consequence will have an up to date poultry department.

The department of agriculture, Washington, predicts that 1920 will see the extinction [illegible] of the present rate of [illegible] There is [illegible] the government will [illegible] keep much over [illegible] [illegible] paid to the fowl by the [illegible]

DON'TS.

Don't set a high priced incubator in a damp cellar. It's the worst place for a fire to start, and the damp ferments the incubator apart.

Don't be quick to blame the rooster for infertiles. There are a number of causes, and the chief are overfat, inbreeding and forcing hens for heavy winter laying.

Don't use poor oil in brooder and incubator lamps. It smokes, gives poor heat, may explode or go out and a whole hatch or brood may be killed. Buy the best oil by the barrel. It pays.

Don't fail to test eggs under setting hens. A whole hatch of setting may be infertile. Many pet number[s] of eggs and thus discover any pens that are low in fertility or that give weak chicks or chicks dead in the shell.

THE SUPPLANTER
A Modern Romance
By WILMOT KAYE

CHAPTER II.

lent a helping hand when her sole intention had been to perform an act of kindness, by saving Hilda from worry.

She approached the sleeping girl and looked at her with deep affection. She remembered their lifelong friendship, and just for the moment she wavered. Her hand was outstretched to awaken her so that she could tell of the good fortune, but she suddenly drew back. Her deep grey eyes hardened, and she moved silently away. She quickly put on her hat and coat, and having scribbled a few lines to the effect that she would not be late, she placed the paper where Hilda would see it when she awoke.

(To be continued.)

The Lovelorn Lawyer to His Lady.

One loving heart and prayed that you would be

CAN MANUFACTURE GOLD.

Parisian Claims to Have Discovered Important Secret.

A Paris wizard, M. Verley, claims to have discovered the secret of manufacturing gold out of the baser metals. He warns the public that he is not to be compared with Lemoine, the diamond fakir, nor with any alchemist of the past who pretended to have discovered the philosophers stone. His invention, he declares, is a serious one.

He has applied for a patent, and all the governments in the world are to be invited to a conference to decide upon this epoch-making revelation. Paris, hereafter, will be the greatest gold mine in the world. It will turn out tons of the yellow metal from mere scrap iron.

The facility with which gold can be produced his frightened him. It will reduce the value to that of the baser metals. He said that he intended to request the different governments of the world to hold a conference for the purpose of making of gold a state monopoly, which will alone keep up the price.

M. Verley says that he has applied for a patent in every country, but under an inviolable seal. What this means is as mysterious as the rest. He said that he was leaving for London to demonstrate the reality of his discovery by experiments in the presence of English scientists. Needless to say the alleged discovery is received here with a due amount of scepticism.

The Sugar Habit.

Every morning for the past year, Chas. Schaefer, driver of a milk wagon, has stopped at the same restaurant in New York and before diving he always brought out a generous supply of lump sugar for his horses. One day last week he forgot the sugar. The horses waited for some time for him to come out, and when he did not appear they decided to enter the restaurant. The large wagon collided with a showcase in front of a haberdashery store next door and did about $200 damage.

100 PERSONS CURED OF ECZEMA

Within the past few months over 100 persons have written to the Zam-Buk Co. reporting their cure of eczema, rashes and skin diseases by Zam-Buk!

Does this not prove that Zam-Buk is something different?

Don't you need it in your household?

Miss Mary McCann, 613 St. Catherine Street W., Montreal, says: "I do not have words powerful enough to express my gratitude to Zam-Buk. Eczema broke out on my scalp and hands. The irritation of the scalp was so bad that I could not sleep or rest, and I feared I should have to have my hair cut off. On my hands the disease appeared in sore patches, the burning and itching of which drove me many times to spells of weeping. I went to the dispensary, but they referred me to a skin specialist, who said that mine was as bad a case of eczema as he had seen. He gave me some ointment, and then a second lot, but neither gave me any relief. ..."

Poor Old Mother.

In the correspondence column of a contemporary there recently appeared a question by a son-in-law with whom his wife's mother had been living as to whether other members of the family (three sons) who were said to be able though unwilling, could be compelled to bear a portion of the expense ... had been living with one of the sons, and the brother-in-law had been asked if she could be boarded in his house so that the daughter might look after her. This was agreed to, but the board money was not paid, and after eighteen months of squabbling the question was asked. The answer was diplomatic, namely, that the matter was one which required most judicious handling, and that a solicitor should be consulted. Had the person in charge of the question column known of the Canadian Government Annuities System the wisest thing he could have done would have been to recommend the purchase of a Government Annuity. At her age (75) an annuity of $300 (75 dollars every three months) payable as long as she might live, could have been purchased for $1,... The mother could then have lived happily with her daughter for the remainder, have regarded the mother's presence in the home, a boon rather than a burden, and the family ties would have remained unbroken. But best of all, the comfort and happiness of the dear old mother, who had nursed them in their infancy, had, perhaps, spent many a sleepless night in anxious attendance upon them when the "Dread Messenger" was hovering near, ready to snatch them away from her, and who had guided their young footsteps in the straight and narrow path—priceless services—would then have been secured for all time. Happily in Canada cases of this kind are few and they will be still fewer in the years to come if the boys and girls of today can only be induced to pay into the Annuities System a few cents each week ...

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pain, but the Trouble Lies in the Blood.

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to cold, the raw, damp winds start the aches and twinges, or in the more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism. The trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be driven out. ...

Complimentary Banquet

Is A Great Event

Unqualified success marked the complimentary banquet tendered by the citizens of Vermilion Friday evening at the Brunswick hotel to His Excellency Count de Topor and Messrs Morris and Outram. There were about [illegible] people sat at the festive board and the function proved to be highly enjoyable throughout. Mrs. Williams provided a menu which would reflect credit upon the best hostlers in the country - there did not appear to be anything missing from the line of viands presented.

Dr. G. H. W. Ryan was chairman and as usual discharged that duty with becoming dignity. To his right sat His Excellency, Count de Topor and then His Worship Mayor Rosborough and Dawson Stephens, President of the Board of Trade. To the chairman's left sat in order, Messrs Outram, Morris, and H. N. Stephens, Ex-Mayor. The tables were tastily set out with ferns and flowers and the scene when the guests were all seated was a very pretty one. After the post prandial proceedings, the chairman proposed the toast to the King which found response in the gathering singing "God Save the King". "Our country" was then proposed by ex-Mayor Stephens and brought an excellent reply from the Hon. Mr. Mortimer. His Worship the Mayor had the honor of proposing the toast to the distinguished guests of the evening. Excellent and pointed addresses were made by Count de Topor and Messrs. Morris and Outram, all breathing enthusiasm as to the prospects in view for the town and district of Vermilion. Vermilion has a bright future but that future rests largely in the hands of the people themselves.

"Vermilion" was proposed by M. A. Brinacombe and responded to by Messrs. J. D. Stephens, W. J. Phelps, and H. W. Scott. "The Professions" proposed by R. A. Pilkie brought responses from Messrs. Murray and Morrison, the latter outlining in general the scheme of organization of the proposed boosters club. H. H. Parker proposed "The business and financial institutions" which was responded to by Messrs. A. F. Turner, W. J. Seed and R. S. Gates. "The Press" was proposed by the chairman and responded to by S. R. P. Cooper of the Vermilion Standard. The toast to the ladies fell to Mr. W. S. Cash and the response to Dr. G. W. Payne. Excellent selections were rendered during the banquet by the Vermilion orchestra. A vote of thanks was tendered them for the programme given. The vocalists were Messrs Pilkie, [illegible] and Crows, each one of whom was heartily encored. The function was brought to a close by all singing "We'll all the Old Chariot Along"

10,000 Club Now A Reality

His Excellency Count de Topor Hon. President

Campaign Starts May 31st.

Practically all the business men of the town were out to the big meeting Tuesday night in the town hall, held to complete the organization of Vermilion's Ten Thousand Club. Dr. Ryan was moved to the chair and J. W. G. Morrison appointed Secretary of the meeting. The report of the committee was adopted and the election of officers proceeded with.

The first officers of the Club were recorded as follows: —

Hon. Pres. - His Excellency Count de Topor
Pres. - Dr. G. H. W. Ryan.
1st. V-Pres. - W. E. MacKenzie.
2nd. V-Pres. - Roy West.
Secy-Treas: — Cedric A. Morris.
Executive Committee— M. A. Brinacombe, F. C. Long, and H. N. Stephens.

The Club will meet every Friday night in the Town Hall, the date of the first meeting is set for May 31st. so as to enable the committee to bring in a full report regarding the plans and actions of the club for the campaign.

The competition for selection of a motto was left open until the night of Friday, May 31st, so as to give all a chance to get their thinkers busy.

A membership list was opened and the chairman announced that the club started out with a paid membership of 50. The fee is $1.00 and 50c per month.

General discussions were in order and numerous important suggestions were offered by the different speakers.

The real work of the club will commence at the next meeting at which the work for the season will be formulated.

Sad Burning Fatality West of Town

A very sad fatality occurred on the farm of George Rutherford, a few miles west of Vermilion, Monday about 3 p.m., when his wife was so seriously burned that death resulted.

The circumstances are particularly heartrending as it was not till two hours afterwards that the sufferer's condition was discovered by one of the girls at Mr. [illegible], a neighbor, who went to the house on an errand. She found Mrs. Rutherford lying on the sofa wrapped in a sheet and horribly burned. She ran home to tell her parents and Dr. Ryan was immediately called. Although all possible was done for the sufferer she passed away during the early hours of Tuesday morning.

The deceased was conscious for some hours and was able to relate how the accident happened. It appears that she was engaged in making soap and had fire under two large cauldrons outside, apparently the fire got away and in attempting to prevent it spreading her clothes took fire. Although frightfully burned the deceased took her little child into the house and procuring a sheet wrapped herself in it and resignedly lay down on the sofa.

Funeral services will be held at the family home, Thursday May 23 and interment to take place in the Vermilion Cemetery.

Mrs. Rutherford was married four years ago and leaves a husband and one child. She came west from Ontario. The awful affair has aroused genuine sympathy throughout the neighborhood. Deceased was only 27 years of age.

Cured of Kidney Trouble

Mrs Alex Moore, of James St., Oxford N. S. says: "Booth's Kidney Pills cured our little daughter, Christina age 6 years of many symptoms of kidney weakness. She complained of a sore back, the kidney secretions were frequent and uncontrollable, especially at night. Her stomach was weak and her appetite poor. This caused her to have frequent headaches and the least exertion would tire her. We had tried many remedies, but she did not improve. Finally we heard of Booth's Kidney Pills and procured a box. In a short time she was well and does not now complain about her back, the kidney secretions have become normal, and she plays around the house with no apparent fatigue. We always recommend Booth's Kidney Pills"

HAIR THAT FASCINATES

Who Wants Lustrous Hair Full of Life and Beauty

Start now madam, this is just the month to begin to acquire a glorious head of hair of which you will be justly proud during the social events of winter-time.

If you haven't used Parisian Sage you aren't on the high road to hair beauty. Parisian Sage is the most delightful preparation that destroys the dandruff germs and by so doing removes in a short time the cause of dandruff, falling hair, itching scalp, faded and lifeless hair.

Dandruff germs are obstructionists; they prevent the hair from receiving its proper nourishment by ravenously devouring the same nourishment. Use Parisian Sage for one week and note the wonderful improvement. F. C. Long guarantees it, 50c a bottle.

No More Manure to be Dumped on Grade—Electrician's Salary is Raised

The regular monthly meeting of the Council took place Monday night in the council chamber of the town hall. His Worship Mayor Rosborough in the chair and all members of the board present with the exception of Coun. McLay who was out of town. Minutes of last regular and special meetings were read and approved.

Motion was passed authorizing Mayor and Secy-treas. to sign contract with Imperial Oil Co. for the supply of oil for Electric Light Plant for one year. The Town by so doing saves 5 per cent on present prices.

By-Law 124 was up for discussion and given two readings.

Secy was instructed to notify the livery barns and others that until further notice no more manure is to be dumped on the sides of the grades on the road at the foot of the hill crossing the valley.

A motion setting the flat rate for one to three lights was carried rate being as follows: 1 light $1; 2 lights $1.75 and 3 lights $2.25.

The salary of electrician J. Welsh was increased to $100 per month to take effect June 1st.

After the passing of a heavy list of accounts, chiefly in connection with Electric Plant, the meeting adjourned.

What Makes You Tired

So Tired That Even Sleep Fails to Restore

There Are Poisons in the Blood That Can be Removed by

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You get tired. That is only natural whether you work with brain or muscle. But when you are not rested by a night's sleep there is something wrong.

The process of living is something like the burning of a fire. When the nerve cells are consumed by the activity of life and work there is left in the system an ash in the form of poisonous waste matter. These poisons in the system cause pain and give rise to feelings of fatigue.

Nothing will so quickly sweep these poisons from the system as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. ... and the kidneys ...

The blood is purified, the waste matter which has been clogging and retarding the organs of digestion is ... Headaches and ... appetite ... digestion improves and you feel fine ...

... box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills ... promptness and certainty with which this great medicine cleanses the filtering and excretory organs and restores to health and vigor the whole digestive system. One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE RAILWAY QUESTION.

Reckless Bonusing of Branch Lines—The Question Carefully Considered.

The present railway situation calls for careful consideration. On the one hand the development of Northwestern Canada demands railway facilities, and on the other it is possible that railroads may be constructed in wrong districts and more important localities be neglected. The fact is undeniable that hundreds of miles of branch roads have been and are being constructed that cannot possibly pay the interest on the first cost, to say nothing of the cost of equipment and operation. Look at the parallel lines through the three western provinces. In many places there are three lines where the whole of the traffic obtainable in the district is only sufficient for one. Many of these roads are not ten miles apart and in several places they are not two.

On examining any good railroad map of Western Canada we find that these parallel lines aggregate hundreds of miles of railway, while there are many thousands of square miles of virgin territory entirely without the railroad facilities they so urgently need and which they must have or the continued development of the country will be seriously checked.

The ... from the facility ... charters can be obtained and the bonusing system ... half a dozen men ... meet and decide to get a charter for a railway. They decide on a scheme and ask the government for a charter ... lobbying of parliament or legislature and they get all they ask for. They then ask for a bonus and get a bond guarantee for $13,000 a mile. The next step is to organize a construction company among themselves. The bonds are sold, the cash is in hand and the contracts for construction ...

Unnecessary Questions.

The damage suit was on, and Hiddad's chauffeur was testifying for the plaintiff.

CANADA IN THE FRONT

Gratifying Increase in Trade Between the United Kingdom and Her First Dominion.

A review of the shipping trade of the past year between the United Kingdom and the various colonies gives a large predominance to Canadian business, as far as tonnage is concerned. The latest figures show that the total tonnage of vessels cleared with cargoes from the United Kingdom to Canada during the year ended 31st December, 1911, was 2,372,990, an increase of 138,394 tons, or 6 per cent. over the previous year, and 388,517 tons, or 19.6 per cent over the year 1909. Going the other way a tonnage of 2,949,743 was cleared from Canada to the United Kingdom, being 33,695 tons, or 1.2 per cent greater than 1910 and 301,467 tons or 12.1 per cent greater than 1909.

In the following table Canada's shipments to the Old Country and vice versa are compared with those of other dominions:

INSEPARABLE INTERESTS

Rural and Industrial Classes Must Work Together

The interest of the industrial classes interlocks closely with that of the farmer. The half million hardy factory employes and families of Canada consume as much as sixty million dollars worth of the products of the farm annually. This shows the interest of city and rural population in each other. There is no more mistaken idea than that which regards the interests of the city and country population as being opposed. Nothing could be clearer than that the farmer and his city cousin are inter-dependent, the thing which is good for one is good for the other, and that which is bad for the one is hurtful to the other. Why should the agriculturist oppose the industrial development of our country. To take the instance of this inter-dependence that is closest at hand, the growth and progress of Winnipeg means as much to the farmers who are within trading distance of the city as the increase of the rural population within trading distance means to the merchants and tradesmen of Winnipeg, and this is very much in deed. The ... people of Winnipeg must be fed and a considerable part of the task of feeding them devolves upon the farmers who live near enough to send their products to the Winnipeg market, a market admitted to be one of the best for all sorts of farm products. There is in fact an almost constant shortage of such farm products as milk, eggs, poultry, fresh vegetables in the Winnipeg market. Milk is easy to produce in the country about Winnipeg and yet seven thousand pounds of milk are brought in each day for the use of Winnipeg people from Minneapolis. Winnipeg is but typical of every other Western city.

Foe or Friend?

Friend It Was to Be

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Bad luck had followed Joe Pebble for three years—in fact, ever since he had tired of the monotony of supporting his wife and her father on his wages as a cattle herder and had suddenly deserted them to follow the call of his old free life.

He had simply disappeared to let them think what they would of him. He had left all the money that he possessed except a single silver dollar, and he had used his own horse to ride away from them.

Bad luck had followed him in his rovings. He had been unhappy in his freedom. His heart ached for the sweet companionship of Gertrude, his wife, and for the placid philosophy of the good natured old man, her father.

Today he was riding down a ravine among the Tepee hills. Once more he was free. He had discharged himself from a ranch on the western side of the watershed and was riding forth on one of those strange, restless quests for new scenes which had become a habit with him since he had deserted his wife. Happiness he never expected to regain.

He drew rein there and looked through an opening down upon a pleasant alluvial plain dotted with cattle. A low adobe ranch house was there, surrounded by barns and a corral. Smoke wreathed up from a chimney. It looked very peaceful and pleasant—the sort of home he and Gertie had planned before. A lump came into his throat, and he brushed his brown hand across his wet eyes. Then his young face sank into those stern, brooding lines that had replaced the old careless expression.

Joe Tribble, as he called himself, rode on. A few yards farther on his horse stumbled and fell so suddenly that Joe was pitched over his head, to fall in a crushed heap among some rocks. He lay very still, while the horse scrambled to his feet, sniffed at his master's unconscious form and then limped away for assistance, whinnying pitifully.

Joe opened his eyes upon darkness. There was a bandage over his eyes, and he could see nothing, but he knew that he rested upon a soft bed. A large cool hand touched his wrist, and a finger pressed upon his pulse.

"Doctor," Joe huskily whispered.

"Ah!" said a mellow voice. "Coming around, are you? Feel pretty well banged to pieces?"

"Pretty sore," admitted Joe. "What's the matter with my eyes?"

"You fell on a lot of broken rocks and got some splinters in your eyes. You can't come into the light until they've healed up a bit. Nothing to worry about; mere scratches. You have got a broken ankle, though."

"Where am I?" was Joe's next question.

"At a ranch close by the spot where your horse threw you. Pretty intelligent beast, that horse! Came limping down here to the ranch and almost told Mr. Smith what had happened. You can bet he's well taken care of too!"

"Poor old Starbrow!" murmured Joe. Then, turning to the doctor, he asked in a low voice, "Where can I stay—here?"

"Oh, yes! You can't be moved until your ankle is better," said the doctor decisively.

The doctor left the room, and Joe heard him talking to some one in another room. There were other voices that seemed to vibrate strangely on his hearing. What memories of the past they revived! Whose voices did they resemble?

He tormented himself with these questions until he fell asleep from sheer exhaustion. He was awakened after a refreshing sleep by the sound of a pump handle creaking outside. Shortly afterward a heavy, deliberate footfall entered his room, and he was conscious that some one was bending over him.

"Well, stranger," said a deep, resonant voice, "I reckon you're awake now?"

"Who are you?" was Joe's hurried question.

There was a little pause before the answer came. "My name's Smith. Why?"

"Nothing, only I thought it sounded—like—somebody I used to know," murmured Joe, sinking back upon his pillow.

"I wonder if you wouldn't like me to help you enter those clothes you got on and get you into bed in a decent way?" went on the voice, and when Joe gratefully assented the owner of the voice helped him with a woman's tenderness to undress and clothed him in clean underwear and a clean coarse nightshirt.

"I'm mightily obliged to you, stranger," murmured Joe drowsily as he sank on his pillow after swallowing a cup of hot broth.

"You're welcome," said the other solemnly, and, tiptoeing out, he closed the door.

Joe did not awake again until the next morning. He knew that the windows were wide open, for he breathed the fresh, sweet air, and he could hear the song of birds. His eyelids felt very stiff and sore, and he was grateful for the bandage that covered them.

Mr. Smith came in presently and, after a pleasant greeting to the injured man, bathed his face and hands and brought some breakfast to him.

Joe bit into a hot corn muffin, and his hand fell upon the counterpane. He turned his blindfolded eyes toward the stranger.

"Who made these muffins?" he asked in a choking voice.

There was a hesitating silence before Mr. Smith replied. Then, "My daughter made them," he replied.

"Your daughter! Why—who—excuse me," stumbled Joe, "but they are like those my wife makes, and I never tasted any others like 'em!" He hastily resumed his breakfast, and the portion of his face below the bandage glowed redly.

Mr. Smith said nothing.

When the doctor appeared he declared that Joe had a little fever, and he changed his medicine. Once more Joe heard three voices in consultation in the next room. He could now recognize Smith's voice and that of the doctor, but the third one was that of a woman, pitched low and soft, and eluded his searching mind.

"Where have I heard that voice before?" he asked himself again and again as the days passed by, but the answer did not come—then.

During those long days and nights of pain and helplessness Joe Pebble had leisure to think over what he had done, and he resolved that when he recovered that he would go north again and endeavor to become reconciled to his wife and her father.

The thought of this coming journey did much to hasten his recovery.

On the evening of this particular day—a Sunday it was—he lay there alone in the room. Presently Smith came in and talked to him. They talked on various matters, and finally Joe told him about his former life in Wyoming and ended by confiding his sin to the old man. He told it all—his wild longing for freedom, how he had fought it for days before making up his mind to leave his wife and how, after the irrevocable step had been taken, of the remorse he had suffered.

"I think of them two helpless ones day and night," he groaned. "What has become of them? A coyote wouldn't have acted meaner'n I did. Don't God ever give folks a chance to make good when they've sinned?"

The elder man did not answer for a long time. Then he arose and bent over the bed for a brief instant. "I believe he does, son, I believe he will," he said solemnly, and Joe heard him pass from the room and close the door.

From the room overhead he heard the murmur of voices long into the night. They were talking when he fell asleep, and once he started wide awake because he thought he heard a woman's sobs. "Don't cry, Gertie, everything is all right," he murmured drowsily and went to sleep again.

The next day the doctor came and removed the bandage.

After the doctor had gone Joe waited impatiently for Mr. Smith to come in. He was eager to see the face of the man who had been so kind to him.

All at once a bulky form filled the doorway, and Mr. Smith's slow, deliberate step approached the bed. In the dim light Joe's eager eyes did not at first recognize him, then he sat bolt upright in bed and stared with whitening face into the kind, forgiving eyes of—his father in law.

"Father!" he murmured brokenly and hid his face in his hands.

"Son!" said the older man solemnly, and he laid his hand upon Joe's dark hair in the old familiar caress, for the two had been very fond of each other.

"It has been you all along?" asked Joe after awhile.

"Yes," said the other. And in a few words he told the repentant man that after his desertion Gertrude and he had left Wyoming and come down into Texas to start anew. The old man had a little money, with which he bought the ranch. They had never expected to see Joe again. When they recognized him in the injured stranger whom Starbrow had led them to they had hastily assumed the name of Smith for the time being.

"And Gertrude?" asked Joe brokenly. "Can she remember me and believe me to become what she's worthy of?"

"I'm here, Joe!" came Gertrude's voice in answer.

SHIP CARVING.

An Art That Went Out with the Old Wooden Warships.

An almost forgotten profession is that of ship carving. For many centuries, down to the beginning of the nineteenth, the ornamentation of vessels, especially men of war, was profuse, intricate and florid. The carving on the United States line of battle ship America, launched in 1782 and presented to France, will give some idea of the extent to which this was carried.

The figurehead was a female figure crowned with laurel representing America. The right arm was raised, pointing to heaven. On the left arm was a buckler with a blue ground carrying thirteen stars. On the stern of the ship under the cabin windows appeared two large figures in bas-relief representing "Tyranny" and "Oppression" bound and bleeding on the ground. On the back of the starboard quarter was a large figure of "Mars." On the highest part of the stern appeared "Wisdom" and above her head an owl.

Philadelphia furnished not only the greatest ship designer in the United States, but also the best ship carver in the world, William Rush. In this field he was without a rival, and to a wonderful technical skill he added an artistic sense of beauty and genius for composition.

He was the first carver to give an idea of life and motion to a ship's figurehead. Each of his figureheads was either the lifelike representation of a person or some symbolic conception expressed in exquisite carving. His most noted productions were "Nature" for the Constellation, the "Genius of the United States" for the frigate of that name and "The River God" for the East India ship Ganges. These figureheads were nine feet high and could be removed for repair or in action.—Harper's Weekly.

A SARTORIAL TRAGEDY.

The Lady Accepted a Flower and Lost Her Beautiful Figure.

In London Truth of March 8, 1877, Henry Labouchere told this story of a toilet calamity due to the feminine fashion of those days:

At a dinner party given lately in Paris one lady was remarked above all others for the elegance of her figure and the perfection of her toilet. During the mauvais quart d'heure before dinner she was surrounded by a host of admirers, and one less bashful than the rest ventured to offer her the flower from his buttonhole. It was accepted, but as the "princess robe" worn by the graceful creature was laced behind it was necessary to fasten the flower to the front of her dress with a pin. The operation was successfully performed, and the fair lady was led in to dinner by the donor of the flower. They were hardly seated when he heard a curious sound like the gentle sighing of the wind, and on turning toward his partner he saw with horror that the lovely figure was getting "small by degrees and beautifully less." The rounded form had disappeared before the soup was over, and long before the first entree the once creaseless garment hung in great folds about a scraggy framework! It seems that the newest dresses for "slight" ladies are made with air tight linings and inflated until the required degree of embonpoint is attained. The unfortunate lady mentioned above had forgotten this detail when she fastened the fatal flower to her bosom with a pin, hence the collapse.

A City of the Dead.

Bath, from which city Dickens carried away the immortal names of Pickwick and Snodgrass, holds relics of the master. His tobacco jar and beer jug are still piously preserved at the Saracen's Head. But, though Dickens wrote gloriously of Bath, he never really liked the place.

"Landor's ghost goes along the silent streets here before me," he writes in 1869. * * * "The place looks to me like a cemetery which the dead have succeeded in rising and taking. Having built streets of their old gravestones, they wander about, scarcely trying to 'look alive.' A dead failure."

Read Only Women Authors.

Misandry occasionally has its uses. A Russian lady, Mme. Kaleasroff, who died in 1901 in St. Petersburg, would not allow any book written by a man to enter her house. She was, however, a voracious reader and wealthy enough to satisfy her cravings in this direction. On her death her library was found to contain nearly 18,000 volumes, all written by women. This was said at the time to be the most extensive collection of this kind ever formed.

Banzai.

The word "banzai" is the Japanese cry of joy, victory or applause. It is the equivalent of the English "hurrah," the French "vive" and the German "hoch." The word received its first marked prominence in our part of the world during the Russo-Japanese war, throughout which historic struggle it was heard on many triumphant fields.

Great Expectations.

"Your son appears to be a young man of great expectations."

"Yes. He puts in his spare time writing speeches which he will have to deliver at the laying of cornerstones when he becomes president."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Mean.

"He tried to kiss me. I can't understand it."

"Neither can I, dear."

"You cat!"—Puttman's Weekly.

CHURCH STEEPLES.

And the Ancient Mountain Peak Shrines of the Storm God.

There is a theory which finds the spire of the New England meeting house in the mountain peaks of Arabia.

Tracing back the process of evolution, we come first to London, where the clean sweep of the great fire gave Sir Christopher Wren his opportunity to experiment in steeples, and then Venice, where the campanile is a shining example of a tower beside a church, but separate from it, and then to Alexandria, where the famous lighthouse on the isle of Pharos contributed to the religion of Mohammed both the form and the name of the minaret, and then to the tower of Babel at Borsippa and the zikkurats of the temples of Babylonia and Assyria. A zikkurat is a huge quadrangular mass of brick, rising in diminishing stories—as a child places a big block on the floor and puts a smaller one on it and on that a smaller still—and ascended by a winding balustraded stair to a shrine on top.

This, according to the theory, was the ritual equivalent of a mountain.

Into the flat lands between the Tigris and Euphrates came the ancestors of the Babylonians and Assyrians out of the mountains of Arabia. There they had worshipped the storm god, who dwelt upon the heights among the clouds, with whom they communed, like Moses, by climbing up and making their offerings and saying their prayers upon the summit. And because there were no mountains in their new country they erected beside every temple a little mountain in the yard. Thus the zikkurat, and then the minaret, and then the campanile and then the steeple of the parish church.—George Hodges in Atlantic Magazine.

TANGIER ISLAND.

Where the People Do Without Jails, Lawyers, Horses and Cows.

There is a little island in Chesapeake bay, 125 miles south of Baltimore, where the world has stood still for more than a hundred years. Tangier island is five miles long and much less than a mile wide, but more than 1,200 people live on it. There is only one street, nine feet wide, without sidewalks, and the houses are all built along this street with narrow canals of the deep water of the bay between each two houses. There is only one church, presided over by a Methodist minister, and only one doctor, and there is no cemetery, the dead of each family being buried in the yard. There is no newspaper, no jail, no lockup and no lawyers nor any need for them. Everybody is deeply religious, and profanity is punished with a fine imposed by the deacon of the church.

The men go fishing and crabbing in ... early on Monday mornings and do not come home until Saturdays, when they have marketed their sea harvests in towns on the mainland. There are no gardens, no horses or cows, but plenty of chickens are raised. Fuel is supplied to the islanders by sloops, which come very month or so loaded with wood and anchor off Tangier, sending small boats piled with cordwood and kindlings to every house by means of the little canals. The women wear sunbonnets and go barefooted, and there is an organ in nearly every home. Tangier was first settled by white people in 1608 and before that time was occupied by the Indians.—Exchange.

Barring the Evil Spirits.

The Chinese believe that evil spirits are able to move only in straight lines and that they cannot penetrate through solid matter; therefore the problem of keeping them out of a dwelling or a garden seems to them a simple matter. On passing through the entrance of the ordinary middle class home in China it is necessary to turn to the right or left because of a fixed screen, the purpose of which, according to Popular Mechanics, is to keep evil spirits out. Likewise just at the back of the entrance to a walled garden may sometimes be found another wall erected for the same purpose.

Love Matches.

"I argued and wrangled about love matches with Miss Marie Corelli one whole day in her old fashioned Stratford home," said a prominent woman magazine writer, "but she rather got the better of me at the end with an epigram:

"'She who marries for love,' Miss Corelli said, 'enters heaven with her eyes shut. She who marries without love enters hell with them open.'"

Mixed Metaphors.

"Jorkins certainly did get all mixed up when somebody asked if he hadn't some unpleasant family secrets hidden."

"What did he say?"

"He said he was ready to admit his family had their skeleton in a closet and would make no bones about it either."—Baltimore American.

Perilous Comparison.

"Now," said the professor of astronomy, who was trying to be entertaining, "the most beautiful star I know of is"—

"Be careful, professor," whispered the hostess, "the lady to whom you are speaking is a prima donna."—Washington Star.

A Closed Mouth.

Man is a good deal like a fish. You know, the fish would never get into very serious trouble if it kept its mouth shut.

Order and falsehood cannot subsist together.—Cicero.

STORIES OF O. HENRY.

A Promised Visit and the Droll Way It Was Evaded.

Wherever one goes one hears a story of the late O. Henry, the writer. Every one in magazine circles hereabouts knew him, and most had had a personal experience or two. Somehow every story illuminates the man. They are not merely humorous tales, but through them one catches a glimpse of his characteristics, his broad humanity or his generosity or his love of the city. Robert H. Davis, the magazine man, related that on one occasion he went a visiting with O. Henry down on Long Island.

"It was a very hot day," said Davis. "We had climbed an everlasting hill. Another greater hill stretched before us. The sun was a dish of brass, and dust and heat and clicking insects rose from the ground. We sat on a fence to rest.

"'Is there anything else I can show you?' I asked him.

"'Yes,' said Henry, wiping his forehead. 'Show me a return ticket to New York.'

"On one occasion he had promised to spend the week end with Gilman Hall at his country place in Jersey. Mr. Hall had invited him several times. When Henry finally accepted Hall gave him the most precise directions.

"'Take a 3 o'clock train on Friday afternoon,' said Mr. Hall, 'and I will meet you with the carryall at the station.'

"At 11 o'clock on Friday morning Mr. Hall was called to the telephone in his country home. The boy at the railroad station drawlingly informed him that there was a telegram for him, signed 'O. Henry.'

"'Read it,' commanded Mr. Hall, and the boy's sleepy voice buzzed over the wire.

"'New York,' he read. 'Twenty-third street substation, Western Union Telegraph company, 10:30 a. m. Addressed Gilman Hall, Far Out, N. J. Dear Hall—I have missed the 3 o'clock train. Signed, O. Henry.'

"Neither Henry nor Hall ever referred to the telegram or the evaded visit in subsequent talks."—New York Letter to Cincinnati Times-Star.

His Rare Old Painting.

Speaking of fake antiques and forged paintings an art amateur said:

"There is an American who bought a Raphael in Rome some years ago. The Italian law prohibits the exportation of masterpieces, and the American had the happy idea of getting the Raphael painted over. This was accordingly done. The rare old painting reached New York in the guise of a modern snow scene.

"Then the restorer, under the watchful owner's eye, set to work on it. With a sponge dipped in turpentine he proceeded to rub the snow scene off. He sponged it off readily, but he sponged a bit of the Raphael off, too—and, behold, underneath the Raphael a portrait of Marconi was revealed."—Washington Star.

The Dutch at Church.

Men still wear their hats in church in many parts of Holland. Moreover, smoking in church is not considered irreverent by the Dutch when service is not in progress, and the ministers themselves indulge in this practice. Altogether, according to a recent visitor, "the Dutchman has a very comfortable form of religion. You keep your hat on in church and that saves you many a chill; you talk freely and in your natural voice, not in a whisper; you have a neat housemaid in a white cap and apron (and nothing is more cleanly and charming than a Dutch servant maid) to show you to your seat or to offer you a chair; you have nice drab pews of painted deal all around you and a cheerful two decker pulpit above."

Slow Development in the Child.

Remembering that Balzac, Walter Scott, Daniel Webster and the great educator, Froebel, were counted as dullards in their youth, the importance of allowing certain minds a slow development is manifest. A child who at fourteen is learning numbers may at forty compose a great epic or discover a new element. Through kindergarten methods, manual training, physical and industrial exercise, dancing and military drill, the attention is arrested, the slumbering mind is roused, the wandering will be recalled.—Rheta Childe Dorr in the Century.

Some Are So by Nature.

A certain young man, who prided himself on a brusqueness that he mistook for wit, met an eminent, but touchy, sculptor at a studio supper.

"So you're the chap," he said, on being introduced, "that makes mud heads?"

"Not all of them," the sculptor replied, quietly.—Youth's Companion.

Speculating and Gambling.

"Congratulations, old man. I hear you have been speculating successfully."

"No, I lost money."

"That so? Well, you ought to know better than to gamble."—Kansas City Journal.

Care of the Skin.

When the complexion is sallow or there is a tendency to spots and blotches facial massage will do much to improve matters. This massage is most effective when it follows steaming or washing the face in hot water and can only be done at night.

Dip the tips of the fingers in a good cold cream and rub it into the skin with a gentle circular motion, taking care to stroke across, not down any lines that exist, and not omitting the hollows about the eyes and nose. Stroke upward from beneath the chin. This tends to reduce a double chin and round out a thin face.

Massage until the last trace of cream has vanished. In the morning bathe with cold or tepid water and dust with prepared oatmeal, which prevents redness and roughness.

This massage improves the circulation as well as cleansing the skin, but one must remember that it is necessary to have good health before one can be sure of a good, clear complexion.

Diet has a great effect on the appearance, so if the skin is oily it is necessary to avoid all rich and greasy food. Wiping the face occasionally with diluted eau de cologne is beneficial in the case of an oily skin, and lemon juice is excellent for cleansing purposes. A few drops of ammonia or a pinch of borax in the water with which the face is washed is also helpful.

If there is a tendency to superfluous hair on the face care must be taken what cream is used. The continued use of peroxide of hydrogen will lighten the growth, but nothing permanently removes the hair but electrolysis.

A good plan, however, for those who cannot afford this method is to persevere with the use of peroxide, applying it several times daily and placing a little pad of cotton wool dampened with the peroxide on the place affected at night.

This weakens the growth and makes it easier to remove the hair with tweezers, an operation which must also be repeated daily, but for a time is effectual.

These methods need perseverance, and they do not effect a permanent cure. But it is worth while taking trouble to reduce such a disfiguring and trying [illegible].

It is quite easy and far more economical to make ... own ... and toilet ... And ... another thing, one can then be sure that all ingredients are harmless and of best quality only.

Here are some simple recipes:

A GOOD MASSAGE CREAM.

Lanolin	2½ ounces
Spermaceti	1 dram
White vaseline	½ ounce
Cocoanut oil	2 ounces
Sweet almond oil	1 ounce
Tincture of benzoin	½ dram

Melt the first five ingredients together and beat until the mass stiffens, adding the benzoin, drop by drop, during this process. Violet or other extract can be added if liked.

COLD CREAM FOR THE FACE.

	Ounces.
Rosewater	[illegible]
Almond oil	[illegible]
Spermaceti	[illegible]
White wax	[illegible]

Mix as above with any favorite perfume.

Stair Climbing a Good Exercise.

The manner in which we ascend or descend the stairs determines whether or not we shall feel rested when we reach the top or completely wearied and done up.

To go upstairs properly is good exercise, besides being excellent training in proper standing and walking.

If we labor upstairs with the head drooping, shoulders stooping, knees bending and feet stumbling we are getting ourselves into a bad habit.

Hold up the head, throw out the chest and place the ball of the foot lightly and evenly upon each step.

When descending the same rules are given, and if it is difficult at first raise the hands as high as the ears, but under no consideration touch the banisters.

When the foot of the stairs is reached let the hands fall naturally to the sides and stand sixty seconds.

These are the rules which girls had to live up to in a certain old fashioned school which turned out many graceful society buds years ago.

The action taught them to stand well and be deliberate, a habit more of us could cultivate today with advantage to ourselves.

The continual hurrying produces jerky movements which they claim is another word for awkwardness.

Besides, this lightly tripping up and down the stairs lends lightness to the general gait and keeps a girl who does not take up athletics in good trim.

Dainty Toilet Requisite.

Milk of roses is one of the daintiest of toilet requisites, deserving of a place on every carefully equipped dressing table. It has a delightfully soothing effect upon the skin roughened or irritated by wind, cold or heat. Milk of roses is inexpensive and easily prepared. To a pint of the best rosewater add ten drops of oil of tartar and half an ounce of oil of almonds, a drop at a time. Shake the mixture well and place it in a bottle. When the muscles of the face feel stiff and the skin is drawn tense it with the milk of roses and ... [illegible]

North Dakotan Got Very Best

Bought Choice Half Section at $22.00 Per Acre—Expects to Interest Friends in Rich Vermilion Lands

On May 25th, Thos. Gray of North Dakota, bought of Messrs. Wibler, Smith & Phelps, the East Half of Sec. 19, just south of Claysmore, for $22.00 per acre, this being one of the finest pieces of land owned by the syndicate.

Mr. Gray, a man of considerable experience in prairie countries, was much pleased with the Vermilion District and although he was well pleased with some good land at $15.50 per acre owned by the same syndicate, but which was back four miles from a station, he decided he would purchase the very best obtainable.

The purchaser expects to interest several of his friends in this district.

THE SUPPLANTER
A Modern Romance.
By WILMOT KAYE

It was a perfect December evening, clear and bright, and she turned her steps towards the West End. She walked rapidly, but her eyes were heedless of the passing crowd, for her mind was engaged in a bitter fight [illegible] wards she drew a screen across, that she went back to her chair beside the fire and waited impatiently, till the regular breathing told that she was asleep.

[illegible]

She crept and looked round the screen, and was apparently satisfied, for she moved to the other side of the room, and opened a traveling trunk. The hinges creaked, and she looked up with apprehension, but the screen hid the bed from sight and the regular breathing was undisturbed.

The search was rapidly made, and she came back to the fire with a small bunch of keys.

The box was opened, and she carefully went through the contents, now and then placing a paper on one side. She read all the letters, and a couple of hours passed before she had finished. The box was returned to the trunk, and afterwards she wrapped up the papers that she had taken out and concealed them under her mattress.

She quickly undressed, and after putting out the lamp, got into bed.

A party of four—two young ladies and two young men—became acquainted at a dance and after it was over the young men requested the pleasure of seeing the ladies home, which was granted, and the four made their way towards the fashionable part of the town.

Stopping outside a large house in the best street of the neighborhood, the girls indicated that this was their destination.

"I'll just run in and see what mamma is doing," exclaimed one of them, and forthwith she ran up the path leading to the front door, returning in a short time minus coat and hat.

"Mamma says we must hurry in now dear, as it is getting late," she said to the other.

They stood talking and laughing for some time when, much to the girls' consternation, a gentleman came down the path carrying a lady's coat and hat and addressing the lady, said: "Do these belong to you? I found them hanging on the door handle of my house."

Needless to say, the coat and hat were acknowledged, but the young lady never again attempted to make herself out to be what she is not.

"I think we met at thi. restaurant last winter. Your overcoat is very familiar to me."

"But I didn't have it then."

"No; but I did."

MOONEY'S BISCUITS ARE THINNER

That makes them neater, crisper, daintier, more appetizing;
The one biscuit good enough to take the place of your own baking;
Fresh as the biscuits from your own oven.
Think what that means! Freedom from a broiling kitchen—leisure on the porch or in the parlor. Time to do the little knick-knacks that have been neglected.

MOONEY'S PERFECTION SODA BISCUITS

Are the creamiest, crispest crackers made.

Mannville is preparing for a big day of Sports on the 1st. of July.

A number of the local masons were in Edmonton this week attending the annual gathering of the Grand Lodge of Alberta.

Mrs. Chamberlain, Edmonton, is visiting with Mrs. Williams of the Brunswick hotel this week.

William Dwyer who has been spending the winter months at his old home in Halifax, N. S. is expected back this week.

Among those to take in the Spring races at Edmonton on the 24th. from Vermilion were J. W. G. Morrison, W. C. Craig and W. E. Sutton all of whom remained over until after the election.

Miss Lela Close of the Alexandra Hospital Staff who was visiting a few days with her sister Mrs. John Craig, returned to Edmonton Monday evening.

Robert Cunningham is erecting two pretty cottages on Vermilion avenue, as also is Chuck Wilson of the Brunswick. A good deal of building is going on all over town.

Count de Topor, who is largely interested in Vermilion real estate and who was spending a few weeks in town, left for Edmonton last week and after remaining there for a few days will visit Calgary and Winnipeg on his way to Lexington, Ky. He will sail for home in July.

The action of W. H. Hayward against Sheriff Robertson, in which the sheriff joined D. J. Berry, the local bailiff as third party, was tried before Judge Taylor in Edmonton last week. The action was for damages for seizing a horse for a man named Collins, which was really the property of Hayward. The action was dismissed against the third party, Berry, on a preliminary objection with costs and after hearing the action was also dismissed as against the sheriff with costs.

Mr. Montard, of Boyle Parlee, Freeman & Co. for the plaintiff, H. H. Robertson for the Sheriff and Norman Murray for Berry.

Miss Jean Forsyth entertained at the tea hour yesterday for Count de Topor. Miss Forsyth poured tea at a table decorated with yellow and red tulips and ferns. The guests were: Miss Marion Thompson, Miss Maud McKenney, Miss Marjorie Saunders, Miss Beatrice Saunders, Mr. Harry Baldwin, Mr. West, Mr. Oliver Hunt and Mr. Beverley Owen.

TENDERS

HAS FIRST PLACE.

No Country, all Points Considered, so Attractive as Canada

To accomplish solid national growth, agriculture and industry must move forward together. At the present time Canada bulks bigger in the [illegible] eye than any other country. Free land or cheap land is pretty well exhausted in the United States, and South America makes it appeal for settlers chiefly to the people of Southern Europe. Canada, on the contrary, has millions of acres of free land and other millions of acres of [illegible] land. Its form of government [illegible] making the strongest appeal, perhaps, to the Anglo-Saxon, is yet attractive to men of all nations. The incomparable summer weather [illegible] the cold, bracing winters of Canada, attract and hold the strong individual and, all points considered, Canada has first place among the countries of the world as a place in which new people may settle and make for themselves a home and business success proportionate to their ability, capacity for work and capital invested. The wealth of Canada's partially developed resources is practically inexhaustible. Probably no other of Canada's natural [illegible] exceeds, or will exceed its agricultural possibilities. The development of Canada's agricultural resources depends upon the carrying out of an aggressive and scientific immigration policy, while the development of other natural resources will depend largely upon a policy for the tariff commission to adopt that will have a tendency of assuring capital that its investment in establishing manufacturing plants will be safeguarded.

BINDER TWINE

An Industry That Requires Encouragement in the Interests of West

The lack of protection for the binder twine industry in Canada has incurred the loss of eight large mills with their invested capital and labor; has effected the disparagement of much wealth from Canada every year, has necessitated an additional public expenditure in the form of bounties, and prevents every year the utilization of tons and tons of raw flax fibre, which might be turned to benefit Canadian labor and capital as well as the Canadian customer. By the establishment of mills in the West that would help to consume the vast quantities of flax fibre now going to waste, the farmer would receive an additional return for [illegible]

SCARCITY OF MILK

The Dairy Situation Offers Encouragement to Canadian Farmers

The most outstanding feature of the dairy industry at the present moment is the general scarcity of milk for the larger towns and cities. From all quarters comes the cry for more milk. Winnipeg now obtains a large quantity daily from such a distant point as St. Paul, Minn. The demand in Vancouver is closing many of the creameries in the Fraser Valley. The same thing is occurring in the neighborhood of Montreal and Toronto. The per capita consumption is increasing as the quality of the product improves, and the nutritive value of milk becomes better known and appreciated. The prices of milk and its products have not advanced relatively with the prices for meats and other food supplies, and such a condition is bound to cause a relative increase in the consumption of dairy products. Dairy products generally are being made more popular with improved methods of production and handling. On the whole the dairy situation is such that it should encourage increased production on the part of Canadian farmers. One of the most hopeful signs for the future of the dairying industry in Canada is found in the rapid growth of the movement started by the Dominion Dairying Service a few years ago which has for its object a study of the record of the individual cows, so that poor producers may be eliminated. The average milk yield of hundreds of herds has been increased from 20 to 34 per cent. already, where the owners have followed this "weeding" process. An increase of 20 per cent. in the average production of all the cows in Canada would mean an increase of $20,000,000. Such an increase, which would be almost wholly net profit, is not only possible but highly probable from present indications.

CANADIAN ENTERPRISE

Canadian Pacific Railway Co. to Run Observation Cars on Austrian State Railways.

The announcement that the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. will this summer begin to run a series of Observation Car Services on the Austrian State Railways through the Tyrol marks an epoch in the growth of the importance of Canada in the old world. Under a contract with the Austrian State Railways, the Canadian Pacific has arranged to build several observation cars in Austria on Canadian Pacific plans. The design is that of Mr. Vaughan, head of the C. P. R. Angus shops at Montreal, who has made a personal visit to Austria to study local conditions. They will differ slightly from the type as used in Canada and each car will have platforms at both ends. The cars will be the longest four axle cars in Europe. They will have a very spacious interior and will seat thirty-two passengers. There will be accommodation for a typist whose services will be at the disposal of the passengers and an up-to-date library with all the latest magazines, just as on the C. P. R. transcontinental trains, will be among the features of the cars.

Both Austria and the Canadian Pacific Railway will benefit from the consolidation of the new scheme. The attention of vast numbers of travelling Canadians and Americans will be diverted from other parts of Europe to Austria not only to see the interesting country but to learn how these Canadian Pacific observation cars fulfil their mission. There will be three observation services to begin with. By arrangement [illegible] these will run between Zurich and Innsbruck over the Arlberg route via Landeck. The second will be between Innsbruck and Vienna via Zell-am-See and Salzburg. The third will be from Salzburg to Trieste over the Tauern and Karawanken Railways by way of Badgastein, Villach, Veldes [illegible]

Wasteful Use of Coal.

The latest estimate of the coal supply in England places the date of its exhaustion as 175 years hence. While this is a long period measured by the average life of a man, it does not look big compared to the history of that country. Our own coal supply is so large and the expectation—at least in the mind of the layman—of continued discoveries of vast deposits of fuel, make it practically impossible for our own people to seriously consider the exhaustion of our own coal fields.

The present method of generating steam power for stationary engines is absurd and extravagant as to at least 75 per cent. of all the power used in this country. We mine coal, we ship it, and then haul to our plant; we shovel in from the wagon, we shovel again under the boilers; we fill our cities with smoke until they resemble a foundry on casting day, and then we must shovel ashes into wagons, cart these through our streets, and after another expensive haul we give the worthless refuse a final shoveling: six handlings besides the freight and wagon haul! As pointed out in these pages two years ago, the coal should come up from the mine to flow by gravity under the boilers of an enormous electric generating plant, and the power and heat should get to its final destination, not on coal cars, but on wires.

We pity the crude methods of our forefathers, we boast of our present-day achievements, but only a generation or two hence and many of the things we do will appear inexplicable and silly.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Benefits of Buttermilk

Premium List Issued.

The preliminary premium list of the International Dry-Farmed Products Exposition, to be held at Lethbridge, Alberta, October 21 to 26, has been issued, and is one of the most interesting ever sent out so early in a season. It gives the farmers full instructions as to the preparation of exhibits, and is designed to familiarize all with the details essential to success at the time of putting in the crop, for then is the time the best work tells in securing prize-winning products.

The rules and regulations are given in full, the methods of judging likely to be adopted being suggested so that exhibitors may have an opportunity to consider them and express their opinions and offer suggestions in advance of the publication of the Official Premium List which it is planned to issue about August 1.

The sweepstake prizes and the special premiums already donated are announced, and the list given of the grains, grasses, fruits and vegetables that may be entered for competition.

Every farmer should have a copy of this premium list at once, and it will be sent free upon request to John T. Burns, executive secretary from the International Dry Farming Congress, Lethbridge, Alberta, and packages of them will be supplied boards of trade interested in the Congress and Exposition for distribution upon request.

Married Couples on Farms.

The greatest source of satisfactory farm help in the west has been in the married couples. The employment of these wives to some extent both the domestic and farm help problem and we wish that many more couples were available. There is an objection, however, to this plan of hiring married couples. It is very difficult to secure a man and his wife who are both competent. In many cases the one is a good servant and the other is a poor one. By discharging the poor one the farmer is forced to lose them both, and is considerably inconvenienced. [illegible]

TEMPER AND GREEN TULLE

And a Ring That Was Thought to Be Lost.

By SARA MCCONNELL.

He was busy getting the thought of her out of his mind, sore put to it to be free and his own man again. She was capricious, inconstant, vain; she was self willed and full of wiles; she was—oh, she was Alexandra Lee. He would not think of her.

A great deal that had happened that ... was blurred to him. But the ... of the carriage door as they started home reverberated in his mind like the crack of doom. It had slipped from his hand and swung to with a ... Alexandra's laugh mocked him. "... say one else, George, I'd have said the ... slammed."

He remembered how she looked as he turned, something strange in her eyes that matched, to impression, the misty multitudinous rufflings and billowings of her gown—that frivolous, fluttering, elusive green tulle he had watched all evening as she danced with every other man in the room—with Herbert Hartley, a dawdling, dangling derelict, a signpost to every path but that of rectitude—of all men in the world, Herbert Hartley!

From her carriage corner Alexandra sighed. "I've had such a good time, and now I suppose there's the piper to pay."

"If you mean there is Hartley to settle for"—

"Herbert? You've a tone that hints at 'thirdly and fourthly, brethren,' and poor Herbert! He's as much more of a song than a sermon."

That began it. He had never meant to ... only to deal with her in a firm ... fashion, as a man should. But ... her.

She bent down as he ceded. "Are you there, Alexandra?" she asked of the floor. "Poor dear, there is nothing left to pick up. Oh, I'm tired, tired! I'm stifled. I can't breathe. There, take it back!" And she tossed the ring across to him. "Now one can draw a free breath."

"Alexandra!" he begged.

But he had cut, and she meant he should pay. And hers was a pretty gift of table turning.

He held his anger down. No more down should slam by chance about him, and it was only as they neared the house that he interrupted.

"We haven't gained anything this way. Discuss me again. The point is Herbert Hartley."

"Then I must put on my bonds again? Where is the ring?"

But he hadn't the ring.

"You had it last."

"I laid it in your lap."

But it was not in her lap, on the seat nor in the carriage. Alexandra laughed. "Oh, thrifty George, are you sure you've not taken it back for safe keeping?"

He stood a ... moment at her door. "And Hartley?" he said.

Insistence was match to her powder. "How can I answer unless we're engaged? And people can't be engaged without rings, can they, George? You seem to think with mine on that I fail to remember. Bring it back to me and—good night."

After a week of wrath mingled with pain he got himself under control and wrote her. But the answer came back the same absurd, maddening, almost insulting reiteration—the ring, always the ring. A perversity first or a pretext, did she use it now as a weapon? He hadn't the ring, she knew.

Life was turmoil once Alexandra entered, and he remembered with what perverse astuteness she had said herself: "I'm like a mustard plaster on your mind. You'd better take me off before I raise a blister."

But she was in every wind that blew, and without her nothing was worth while that once had been.

So for a fortnight he had gone about his accustomed ways, and, though many a flutter of familiar skirts had set his heart a-jump, yet he never had met Alexa since that night. Then a case of some importance took him out of town with such sharp demand upon all his faculties that he had known a sort of respite.

But back in the town his work was all to do again. He went his way down to his office. He bowed to people who drove past with a swift hope that Alexa would not be with them. And then unexpectedly with a group came the Hurds—there was Alexa!

Yes, it was Alexandra and Evelyn Hurd and with them Herbert Hartley. The group stood until he had almost reached them, when Hartley turned, and Evelyn went back to the house, while Alexa stepped by the Hurds' waiting carriage.

He knew she had seen him long before, but—it was one of her insincerities he most disliked—she acted out acute surprise. He put a stiffer guard upon himself.

A stiffer guard! She called it by another name. She hated him when he was like that! How futile he made her feel, how trivial, how vain! Well, at least she would make him feel once more and betray it. She would wring out of him a protest.

And then her mind misgave her. Was she being left with the situation on her hands? Would he accept with out protest? Would he never speak? She looked up and then down again to her ungloved hand on which his ... [illegible] ... had been. A leaf ring of Herbert's took the place of the one that was lost. A joke—a simple joke—but stupidity lent her a stammering tongue.

"George, George!" she called after him, but she entreated only an inflexible back. With Herbert's name on her lips and Herbert's ring on her finger, she was indeed left committed to the situation the last of her desiring.

* * * * * * *

Alexandra flaunted Herbert Hartley in Greenfield's face. She waved him abroad like a banner. If the town hummed with rumors of her, she helped the rumor wax, but helped it to no explanation.

But with her family there was one topic that, like the weapon used in committing a crime, seemed always impossible to dispose of. The nile green tulle—why didn't she wear it? And that ... the one ... do.

It was their house dressmaker that in a measure vanquished her at last. "One, two, three," measured the woman. "That's only once and a quarter, and I'll need as much again. Those ruffles on your nile green underpetticoat—they're a match, Miss Alexandra, and we're in a hurry."

Alexandra went into her ... shutting the door behind. The tulle hung upon the hooks with a kind of defiant grace, as if it still held something of its owner's quality. She took the gown ... slowly and spread it gently out upon the bed. How happy she had been when she had worn it—the last time she had been happy!

She had meant they should have a ... evening, she and George and the gown. And how had it so fallen out? Coquetry? What did it ... except that if it were good to be with George it was a joy still subtler to dance away with some one else knowing his eyes held her, followed her, and that for each the crowded room held only the other? Provocation, alluring, half a mystery to herself, it was like a fold of the silk that shimmered over its silk lining.

She slipped down upon the floor by the bedside and began to rip the flounces. What was it he said that had made her so angry? Her vanity was as endless as her caprice. He shouldn't have said it, and yet—it was true enough. Well, she had warned him. He was well rid of her. He had come out of the matter with a better grace than she had, except about the ring. No doubt it had been found long ago. It angered her afresh to think how stubborn he had been not to have told her. The way to make her feel how small she was was not to tell her so—that never served—but to take the big way and put her in the wrong by being generous. If he had given her a chance, half a chance—

The scissors snipped, snipped. It was thus she had laid a sharp tool on her happiness. She was cutting the stuff, but what did it matter? She was always cutting and tearing something dear to her.

And the ruffles must come off, they said. She bent nearer. She might as well tear and be done.

What was this hard thing on which the scissors struck and caught? Not, surely not— In her hand lay the ring.

* * * * * * *

"Alexa!" He had come at her urgent summons, but hotly rebellious. And yet Alexa, there before him—a curious figure hung about with green silk ruffles—Alexa, grieved, remorseful, pouring her heart out. How was it possible to withstand her?

"And I suppose," he said, the ring half back in its place again—"I suppose I'll have to marry you to save you from"—

But she would not let him speak the obnoxious name.

"You'll have to marry me to save me from Alexandra Lee."

Order of the Garter.

It is certainly to Edward III. that England owes the existence of the Order of the Garter with its motto, "Honi soit qui mal y pense," commonly but rather freely translated as "Evil to him who evil thinks." A more literal reading would be, "Shamed be he who thinks evil of it." The order was established on April 23, 1349. This is indubitable, but it is uncertain why the garter was selected as its name and symbol and what is the special significance of the motto. Polydore Vergil, whose history appeared in 1536, nearly 200 years after the event, is the earliest authority for the familiar story that the Countess of Salisbury, one of the king's favorites, dropped her garter at a ball and that Edward picked it up and handed it back with the remark that is now proverbial. Unfortunately for this story, it is known that "Honi soit qui mal y pense" was a familiar proverb long before Edward's day.—St. Louis Republic.

Caught the Crowd.

At nightfall the junior partner's exultation of the day changed to chagrin, and he clamored noisily for the errand boy's dismissal.

"Better think it over," the senior ...

"Why waste time in thinking," the junior partner retorted, "when he's got to go? Here I am, lying awake every night for a week planning an effective window decoration, which is turned into a laughing stock the first day by the stupidity of that boy, who leaves three yards of blue woolen dust rag draped around silver tankards and trays of diamonds."

"Well," said the elder jeweler, "people stopped and looked, didn't they?"

"Yes, but what at—that dust rag!" growled the junior.

"That's why I advise you to keep the boy," advised the senior mildly. "If it hadn't been for him I am afraid nobody would have looked at all."—New York Sun.

PERILOUS BOATING

A New Zealand Stream That Yields a Series of Thrills.

RUNNING THE RIVER RAPIDS.

The Journey Down the Wanganui Is Mighty Exciting In Spots, Where the Swaying Steamer Plunges Through the Lines of Boiling Breakers.

Steamboating in New Zealand, to judge by Charles Edward Russell's account of it in the Twentieth Century Magazine, has in it more excitement than relaxation. It is a more or less nerve racking experience, not only for the anxious passengers, but for the seasoned steamboat men as well.

The swift water courses that come down from the lofty backbone of the islands are full of rapids that can keep the most skillful pilot on the anxious seat until they have been successfully "run." This is the story of such an achievement somewhere on the Wanganui river:

The captain, a sunburned and active young Scot, stands at the great wheel forward on the upper deck, whence he can see bow and stern. Two stout Maori youths sit on the forecastle; two hover above the rudder; all are armed with long, iron shod poles that are to be objects of your anxious concern before the voyage is done.

The boat is slipping smoothly along the unrippled reach. You look up of a sudden and catch your breath. The rapid is directly in front of you, the steamer is tearing into it, and how can any vessel get through such a place? Here goes the narrow stream, roaring and singing past the rocks. You can see the bottom everywhere. It looks only an inch or two from the surface.

The whole thing pitches visibly downward. Beyond at a lower level shines the smooth, dark green surface of the next reach. The green and the silver are beautiful. The singing of the water is music, but for these you care not, for you see plainly that in another moment the boat, even now lurching suggestively, will be rolled over like a log, and you will be grasping at some bowlder in the flood.

Meanwhile the captain spins the wheel back and forth like a squirrel's cage, with his gaze fixed intently upon the water just ahead, as if he read through it and scanned the stones beneath. The brown Maoris stand forward and aft, with their poles in their hands.

As the boat plunges into the first line of boiling breakers the bow sinks under you, the swift current catches the stern and slings it sidewise. A tremendous clatter arises, the boat careens and shakes as if she were falling apart, and you, standing on the upper deck and nervously holding the hand rail, give yourself up for lost, for the keel is already traveling on the rocks and gravel of the bottom.

"Now, then! Now, then!" yells the captain. The Maoris put their strength upon the poles. Just as the craft seems sliding sidewise into the bowlders that line her path she ... out through the passage into the placid green and silver of the next reach, and the captain, sounding the jingle bell, settles down to a cup of tea, holding the wheel with one hand. You could not touch bottom here with the statue of Liberty.

If I can read men better than rapids the Scot himself is not always sure how he is coming out of these tangles. Sometimes his quick, rasping orders to the Maoris have the ragged edge of anxiety, and his manner of leaning with hands and feet at the wheel indicates a considerable concern. Once I heard him mutter under his breath the national slogan, "I hae ma doots! I hae ma doots," as we shot into a particularly abominable piece of water.

The channel, no more than wide enough for the little boat, turned sharply at the bottom of the slide, and I had something rather worse than doubts as the boat went sidewise down, seeing what was ahead for her. If in an instant she can gather full speed ahead she can slip through; otherwise plainly she will strike her side against the reef and capsize.

"Now, then, Jumbo," shouts the captain as he paws with one hand for the engine bell, "give it to her!" The propeller buzzes. The Maoris, with feet braced, tug at the poles. They seem to be too late. With a bang the boat hits the bank, careens far over and amid the startled screams of the passengers slides off into the deep water and goes safely on her way.

I conclude that that pilot must be a master of his craft. Of a score of places he is able to hit the bank at the single spot that is safe.

The Advance of Science.

We used to think that the smartest man ever born was the Connecticut Yankee who grafted white birch on red maples and grew barber poles. Now we rank that gentleman second. First place goes to an experimenter attached to the Berlin war office who has crossed carrier pigeons with parrots, so that Wilhelmstrasse can now get verbal messages through the enemy's lines.—Lippincott's.

PYTHONS AS PETS.

The Man Liked Them, but They Were Not Appreciated by His Wife.

An Englishman who spent much time in Bengal tells in Blackwood's Magazine about a couple of pythons that were kept as pets. He says:

"One hears a good deal about the snakes, but one sees very little of them at any time and in cold weather nothing at all. Indeed, the only snakes I saw were two great pythons which a planter kept in one of his indigo vats for his private delectation. He loved to watch them and feed them and poke them with a stick and see their flat, vicious heads drive at it with the speed and force of a steam hammer.

"His wife liked them less because one of them had once escaped from the vat and wandered into her bedroom. It was daytime and she was resting from the heat, and, hearing it advance breathing heavily, she thought it was her somewhat asthmatical fox terrier and told it to lie down. As it seemed to be making for her bed instead, she looked up to find that it was one of the pythons looking for a warm place in which to lie. Her screams brought her husband, who, annoyed by this escapade of a pet which his wife had never properly appreciated, thoughtlessly seized it by the neck, with the result that in a twinkling it had knotted itself around his arm and nearly pulped it before his bearer could arrive and get it by the tail.

"Two men, it seems, can deal with a python fairly effectively by grasping each an end of it, thus preventing it from weaving itself into the coils that crush. But no single man is of much use, for the reason that he cannot in the nature of things grasp and keep taut an eighteen foot length of writhing muscle. The planter told me that, as it was, his arm had turned black and blue all over as if it had been squeezed in a heavy door, and it was weeks before he could use it. But he still loved his python."

REFORMED BY A SONG.

Nordica Saved Her Jewels and Made a Thief an Honest Man.

Mme. Lillian Nordica, the singer, once upon returning from a concert tour decided to go straight to her villa in France, accompanied only by her maid. She knew there were no servants there at the time, but felt no alarm. They arrived in the early evening and enjoyed being home again. At nearly midnight they sat softly talking together, with only the mellow moonlight flooding the rooms, when they heard a window off the south balcony being raised, and an instant later steps were heard in the hall.

Almost paralyzed with fear—no one to help, no weapon at hand—there flashed over the prima donna a realization of her power of song. "It has moved thousands," she thought, and with trembling notes she began to sing what had been uppermost in her thoughts before the entrance of the intruder, "Home, Sweet Home." The exquisite voice grew steadier, and it rang out in its sweetest, purest strains. Then followed "Old Folks at Home," but her audience had gone. The maid saw a dark figure creep through the window and steal across the lawn and out of the gate.

Some weeks later Nordica received the following letter:

Dear Madame—On the night of the — I entered your home to relieve you of all your diamonds, jewels and money, but an angel song rang out in the sweet words of mother's songs, and my hand and heart were arrested, and I vowed never, never again to do aught that would sorrow that sainted one.

I am now engaged in honest work. God bless you!

—Ladies' Home Journal.

Each Otherness.

Nothing is of real value in the world except people. Never hurt a person by a wrong thought or by word or by act. Never hurt each other. Then go on a big discovering expedition and find each other. Never say, "That person has nothing in him," for that only means that you haven't found it yet. Then, last of all, never think you are the only person. You are just a part of each other. You are not somebody and the rest of us everybody else. We are each other. Life is each otherness, not everybody-elseness.—St. Nicholas.

Graves in Pawn.

In times of financial difficulties the Loo Chooans, residents of the southwestern islands of Japan, sometimes pawn the graves of their relatives. They are always redeemed, however, failure to do so meaning family disgrace. The turtle back shaped tombs, usually located on a hillside facing the water, are elaborate affairs of stone and cement, and their cost and upkeep often bankrupt the family.

Hopeless.

A BISMARCK STORY.

It Shows the Gentler Side of the Man of Blood and Iron.

The French surgeon Chenicke in his reminiscences of the Franco-Prussian war tells a story that seems to place Bismarck in a new and more gentle light. He says:

"Seated on some straw and propped up against a pillar of the church of Recourville was one of our poor soldiers, a quite young man named Rossignol. A shell, striking him like the lash of a whip, had carried away both his eyes and the bridge of his nose, leaving the front of the skull bare. This fearful wound was covered with a dressing. He lay there calm, silent and motionless, in quiet resignation.

"Bismarck stepped in front of him and asked me what was his case. He seemed really touched. 'There is war for you, messieurs, the senators and deputies!' Then turning to one of his suit, he said, 'Please bring me some wine and a glass.' He filled the glass to the brim, took a sip and then, gently tapping the shoulder of the poor martyr, he said, 'My friend, will you not drink something?' Rousing himself from the deathlike stupor that was creeping over him, the man assented.

"We then saw Bismarck stoop and very softly and slowly give the wounded soldier the wine. Rising again he drank what was left in the glass and said: 'What is your name, my boy, and where do you come from?' 'Rossignol, from Brittany.' The count then took his hand and said, 'I am Bismarck, my comrade, and I am very proud to have drunk out of the same glass as a brave man like you,' and, stretching his hand over the horribly mutilated head, he seemed to give him a mute benediction."

ANIMAL SWIMMERS.

Best of All, Though Not the Swiftest, Is the Polar Bear.

The rhinoceros and hippopotamus are wonderful swimmers and divers, while the Indian elephant crosses great rivers with heavy loads. The elk and the reindeer are first class swimmers. The elk keeps his head above water and crosses directly from bank to bank to avoid turning. The reindeer, on the other hand, turns as often as he likes, keeping his head only a little above the surface.

But of all swimmers of all climes the best, though not the swiftest, is the polar bear, who passes half his time in the water swimming and diving. His swimming power is nothing short of miraculous if it be remembered that the water in the regions he frequents is invariably cold and that cold is normally prohibitive to good swimming. There are bears that can swim from forty to fifty kilometers without great effort.

One of the swiftest swimming animals is the squirrel. A sportsman on one occasion, having at hand a squirrel born in captivity which had ... water, wanted to see if it could swim and took it with him in a rowboat to the center of a lake. The squirrel turned toward the bank, head and paws above the water, back and tail underneath it, and began to swim so rapidly that the man recovered it when it neared the shallow water near the land. It is said that even many nonaquatic birds will swim like ducks if an attempt be made to drown them.—Harper's.

Colors and Light.

White has the greatest property of reflecting light of any color and black the least. While white receives the color it immediately sends it away again in the form of reflected light. Black absorbs light. Lay a white and a black piece of cloth on the snow and that under the white cloth will remain as it is, while under the black one it will melt. This suggests a reason as to why white garments are coolest for summer wear. They do not absorb the heat and light from the sun, but reflect it off. In winter the dark absorbs the light and accomplishes more what one wants, so dark clothing is the common thing for winter use. If you want a cool house in summer paint it white.—New York World.

Terrible Temptation.

"Of course," said the man who was looking out of the window at the heavy rain, "I don't believe George Washington was capable of telling a lie. But I don't consider that cherry tree incident much of a test."

"Could you devise a better one?"

"Yes. I'd like to know what Washington would have said if he had stood at the door of a restaurant on a stormy night and the waiter had hurried up to him with a fine new silk umbrella with an ivory handle and no name on it and said, 'Isn't this yours, sir?'"—Washington Star.

Home Melodrama.

"The cards are marked!" said the man.

The woman cowered.

"The cards are marked!" he repeated.

There was no tragedy, however. Seems the baby had got hold of a lead pencil and marked up the euchre deck.—Washington Herald.

Curious.

"There's one curious thing about discovering places," said Johnny. "Take Bermuda, for instance. It was discovered by a man named Bermudez. How he happened to stumble on a place with a name just like his beats me."

A DEED OF DARING

One of Mad Anthony Wayne's Remarkable Achievements.

STORMING OF STONY POINT.

This Brilliant Feat of Arms, In Which Success Was Won at the Point of the Bayonet, Was One of the Most Desperate Incidents of Any War.

One of the most marvelous achievements credited to American bravery and strategy was that of the capture of Stony Point by Mad Anthony Wayne, who was one of the most picturesque heroes of the American revolution. When he was superseded in command of the Pennsylvania line, even after his brilliant success at Monmouth on June 28, 1778, a less ambitious and patriotic man would have resigned his commission.

It seemed the irony of fate that the setback to his career should follow so closely the official recognition for his work at Monmouth, but that very setback gave him Stony Point—the great ... of his life—and he made good.

There were two important factors ... that entered into this remarkable achievement, the capture of a fortress on the Hudson held by the British and considered almost impregnable. Stony Point was an island and the fortress was built on a rock which was precipitous and rough. It was guarded by three redoubts and protected by a double abatis of logs that extended across the peninsula. The post was garrisoned by 667 men, who felt so secure in their position that they were wont to refer to the post as the "Little Gibraltar."

On July 15 General Wayne assembled all his troops at Sandy Beach, and at that moment none of his soldiers knew the plans of their commander. The following day the march began over a wilderness trail and in perfect silence. Not a man was allowed to leave the column under penalty of death. By 8 o'clock that night they were within one and one half miles of the British fortress. Then the men were told of the desperate work ahead of them and the battle order read.

No man was allowed to load his musket, and the battle was to be won or lost with the bayonet alone. One portion of the order provided that any man found retreating a single foot was to be put to death at once.

... The fort was to be ... from ... [illegible] ... Wayne led ... The ... seventeen of the twenty men in one advance guard were shot down, but the companies in the rear eagerly pressed on. General Wayne himself, struck on the head with a musket ball, fell stunned. He recovered in a moment and, rising on one knee, shouted "March on! March on!" Then, turning to his aids, he begged them to take him into the fort so that if his wound was mortal he would die at the head of his column.

General Wayne's wound drove his followers to a frenzy. They dashed up the hill and battered down all opposition. Colonel Fleury, a French officer in the American service, at the head of his determined band forced his way up the redoubt and as the soldiers poured into the fort grasped the British flag and lowered it. The victory was complete. The British lost 63 killed and 543 taken prisoners, of whom 71 were wounded. The Americans lost 15 killed and had 83 wounded. It was one of the most daring and desperate incidents of any war.

From every point of view the storming of Stony Point was a remarkable feat of arms, but back of the success of that night was a story of preparedness the cause which has always been overshadowed by the brilliancy of the result. General Wayne had trained his men, stimulated their pride, enforced rigid discipline, had them at the point of attack at the right moment and then with inspiring valor led them.

The victory at Stony Point naturally aroused a tremendous enthusiasm, and it came at the right time. The country was depressed if not quite discouraged, and Stony Point was like a tonic. It gave the people more strength, more courage and at a time when they sadly needed it. Not only did General Wayne receive official recognition, but he was in receipt of hundreds of congratulatory letters expressing popular and professional opinion.—Chicago News.

SECOND EDITION OF THE CEREAL MAP OF ALBERTA IS COMPLETE

Covers Crop Areas For Each Township

The second edition of the cereal map of Alberta covering the crop areas for each township is now being issued by the Railway Lands Branch of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa. The efforts of the Department have been for many years directed towards promoting settlement on Dominion lands in the West. The lands available for free homesteading from existing lines of transportation are now however, approaching exhaustion and a question of great present interest, and which will increase from year to year is "What is being done with the land?" The Cereal Map is an effort to answer this question.

What The Map Shows

[illegible] graphically [illegible] the areas under the four [illegible] whole [illegible] in each township drawn [illegible] give at a glance [illegible] variety of [illegible] spring wheat dark [illegible] fall wheat green, oats yellow, barley blue, flax. An interesting feature of the map is information with respect to the acreage throughout the Province which has been devoted to the production of fall wheat. The information incorporated in the publication has been furnished by the provincial government, having been compiled from the threshers' returns for that province.

Statistics

The Statistics of grain production for each grain and from the earliest records down to last year, are given in a special table these having also been obtained from the records of the provincial government. All the usual information, re Grazing leases, Post Offices Railways, Topography, etc., is up-to-date in every way.

Copies Free Of Charge

Copies may be obtained free of charge, upon application to the Superintendent of Railway Lands Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

The Exam Dates

The Departmental Examinations of Grades VIII, IX and X will be held this year on June 24, 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29 at a large number of suitable points throughout the province [illegible] conducted during the same days and under the same presiding examiner.

The Department will supply the required paper and ink but candidates are advised to provide themselves with rulers [illegible] penholders etc. Copies of the time table will be mailed upon request. Candidates are advised to notify the Department at once at which centre they desire to write.

HAVE YOU A SKIN RASH?

Zam-Buk Will End It.

For skin rashes, eruptions, eczema, etc., either in adults or children, there is nothing known to science which equals Zam-Buk in the quickness and certainty of its curative power. Mr Raymond Webber, of Alhambra [illegible], writes: "I have tried Zam-Buk for many ailments, and every time have found it successful. Some time ago I had a bad [illegible] all over my body. I tried home-made salves, herb salves and various home-made preparations, and these proved of no use, but when I tried Zam-Buk I was cured in a quarter of the time that I had been experimenting in vain with other preparations.

"On another occasion I had one of my fingers crushed, and in that case also Zam-Buk was the only remedy I used. It healed the wound splendidly.

"My boy had boils and once again Zam-Buk brought about a complete cure. We have also used it as a household balm for the injuries and skin diseases which are common to every person, and can say that in our experience there is nothing to equal Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk owes its unique healing power to certain herbal extracts it contains. Unlike most ointments it contains no poisonous coloring matter, no animal fat, but is purely herbal. For eczema, piles, blood poison, abscesses, ulcers, cuts, burns and all skin injuries and diseases it is without equal, and should be in every home. 50c box, all druggists and stores. Use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c tablet.

What the Paris Police Are Paid.

The Paris police who risked their lives in trying to arrest the members of the automobile bandit band are not overpaid.

The chief inspector Guichard receives $600 a year and has reached the highest rate in the service. Sergt. Fleury has $600 a year. After him comes Inspector Rohr, who arrested Carouy, for which day's work he got $1.50.

Inspector Leroy has $1.24 a day and Inspector Sevestre and Huet, who after watching for seven consecutive nights, arrested Raymond la Science, do not receive quite $1.25 a day.

Inspector Maronnon, who arrested one of the gang, Paul Dorbet, gets the same amount.

It is true that pensions are paid after a certain length of service, but it is not surprising in view of the scale of the pay that good men in the Paris detective service should be attracted by private work.

WOMAN SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She was Finally Restored to Health.

Hammond, Ont. — "I am passing through the Change of Life and for two years had hot flashes very bad, headaches, soreness in the back of head, was constipated, and had weak, nervous feelings. The doctor who attended me for a number of years did not help me, but I have been entirely relieved of the above symptoms by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills, and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. Louis Beauchage, Sr., Hammond, Ont., Canada.

New Brunswick, Canada. — "I was highly recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for any suffering woman. I have taken it for female weakness and painful menstruation and it cured me." — Mrs. DeVerre Hanscom, Harvey Bank, New Brunswick, Canada.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Evils of Idleness.

It has been said that idleness is the mother of mischief. It is also the mother of ill-health.

The lack of muscular and mental activity plays havoc with the various tissues and functions of the human body. The science of physiology teaches that idleness and inactivity breed disease and death. Decay follows stagnation as naturally as night follows day.

The law of life, whether purely physical or intellectual, is activity—conscious activity. Just in proportion as you cease to work you cease to live.

In health we sleep sweetly and soundly, and work willingly. We eat with a relish, and are hopeful and happy. Our skies are bright, our hearts are full of May-day music and of love. The world seems to us just about right now and to be growing better. The people in it doing the best they know how. They are growing wiser day by day, and will soon know enough never to do wrong.

Health means energy, enthusiasm and ardent activity. It means a child-like trust that all is well, and that it will be well with us forever more.

Torpor begets stupidity, suspicion, hatred, misanthropy, and every vile thing. Activity begets the glow of hope, the flush of joy, the holy calm of aspiration and a glorious anticipation of the great hereafter.

Increasing years after have old age are not necessarily associated with a staggering mind, a stagnant memory, a decrepit body, a complaining tone, an absence of all that is real in life.

We hear much of people sick from overwork. There are many more sick from doing nothing. The person who attempts to go through life avoiding all effort, letting others carry all the burdens, "reaping where he has not sown," is not likely to make substantial progress in mental culture or physical development and strength.

The Force of Lightning

The amount of light given by a single lightning flash is enough, an electrician calculates, to illuminate an area of two square miles. The bolt itself would be visible several miles further off, but the remotest part of the region mentioned would have as much light as would be given by a candle—quite enough to read by.

To produce such a light it would be necessary to expend 15,000 horsepower for a second. [illegible]

The question of how the static electricity gets into the clouds is difficult to answer. [illegible]

What Ancient Knew About Eclipses

Umbrellas and Parasols.

Fashions change in umbrellas as well as in clothes. We find on visiting the London Museum that George IV used to carry a green silk umbrella fringed with gold, and about twice as large as the umbrella of today. Parasols, too, have diminished in size since they first came into use. Henri Estienne, writing in 1578, speaks of a parasol as capable generally of sheltering four persons from the sun. And when they diminished in circumference the material remained of the heaviest. Red velvet parasols, with heavy gold fringes, were carried by ladies of fashion in the days of Louis XIV. At that time it was possible, when crossing a bridge in Paris, to hire a parasol at one end and deposit it at the other, the charge for the accommodation being a sou.—London Chronicle.

That Was "Willie."

The late Bishop William N. McVickar, of Rhode Island, harbored a large soul in a body to match. He was a bachelor, whose sister kept house for him.

On one occasion he telephoned to his tailor that he wished to have a pair of trousers pressed, and the tailor sent a boy to his residence to get them.

The Bishop's sister admitted the messenger and called upstairs: "Willie, the boy has come for your trousers!"

When her brother appeared the youth's astonished gaze traversed the prelate's impressive "corporosity," then he murmured:

"Gee! Is that Willie!"

AN INVITATION TO SICKNESS

Thin, Watery Blood Leads to a Breakdown in Health.

Thin, impure blood is an invitation to sickness. The blood is at work day and night to maintain the health and any lack of strength or purity in the blood is a weakness in the defense against disease. Anaemia is the doctor's name for lack of blood—watery blood. There may be an actual loss in the quantity of blood, or one or more of its constituents may be lacking. The surest symptom of anaemia is pallor. The trouble is particularly common among young girls between the ages of fourteen and eighteen, but is also found in women of all ages, and quite frequently attacks men. "I met William Morgan Shuster at a dinner at the Savoy in London," said a Chicagoan.

Shuster was rather bitter about Russia. And no wonder, eh?

Very Eccentric

Vienna can boast a curious eccentric, who turns life upside down, a rich young Pole, who lives in sumptuous style, but always summons his servants by bugle call. His favorite pastime is driving an omnibus, attired like an ordinary busman, and, though he is said to spend a fortune each year in clothes, he wears no garment until it has been worn out by his valet. He has astonished the guests at a ball by appearing in a costume of pure white save for the shirt and tie, which were black. To complete his oddities, when dining, which he invariably does alone at a table d'hote, he reverses the usual order, beginning his meal with the sweets and ending with the soup.—London Chronicle.

A Story of Pekin.

A beautiful story is told of the casting of a great bell at Pekin. It is the bell on which midnight is sounded, and it was cast a century and a half ago. Two attempts at casting were made, and ended in failure, whereat the Emperor sent for Kuan-Yu, the official in charge of the task, and told him he would be killed if he failed.

Koai, the man's beautiful daughter, consulted an astrologer, who told her that unless a virgin's blood were mingled with the metal the third casting also would fail. She obtained permission to be present when the attempt was made, and just as the white hot metal was rushing from the furnace into the great mould the devoted girl sprang forward with a cry, "For my father!" leaped into the fiery stream, added her life's blood to its composition, and won her father's success and safety.

A certain young man who prided himself on a brusqueness that he mistook for wit met an eminent but touchy sculptor at a studio supper.

"So, you're the chap," he said on being introduced, "who makes mud heads."

"Not all of them," the sculptor replied quietly.

The Modest Caller.

Mrs Brown was a mistress who allowed her servant Jane to bring her young man into her kitchen at nights.

Now, Mrs Brown was very inquisitive and listened outside the door to the conversation.

A short time ago Jane got a fresh young man, and the mistress noticed how quiet all was when he was in the kitchen.

"Jane," said Mrs Brown the next morning, "how is it I never hear any talk in the kitchen when your new young man visits you?"

"Oh, mum," replied Jane, "he's that modest he does nothing but eat when he calls on me."

"Why do you refuse me a kiss?"
"Kisses may convey germs," explained the girl.
"That doesn't scare me. Didn't I always lick your slate for you when we went to school?"—Washington Herald.

Orders For Four Threshing Outfits

Delivery orders for four large power threshing outfits have already been secured this season by J. A. Rosborough, Massey-Harris representative at Vermilion. Three of these are steam power, the other being a 40 h. p. Gasoline.

The parties to whom these sales were made are J. Malady, north of the Saskatchewan; J. Grant, just this side of the same river; Mr. Johnstone of Dewberry and Messrs Garlick & Crause.

The Stampede at Royal George next Thursday night, June 13.

Carriage Repair Shop

A. C. Demerse, carriage builder of Wellsdale, formerly of Quebec province, is opening in business in town and has shops well under way on First St. north. The buildings are being erected on the back end of the lot and it is the intention of Mr. Demerse to erect a dwelling house on the same property almost immediately.

The opening of carriage repair shops here will fill a long felt need.

Important to Cattlemen

Berlin, May 29.— A discovery of the first importance to the Canadian cattle raising industry is reported by Professor Grugel of the University of Rostock. Professor Grugel announces that he has not only found the bacillus which causes foot and mouth disease but has also found a serum for rendering cattle immune against the malady. The serum is not curative but preventive and can therefore be administered to healthy animals. Experiments with a large number of cattle have proved unqualifiedly successful. Prof. Grugel says the serum will cost about 75 cents per animal treated.

THE STAMPEDE—June 13, a stupendous scenic production of the realistic drama by Cecil B. DeMille, at Royal George.

There were 37 bulls offered at the Lacombe Bull Sale which was held under the auspices of the Alberta Cattle Breeder's Association on May 29th, 1912, and 36 animals found buyers at good prices. The average price paid was $138.61.

The highest price paid for an individual animal was $235.00 for a Shorthorn Bull exhibited and bred by P. A. Switzer of Lacombe.

Aberdeen Angus

There were four Angus bulls sold at an average price of $152.50; the highest price paid for any animal of this breeding was $205.

Holsteins

There were two Holsteins, the average price being $75.00 and the highest price secured for any one animal was $80.00.

Herefords

There were six Herefords, which sold at an average price of $140.83. The highest price was captured by Oswald Palmer of Lacombe, for Alberta Heaind 30th, which sold at $185.00.

Shorthorns

The Shorthorns numbered 26. The average price bid was $149.17. The highest price realized was $235.00 as above stated.

The bidding was keen throughout [illegible] it was apparent from the start that there were not enough bulls to go round.

It is evident that interest in beef cattle is on the increase in Alberta.

CHAPTER III

To David Clay great wealth had come, while he was still a young man but his early training had been one that fitted him to enjoy his good fortune without losing his head. Until he was nearly thirty he had lived the idle life of a man who possessed a rich father, and who would never be under the necessity of working for his living. The family estate was in Sussex, where Mr. Clay hunted the local foxhounds. David was an only son, and his relationship with his father was almost more that of a friend than of a son. The shock of his sudden death in the hunting field came as a very great blow to David, which was accentuated by the subsequent discovery of the fact that his father had been speculating very heavily and that the estate was involved.

It was a couple of months before the true position was arrived at, and when the solicitor informed David that the surplus after the sale of the estate would be merely a nominal one, he did not quail beneath the blow, but immediately set about to discover some means by which he could earn money. Soon afterwards he chanced to meet a friend who was a district commissioner in Northern Nigeria.

"There is plenty of money in my country," he chanced to remark. "That is, if you've got the grit to stand the climate."

A fortnight later David was en route for West Africa and on the steamer it chanced that Stephen Grant was his cabin mate. It was fully a ...

... which a clerk had brought to him.

... the door, and he drew back involuntarily when he saw the loveliness of the girl who entered.

"Good morning, Miss Grant," Brann said effusively.

"Good morning," she replied coldly, but with an enquiring look at David.

"Miss Grant, may I present to you Mr. David Clay, your late father's partner," Brann said formally.

Vera, for it was she, bowed slightly, and a soft color came to her cheeks as she met the eyes of the man whom she was planning to deceive.

"How do you do, Miss Grant," David said heartily. "I have been longing for this day and now I am happy."

Vera was about to reply, but Brann broke in quickly.

"There is just one matter," he said briskly. "Did you bring those papers with you, Miss Grant?"

"Yes. Here they are."

The solicitor took them in his hands and glanced through them ... It was merely a matter of form ... They are all in order, and now I think I have performed my duty.

"I am much obliged to you, Mr. Brann. I want a long talk with you," he said, turning to Vera. "Perhaps you will come with me to my hotel. You must look upon me as your guardian," he added quickly, when he noticed that she hesitated.

"I will come," she said simply.

She leaned back in the luxurious motor car which was waiting outside, and they glided silently along in the direction of the Ritz. Clay did not speak, for he was busy with his thoughts. He had never imagined the possibility that Grant's daughter would turn out to be so beautiful, as was this girl who sat beside him. He looked in vain for some sign of the excitement that would be only natural under the circumstances, but her face was serene and calm.

The Mystery Lady

She Contrived to Carry Out a Hidden Scheme

By EDITH CONNERS

I am a dealer in secondhand books. I buy those that are sold out when families break up their homes and in this way secure from time to time volumes that I know to be rare, though the seller often is ignorant of the fact. Nevertheless I am free to say that I don't take advantage of their ignorance, but pay them a fair price for the goods. These rarities I keep and now have a collection that is becoming every day more and more valuable. One day a young woman came into my store and began looking over my stock. She attracted me at once by her appearance, her gentle manner, her soft feminine voice and traces in her countenance of some great grief. She took down from the shelves different books, most of them on religious subjects. I left her to examine them according to her own sweet will, but she was so attractive to me that I could scarcely keep my eyes off her. She seemed as much interested in the binding as in the other parts. I noticed that in the case of several of the books she looked over she slipped her thumb and fingers over the cover as if to gauge its thickness or smoothness, I couldn't tell which.

She laid out five books separate from the rest ...

... that person has come to look for the ... mark in it, these fancies might have gone on multiplying, but since it had been purchased in an ordinary way I was bound to admit to myself that they were without any foundation whatever. From that time on I dismissed them from my mind. But I did not banish from my mind the young woman who had impressed me. That sad face of hers, those Madonna-like eyes and, above all, the transition in her under my effort to induce her to throw off what troubled her were ever present with me.

Within a few days after the visit of the purchasing agent, who should come in but the young woman who is the subject of this story. She said that after all she had concluded to take the volume called "Christian Advice to Young Men." When I told her that it had been sold a scared look, or a disappointed look, I could not tell which, passed over her face. But when I informed her who had bought it, though she endeavored to conceal a look of relief or pleasure, she did not succeed. Then I knew that the book was connected in some way with the mystery which interested me. She was leaving my store when I caught at a method of finding out more about her. I asked her for her name and address, telling her that I wished it that I might mail her my book circulars. She hesitated, as though she did not wish to give them, but finally did so. I lost no time in walking past the number she gave and found the space occupied by a livery stable. She had given me a wrong address.

It is needless to say that this deepened my interest in her.

Some time passed before I saw anything more of "my mystery," as I now began to call her. Then one day she came in, and the moment I saw her I knew that there had been a great change in her. The sad expression had left her face and had been replaced ...

ANOTHER SPLENDID CURE BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

R. Meuleison, whom two doctors treated, finds relief and permanent cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Surette Island, Yarmouth Co., N.S. (Special)—Mr. Remie Meuleison a well known resident here, is telling his neighbors of his cure from a severe attack of Kidney Disease which kept him in a state of pain and suspense for two months and defied the efforts of two doctors who were treating him.

"My trouble started with a cold," Mr. Meuleison says. "My muscles would cramp and I had backache and dizzy spells. My head ached and I had a tired, nervous feeling while specks of light flashed in front of my eyes."

"I suffered in this way for over two months and was treated by two doctors but they didn't seem to be able to do much for me. Then I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and they helped me almost at once. Six boxes cured me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure the Kidneys. Cured Kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood. That makes pure blood and good health.

Old Berliners are lamenting the gradual disappearance of military uniforms from the streets. A quarter of a century ago more officers and soldiers in uniform were to be met with in the principal thoroughfares than civilians, while now, though the Berlin garrison is far larger, the presence of the uniform is hardly noticeable. The main cause of the change is the increased cost of living.

The Sad One.

The "Prodigal Son" was the subject of the Sunday school lesson. The teacher was dwelling on the character of the elder brother.

"But amidst all the rejoicing," said the teacher, "there was one to whom the preparation of the feast brought no joy, to whom the prodigal's return brought no happiness, only bitterness; one who did not approve of the feast and had no wish to attend it. Now who can tell me who this was?"

Silence for several moments, then a hand raised and a small sympathetic voice: "Please, ma'am, it was the fatted calf."

The clergyman had come round to the Sunday school, and was examining the small boys.

"Can any of you tell me?" said he, "what is the meaning of 'divers diseases'?"

Two small boys began comparing mental notes in an undertone. Presently one of them looked up.

"Please, sir, it's water on the brain."

In the causes of infant mortality cholera morbus figures frequently, and it may be said that complaints of the bowels are great destroyers of child life. If all mothers would avail themselves of so effective a remedy as Dr. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial many a little one could be saved. This cordial can be given with safety to the smallest child, as there is no injurious substance in it.

Lucas Nagy of Szegedin, Austria sold his skin to a foreign museum a long time ago for £32, the condition being that after his death and when the skin was removed the museum authorities should bury his body. He has now died at the age of 85. On his deathbed he begged his relatives to get his contract broken.

Curious to Learn.

In Georgia they tell of a prisoner who had been convicted a dozen times of stealing, who, when placed at the bar for his latest offense, displayed a singular curiosity.

"Your Honor," said he, "I should like to have my case postponed for a week. My lawyer is sick."

"But," said the magistrate, "you were caught with your hand in this gentleman's pocket. What can your counsel say in your defence?"

"Exactly so, Your honor, that is what I am curious to know."—Green Bag.

A Dublin Hoax.

The famous Berners Street hoax, London, contrived by Theodore Hook, in 1809, has recently had its counterpart in Dublin. In the Berners street hoax it will be recalled thousands of letters had been written to all kinds of tradespeople to call on a certain day at No. 54 that street and deliver certain goods. Coal wagons, carts with upholstery, vans with pianos and other articles, wedding and funeral coaches rumbled through, filling the little street and all the adjoining streets and lanes. Such a babel was never before seen in London. The Lord Mayor and the president of the Bank of England and several scions of nobility, as well as lawyers, doctors, clergymen, undertakers and pastry cooks, were there.

Six weeks ago a man arrived in Dublin and immediately paragraphs appeared in the newspapers announcing that Buffalo Bill's Wild West show was coming to Dublin, and that its advance agent had arrived. The agent took rooms in a city hotel. The tour of the show was, he said, to begin at Dublin. Two thousand horses and six hundred men and women, besides hundreds of wild animals would require food for a month. He arranged for enormous supplies from confectioners, bakers, wholesale grocers, butchers, fishmongers and forage contractors, the last named order being for forty tons of hay a week. Twenty thousand posters were ordered and there were American master pieces in advertising. The most sardonic touch of all was the visit of the agent to the police authorities with the request for the service of twenty-five policemen to keep order during the show.

When all the arrangements had been completed the agent disappeared and nothing more has been heard either of him or the big show.

Result Always the Same.

There was a prosecuting attorney in the south who was so uniformly successful with his cases that he not only became the terror of evildoers, but an object of admiration to everyone, and especially to the negroes of the city in which he lived.

When he left public office he was at once sought out by those charged with crime. Much to his chagrin the first two cases that he defended resulted in the conviction of his clients.

The Slayer of Miaco.

One of the most peculiar cases ever brought to the attention of the court of first instance recently came to light in Pangasinan province.

Pedro Palmera with two others was accused of the murder of Bernabe Laca, and on being brought to trial the first pleaded guilty, there being an aggravating circumstance of treachery, and was sentenced to twenty years in Bilibid.

Now it comes to light that the deceased was Miaco, an outlaw, who deserted from the constabulary some time ago, taking with him various arms and accoutrements, and who engaged in outlawry since that time. There was a reward of 500 pesos on for his capture, dead or alive.

The question now is, should the prisoner serve his term for killing a fellow citizen, or should he be liberated and given a reward for killing an enemy to society?—Manila Weekly Times.

And What Agrees With You, But Do Not Eat Too Much.

Digestion Will Be Good If You Regulate the System With

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Overeating is the great cause of liver troubles, biliousness and constipation. The digestive system becomes clogged with poisonous waste matter, the liver fails and then follow kidney disorders of the most painful and fatal forms, such as rheumatism, Bright's disease and dropsy.

The beginning is almost invariably with the liver and should be overcome by the prompt use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills before serious disease is developed.

An occasional dose of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills when the liver gets sluggish and the bowels constipated will keep the whole digestive system in healthy working order.

Hundreds of thousands of people have found this out by their own experience and would not think of being without this medicine in the house. Others have been restored to health by this treatment after their cases had reached more serious and complicated stages.

There does not seem to be any medicine obtainable which is so successful in awakening the action of both liver and kidneys as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Merit alone can account for their enormous sales.

READING IN BED

Not Injurious to the Eyes if a Few Simple Rules are Observed

To those addicted to the practice of reading in bed the remarks of Dr. Carl Heller will be of interest. He states that there is no good reason to be urged against using the eyes in a proper manner in a recumbent position ... some and can be persevered ... or periods without damage ... other position.

We all know the great damage is often done by reading in a recumbent posture, but therein possibly some oculists are at fault. Had it been the universal practice during the last twenty years to give careful directions how to read lying down, instead of saying "no one and all ... You must not read lying down," there would be less ...

... the first of ... leading to the other two. They are insufficient or wrongly directed light, short reading distance and tipping the book out of a plane at right angles to the line of vision.

If however every one reading lying down will so arrange his lounge or bed that the light comes over the head ... and falls well upon the page, if he will hold his book at a long reading distance and take care that the line of letters shall be at right angles to the line of vision he can be able to do ... no more harm than if he were sitting up.

More than this, there is much positively in favor of reading lying down. Dr. Heller concludes. The recumbent posture allows more rest of the bodily structures than the sitting posture and there is greater possibility of resting and repair in that position.—London Globe.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet, collects the invisible germs of disease, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alterative made entirely without alcohol, a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot, golden seal, Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence ... is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

At the present rate that the population of Vermilion is being added to the prospects of the "10,000 Club" could not be brighter. During the past few weeks several families from the Old Country have taken up their abode in the town, others have moved in from the surrounding country, additions have been made to the store staffs from outside points and a large number of electors have been brought in. It is a fair estimate to state the increase at fully one hundred.

Advertising keeps a business from growing lazy and stupid. Advertising is extra good red blood in the arteries of business and keeps it youthful and active.

Worth Quarter Of A Million

On Thursday last rain fell throughout the district for several hours and was followed Sunday morning by a heavy downpour which flooded the streets. Coming at such an opportune time it means over a quarter of a million to this district. The ground is thoroughly saturated and from now on grain and the hay crop will undoubtedly make prodigious headway. A slight idea of the immensity of the rainfall may be gathered from the fact that people of the town with cisterns caught, during the two rains, all the way from 15 barrels to 20 barrels of water from their roofs.

It was two weeks later that the first heavy rains fell last season.

2000 Feet Plank Walk To Be Laid

North Side of Main Street Will Have Two Blocks of 8 Foot Sidewalk Built Immediately–Council Adopts Aggressive Policy–Other Walks–A Slight Disruption

A special session of the town council took place Monday night to consider the matter of sidewalks for the present year, and after due discussion a very good bill of fare was served in this line, the outcome of which will be to give the town an additional two thousand feet of walk. The motion passed calls for the building of an eight foot sidewalk from the corner of Alberta Ave. on Main St. east to the corner of Borden Ave. two blocks of 600 feet with two crossings. This walk will run along the north side of the street. The walk on Main St. at Long's corner is to be extended about 100 feet further eastward. In the residential section the four foot walk running south from the corner of First St. north along Borden will be finished to Main St. and a walk will be laid on Laurier Ave. [illegible] of the school, from the corner of First St. north to Second St. [illegible] stretch [illegible] has proved a hardship to pedestrians for a long time. The programme is a good one and when completed will make a wonderful difference in the appearance of the town as well as meeting an essential requirement, badly needed for some time.

Following the disposal of the above business, the council was addressed by Dr. G. H. W. Ryan, chairman of the hospital site committee who recommended the purchasing of a plot of ground north of the present race track on the east end and extending as far as possible over the bank towards the river bottom. This location had been selected by the committee as meeting all requirements for the purpose intended and as being a most desirable site. The secy. was instructed to write the townsite company relative to this property also that lying to the west and north of block E.

Messrs. Ontario and Morris of the Northern and Vermilion Development Co. waited upon the council asking for consideration [illegible] the work planned [illegible] this year in the way of walks [illegible] grading. THE SUPPLANTER

By WILMOT KAYE

CHAPTER IV

As soon as she had turned the corner, Vera hailed a cabman and told him to drive to Little James street. All hesitation had left her, and as she tightly clutched the money in her hand, she was filled with wild exhilaration at the success which had so far come to her. She knew that the most difficult part had been accomplished and she had no fear as to the future.

"Have you packed everything?" she said as she eagerly entered the room.

"Yes," Hilda replied.

"We have just time to catch a train. Run down and look for a four wheeler."

"But I must say goodbye [illegible]," Hilda answered protestingly.

"No. You must write a note. [illegible] can run down to see us. We are going to the end of the world."

Hilda did as she was bade and Vera looked distastefully round the room.

It was not [illegible] the station that Vera told her of their destination.

"I have decided to go to Bognor. We can stay at a hotel for a couple of days. I shall have to run up to town nearly every day [illegible] around for a cottage."

A sudden thought struck her.

"After all we will wait for the next train," she cried.

She told the cabman to drive to a shop, where she took Hilda inside with her and proceeded to order everything that they needed. For Hilda she bought a warm fur coat [illegible] a goodly sum. In fact, she spent much more on her friend than she did on herself.

"You must not do it," Hilda said protestingly.

"If I can't buy you things I shall take no pleasure in my money," Vera answered firmly.

She succeeded in subduing Hilda's protests and during the journey she concocted the story as to how she had been left the money. She took quite a pride in its artistic touches as she related the imaginary fact to her friend.

"Is it very much?" Hilda asked.

"More than I shall know how to spend, dear. But you will help me, won't you?"

"You are a generous darling, but I don't intend to impose upon you," Hilda said firmly.

Vera was torn between desire to soothe her conscience by lavishing money upon the girl that she was deliberately robbing and the desire to keep Hilda out of sight as much as possible. She hoped that she would find a cottage out of the beaten track where she could keep her, so that there would be little chance of her coming into contact with anyone who knew her.

At Bognor they went to a small but comfortable hotel on the front and both of them took a childish delight in donning their new purchases for dinner. The daintily cooked food and the champagne which Vera insisted upon ordering was such a pleasant change after the months of hardship which they had endured [illegible].

"I shall not go to town tomorrow but shall stay here and look after you," Vera remarked as they went to their bedroom.

"I have ordered an open carriage," she continued as she warmed herself at the fire, "and we will go for a long drive."

The morning was perfect and the [illegible] and Hilda [illegible] of admiration.

"Did you ever see [illegible] so sweet?" she cried eagerly.

Vera told the coachman to stop, and they both alighted. They peeped over a rustic gate and away back from the road there was a little cottage, a perfect picture with its thatched roof and small leaded windows.

"I believe it is empty," Hilda cried. There was a paper in the window, and Vera approached to read it. They drove to the address given, and came back with the key.

It might have been made for us, and only five shillings a week. Look at the fireplace with its cosy corner. [illegible] Hilda said and Vera smiled good-naturedly at her excitement.

A bargain was struck with the landlord and when they returned to the hotel Hilda was the accepted tenant of [illegible].

"You will not be lonely," Vera remarked with a keen look.

"But you will be with me?"

"Not always. We will find some nice respectable woman to live with us. Then you will not have to waste time on housework. I believe you look better already."

"I feel better, dear. And it is you I have to thank."

[illegible]

We shall be quite comfortable by Christmas and we can burn real Christmas logs in that fireplace.

[illegible] "And feed the birds. They shall have a Christmas tree to themselves," Hilda said eagerly.

Vera caught an early train in the morning, first of all sending a wire to [illegible] saying that she would [illegible] at the Hotel. The journey was a [illegible] one for she had been [illegible] to think over the [illegible] it came as a sudden revelation the enormity of her deception. She felt that she could not face the future and a wild desire seized her to go to [illegible] and confess. But no. She would not give up all this joy in her grasp and she smothered her smarting conscience.

Her first visit was to Little James Street for she wanted to arrange for the removal of the furniture as she was anxious to obliterate all traces of their previous existence. She had just interviewed the landlady when she saw Vaughan Seymour coming up the stairs.

"How is Hilda?" he asked eagerly.

"Better, much better. You must go down to see her," she replied pleasantly.

"I will and at once, for I have sold my book. Why shouldn't I take rooms somewhere near? The country is splendid for writing."

"The very thing. We will talk about it."

"By the bye, a gentleman called to see Hilda yesterday," he remarked casually.

"Who was it?" she demanded quickly.

"Here's his card."

She took it in her hand and mechanically read the name.

Mr. Crawley Evans, Solicitor.

"What did he want?" she demanded fiercely and Vaughan Seymour stared at her in surprise, as he noticed her unwonted agitation.

"He didn't tell me," he answered.

"Didn't he ask where I was?"

"It was Hilda that he wanted to see."

"Of course," she said hurriedly. "Did you say where she had gone?"

"No, for I didn't know then. What is the mystery?"

"Nothing. Nothing. It was probably the solicitor who has been threatening her with a summons. I naturally don't want her to be worried."

"I wish I had known. I would have kicked the brute down the stairs," he cried viciously.

"Didn't he ask any questions?" she insisted.

"He said it didn't matter," he answered.

She drew a quick breath of relief and the strained look left her eyes.

"I have taken a cottage near Bognor. We shall be settled there in a week," she said with a bright smile.

"Do you think I might take rooms near by?"

"I see no objection. Why don't you run down at once?" she suggested.

Vera was anxious to get him out of the way and she knew that he and Hilda would both be content as long as they were together.

"I will. You're a brick, Miss Stafford. You can't tell how pleased I am that you have come into this money. I am only glad it was not Hilda that was the fortunate one."

"Why?" she asked curiously.

"You don't think I am the sort of man that would marry a rich wife? No thank you."

"Is that a quotation of the sentiments of your latest hero?" It does not sound quite like real life," she said simply. "But there, I'm only teasing you. Pack up your traps and go down at once. We are staying at the Pier Hotel but I don't think you had better go there. We must have a little respect for the conventions, even if we live in Bohemia."

With a cheerful nod she left him, and drove to the bank where she drew some money. From there she visited a fashionable dressmaker, and when she left even she was satisfied with the way she was dressed. She stopped at a jeweller's to flaunt [illegible] and proceeded to gratify her passion for glittering gems. [illegible] and a small watch that was set with diamonds.

By one o'clock she had finished her shopping and she strolled along Piccadilly to the Ritz Hotel where she asked for David Clay. She was expected [illegible] she was immediately conducted to his sitting room.

GAME OF CHESS TYPIFIES LIFE

It is impossible to state just when and where chess was born. Back we may go in the ages, and we still find it existing. We see it painted on the Egyptian vases, and we find it in the Chinese books of wisdom. It has been ascribed to all sorts of birthplaces, its creator having been at times a god, at times a mortal. Nothing positive is known about it, but the greatest probabilities seem to point to its having come from the East. It may be interesting to note just a few of the hypotheses surrounding its obscure birth.

John de Vigney assigned the invention to a Babylonian philosopher. Xerxes Lenear attributes its origin to Chilo, the Spartan, one of the seven sages of Greece. Sir William Jones ascribes the invention of chess to Mara, and feels sure it originated from India. [illegible] "In a thousand kings that are strong only in the strength of their subjects, the same Indians invented the game of chess, which was likewise introduced into Persia during the reign of Nushirvan."

An Indian philosopher thus describes chess: "It is a representative contest, a blood sea combat, an image not only of actual military operation but of that greater warfare which every son of the earth, from the cradle to the grave, is continually waging, the battle of life. One sees clearly that even going back to its birth, the parallelism between chess and men exists, for does anybody know just when, where and how the first man appeared on earth? And is it not a fact that man's spirit and natures have remained unchanged throughout centuries, and that chess was played much in the same way, each chessman moving in its allotted manner even a few years ago?"

According to Carrera, the principles of chess could be applied to the game of life. The board may be considered the field of life, chequered with good and evil on which man is to play his game and be rewarded according to his deserts. The pawns may be looked upon as representing those feelings which are first excited by circumstances and form barriers to those stronger passions which would be represented by the superior pieces. The castle, moving on the board in direct lines, represents that innate sense of justice pervading every human breast, which, however attacked when properly maintained cannot be conquered. The knight, eccentric in his movements, but regulated by fixed principles of action, portrays that feeling of honor which, deviating from the beaten course seeks for adventures. By the walk of the bishop may be considered the religious feeling which is continually crossed by the movements of ordinary life as they never leave the color of the square they start from. They are typical of a firm faith. The queen typifies ambition, and the king, moving only one square at a time, while every direction is open to his choice, is highly characteristic of prudence. He seldom moves unless forced, shelters himself behind, and claims the concour of justice, honor, religion and ambition.

He: "You are all the world to me."

The Tired Business Man

Now, let us consider this bugaboo of the Tired Business Man. The theatrical managers yelp about him continually.

"Why do you produce nothing but musical comedy?" we ask.

"Oh, you must cater to the tired business man."

"Why must the libretto be in words of one syllable?"

"You see, we cater to the tired business man."

"No doubt that accounts for those feeble plots."

"Yes, we cater to the tired business man."

But does the tired business man get all this consideration when he goes to the ball park? No, he sits on the hard benches and roots like the rest of us. The Tired Business Man is a myth.

The Grasping Salt

Capt. Salt once behaved with considerable heroism in a collision at sea and his company wished to present him with a gold watch. Accordingly Salt was invited to a luncheon meeting, and there, in a luxurious room on the thirteenth story of a skyscraper, amid a throng of millionaires with white side whiskers, a superb gold watch was duly presented to the mariner in a neat speech.

"And how did Capt. Salt receive that beautiful watch?" He took it in his big red hand, frowned, and said:

"Where's the chain that goes with it?"

Like One of the Family

Tibbie had been placed by her aunt in a situation as maid of all work in a family of three. At the end of the week the aunt "stepped along in" to see how Tibbie was getting on.

"Do you like your work?" asked the aunt.

"'Tis fair," said the laconic Tibbie.

"And are they making you feel at home?"

"Whiles the are, and whiles they aren't."

"Now, what do you be meaning by that?" asked the aunt, impatiently.

"Aweel," said Tibbie, "they have na asked me to gang t' kirk wi' them yet, but last night they went on wi' a grand quarrel they were having, all the three o' them, wi' me takking the dishes off o' the table, just as if I had been one o' the family."

Artificial Sponge

The manufacture of artificial sponge is based on the action of zinc chloride on pure cellulose which has been mixed with pure rock salt. This mass is subjected to pressure by a press, provided with pins which serve to pierce through the mass thus making tiny canals, looking very much like the pores of the natural sponge. It is washed very thoroughly in a weak solution of alcohol to remove the excess of salts. This sponge swells up with water and hardens on drying just like the genuine article. It is especially adapted for filtering drinking water, but it can be used for all purposes to which the natural product is applied.

GOOD AS A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

Baby's Own Tablets are as good as a doctor in the house. They never fail to relieve the little one from stomach and bowel troubles, to expel worms, make teething easy and promote healthful sleep. Concerning them Mrs. J. H. Turner, Glenora, Ont., says: "I always recommend Baby's Own Tablets to my friends [illegible] used them for a long time, and find them without an equal. They relieved baby of the feverish ness and have made her one of the most healthy babies there is. I always keep them in the house and consider them as good as a doctor." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"I wonder," mused little Harry, who was studying his Sunday school lesson, "if men will ever live to be 900 or 600 years old again?"

"No, I guess not," replied his 6-year-old sister. "The Lord tried the experiment once and they got so bad he had to drown most of them."

Sleeping Sickness

A French doctor, M. A. Lafont, who has been studying the insects which are supposed to carry sleeping sickness, reports to the Biological Society of Paris that while working in the British dependencies in the Indian [illegible] British Mauritius and Reunion his attention was called to the reduvidan bugs, especially a large bug which attacks man and is called by the natives [illegible]. The first of these was caught in a native bed where it had just bitten a child. Afterwards the natives found him several specimens and in the intestinal canals of almost all he found trypanosomes, the organisms that caused sleeping sickness. The Sleeping Sickness Bulletin for April states that this observation should be of special interest for India, especially Madras, for Dr. Donovan has there found an exactly similar form of organism in the same bug, which he has proved to feed on human blood.

THINGS MADE IN CANADA

By Pauline Johnson

We don't need the marts of Europe or the trade of the eastern seas
We don't need the Yankee's corn and wine or the Asiatic's smiles
For what so good as our butter and cheese and under the wide blue dome
Will you tell me where you have tasted bread like the bread that is baked at home?
For we are the young and strong and who so fit for the fight as we
With our arms of steel and our iron heel and our hearts like the oaken tree?
For we are the home made, home fed men, the pride of a princely land
And the things produced in Canada are the things that her sons demand.

CANADIAN GOODS IN FINE EXHIBIT

The "Made in Canada" Train Will be the Greatest Exhibition Ever Placed on Wheels

The Made-in-Canada train which the Canadian Home Market Association has prepared for a trip through Western Canada will show the people of the West in a graphic manner what the development of manufacturing in the West will mean to them. It will also serve to demonstrate the fact that the quality of Canadian-made goods is equal to anything that can be imported value for value. The train will consist of ten standard baggage cars, the interior of which will be arranged so as to permit the display of the products as attractively and compactly as possible. Firms making exhibits will have three wall spaces to display photographs of their works, posters or other advertising hangers. The train will be electric lighted throughout. The train itself is a marvel of Canadian industry, is new throughout and was made in the Angus shops, Montreal. The space has been taken up and will no doubt [illegible]

NERVES AT HIGH TENSION

Necessary in This Age of Keen Competition and Great Accomplishment

When the Body Fails to Support the Brain Seek the Help of

DR. CHASES' NERVE FOOD

Nervous people are the salt of the earth. The great men and great women are usually those of nervous temperament.

But it takes an enormous quantity great brain of a highly tensioned nervous system.

Digestion fails because nerve force is lacking to control the flow of digestive fluids. A little extra excitement is followed by the agony of a sleepless night. You are easily irritated and lose patience, you [illegible] the reserve force which is necessary for success and to ward off disease.

Unfortunately nervous diseases do not right themselves and since your digestive system fails to supply sufficient nourishment you must seek external assistance such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure is not a narcotic to deaden the nerves. It is not a stimulant to whip up the nerves to renewed effort.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food feeds the feeble wasted nerves back to health and vigor. It floods the nervous system with new rich blood, the only substance from which nerve force can be made. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50 at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

ABOUT PAPER MONEY

Machine That Grinds Paper Dry and Then Stores It in Bags

As the greatest difficulty which most people meet with in regard to bank notes is that of being able to keep them, it will probably come as a surprise to many to learn there are yet others for whom the difficulty entailed in destroying such paper are well illustrated in a very interesting article upon paper destruction by the German imperial printers.

The methods previously available were three—burning, boiling and pulping. In the first process it has been found that even where a special furnace has been used it has not infrequently happened that while the outer parts of packets were destroyed some of the contents were not even singed. In the case of stamps or gummed paper the matter was still worse, for the packets baked together into solid blocks, the interiors of which were quite intact.

In the second process the paper for destruction is placed in iron boilers, lye is added and the contents then subjected to the prolonged action of steam. As a destructive process for small quantities this is quite effectual, as is that of pulping, a process in which the paper is cut up by revolving knives in water.

In both these cases there is, however, another difficulty—that of disposing of the product. It [illegible] easily be sold, it will not pay to transport and on hand the sodden, soggy mass quickly goes bad.

The German imperial printers therefore decided to try a new way—grinding it up dry. To this end they installed a forty horse-power mill which, by a process of curling, crushing and tearing reduces the paper to an almost powderlike form, in which it passes through a sieve into a collecting chamber beneath the mill ready for packing.

This, however, was accompanied by a very objectionable feature, especially when dealing with gummed paper in the grinding. Such a dust was created that though the workmen engaged, wore protectors, it yet persistently filled and blocked their eyes and nostrils.

As the work of packing was on this account not only unhealthy, unwillingly performed and also uneconomical efforts were made to find some mechanical means of doing it. Difficulty after difficulty arose.

Among such may be mentioned the spiral feeder having been devised it was found that the paper would form into balls solid as blocks of wood, which defied the efforts to move them by the twenty horse-power motor.

The imperial printers, therefore are now to be congratulated upon possessing a machine perfect in its kind. It takes the paper, grinds it up to any size desired and bags it.

Finally, though the paper in this form fetches but little on account of its consequent shortness of fibre, the mill is yet not only paying off the initial outlay, but it is also saving some $200 a year in workmen's wages.

LAST OF POWDER TRAIN HEROES

Crew That Took Ammunition to Union Forces at Antietam

With the death of Jeremiah C. Donovan, marble and granite cutter, the list of those who helped save the North from invasion in 1862 by taking a powder train through to Antietam, has lost its name.

Gen. McClellan was fighting desperately against Lee's combined forces on the field of Antietam when he discovered that powder was scarce, so that he could not use his heavy artillery against the Confederate forces. McClellan telegraphed to Washington that he must have powder at once. A trainload of explosives was hastened to Bridgeport, Pa., and the Cumberland Valley Railroad was requested to carry it over its line to Antietam. Volunteers were sought to run the engine.

"I'll take it to Antietam or to hell," said Joe Miller, engineer, as he stepped to the throttle.

With the tracks clear for a stretch of seventy-eight miles between the Susquehanna and the Potomac Joe Miller and his crew made record time, with only two stops. When the train reached Chambersburg the axle boxes were ablaze, and Jeremiah Donovan, then 17 years old, climbed aboard and volunteered his services. He vainly tried to keep the axle boxes cool during the spurt to Hagerstown, eight miles from Antietam. It resembled a train of fire and smoke as it pulled into the Maryland city.

The powder saved the day for McClellan, and placed the crew of the powder train on the unrecorded roll of the heroes of Antietam. Donovan was the only survivor. He was a native of Chambersburg, and came to Carlisle thirty seven years ago and established a marble yard there.—Philadelphia North American.

How It Struck Him

On one occasion when he was called upon to respond to a toast at a banquet a local professor compared the evening with the dull and drab nights he was forced to spend poring over his books. "It makes me think of the little son of a friend of mine," said the professor. "One Summer he was taken to the circus for the first time by his doting father. When he returned, round-eyed and all but apoplectic with delight, his mother asked him how he liked the circus. 'Mother,' said my friend's little boy, 'if you once go to the circus with me you'll never want to fool away time on church work again.'"

"The voice that is cryin' in the wilderness this day an' time is advertising real estate—stakin' off mansions on earth, an' if the voice is only loud enough, it's sure to catch the crowd."—Atlanta Constitution.

"Papa," queried 5-year-old George, "when two people are married are they made one?"

"Yes, my boy," answered his father.

"Which one?" continued the small information seeker.

Every year the United States imports between two million and three million pounds of camphor.

NO OPERATION WAS EVER NEEDED HERE

BECAUSE MRS. GOODINE USED DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Doctor said she would have to undergo operation, but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Central Kingsclear, York Co., N.B. (Special)—"The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation." So said Mrs. J. V. Goodine, of this place. But she smiled as she made the remark, for all need of the dreaded operation had vanished. Mrs. Goodine used Dodd's Kidney Pills and is a well woman. Given in brief and in her own words, Mrs. Goodine's experience is as follows:

"I was very miserable with Kidney Disease and unable to do my own work. The doctor said I would have to undergo an operation. After using three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I was all better and able to do my housework. This statement is true, as you can easily prove by enquiring among my neighbors."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys, cured kidneys strain all the poisons and other causes of disease out of the blood. Thus Dodd's Kidney Pills are a natural cure for all Kidney diseases and all ills caused by diseased kidneys.

FORESTS AND WATER

Benefits of Manitoba Forest Reserves To Surrounding Country

The water supply of a district is always considerably influenced by the forests at or near the head-waters of its streams. This is one of the reasons why large districts have been set aside by the Government of the Dominion of Canada and many other governments, to be kept permanently as forests.

The soil within the forest, largely composed as it is of decaying and decayed leaves, twigs, and other vegetable matter, acts much like a sponge in soaking up the moisture that falls. On the other hand, the absence of high winds within the forest does much to prevent or lessen evaporation.

The Riding Mountain and Turtle mountain forest reserves in Manitoba are good examples of this fact. In the Riding Mountain reserve are the head-waters of the Minnedosa (Little Saskatchewan or Rapid) river, one of the important tributaries of the Assiniboine from which, by the way, the town of Minnedosa is now deriving power. On the other side of the reserve issue many rivers, among them the Valley and Ochre rivers and Edwards creek. The last named is a source of water supply for the town of Dauphin.

In the Turtle Mountain forest reserve are to be found the sources of the Pembina and Whitemud rivers, as well as of many smaller streams, some of which lose themselves in the prairie.

Cutting away the forest from the head waters of the streams would mean that in spring the melted snows would rush down these watercourses in a torrent and be wasted, not to speak of doing considerable damage in its course, while in summer the stream beds would be almost dried up.

Thus not only would the streams be deprived of any possible value in producing power, but their value to the soils of the farming districts in keeping up a steady supply of moisture would be much lessened, if not altogether destroyed.

Regarded as one of the most potent compounds ever introduced to combat all summer complaints and inflammation of the bowels, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial has won for itself a reputation that no other cordial for the purpose can aspire to. For young or old suffering from these complaints it is the best medicine that can be procured.

The railway lines of the Grand Trunk Pacific in western Canada are being increased about 10 miles in length each day at the present time and, with the arrival in less than a week of two more pioneers, this rate of progress will be doubled, which means that, with the pioneers working steadily night and day, the company will build 140 miles of track in a week. Telegraph lines are being kept up with the construction.

First little innocent: "I wonder why they call notices in church of people about to be married 'putting up the bans'? What are the bans?"

Second little innocent (confidentially) "Short for 'husbans,' of course, dear. After marriages, you know, they're put down."

Rough on Reggie

"Oh, my dear," gushed Gertie. "Have you heard about Maude's hard luck?"

"No. What's it?" asked Maude's bosom friend, with glee.

"She took Reggie's engagement ring back to the jeweler's to be valued, the poor Maudie!"

"Well, that's nothing!" sneered the other. "I always do that."

"Yes, but the jeweler refused to give it back to her. He said Reggie hadn't paid for it."

MANLESS EDEN

Froissy, Near Paris, Is Suffragette's [illegible]

Not fifty miles from Paris is a small town called Froissy, which is literally run by women. This is not because the women are women with views but simply because the town is a town with needs and there are no men there to fill the needs. [illegible] is in the heart of an agricultural province [illegible] all the on-coming young farmers have migrated to more [illegible] lands. Only the old men remain, and what with the plough and the reaper they are kept too busy to give any attention to municipal affairs [illegible] hold offices. So they have turned over the reins of village government, chariot, steeds and all [illegible]. The mayor is a woman and the superintendent of the railway station is a woman, the mail-carrier is a woman and so is the village barber. The switchman is a switchwoman and the postmaster is a postmistress. The telegraph messenger boy is [illegible] Mme. Lecubern. When a proclamation from the mayor is to be heralded abroad the drummer-boy of Froissy, who is a drummer-girl, sallies forth and sounds a rat-tat on her kettle drum. This city official is a sturdy octogenarian Mme. Drubon Marchand, [illegible] who has held her post through wind and rain for years. The official letter-carrier [illegible] has been [illegible] for ten years. [illegible] Mme. [illegible]

Froissy is only five miles from Montreuil, in the Department of the Somme, and almost half way between Amiens to the north and Paris to the south. It is said to be the one civilized community in which municipal affairs have been delegated entirely to women.

Full of Experience

Here is a story that the movement for good bridges has revived. A man applied for a job in a nursery. "Do you know anything about grafting?" he was asked. "Well, I'll admit that I know something about it," said he. "I was county commissioner [illegible] [illegible] contracts for bridges." Kansas City Journal.

Curtesy

A huntsman called on Hodge to settle for damage done by a run to hounds, and found only Mrs. Hodge at home.

"Has your husband," he enquired, "made an examination yet?"

"That he have, sir," replied Mrs. Hodge with a curtsey.

"Rather a cursory examination, I suspect."

"Oh, dreadful, sir! Such language I never heard, never!" And the good woman held up her hands at the bare recollection.

Little Mary was in the habit of posting her mother's letters in the pillar box. One day a friend called and asked the child's mother what Mary was going to be when she grew up.

"Oh," said the mother, "I shall try and get her into the Post Office."

"Oh, mamma," cried the horrified child, "I should never be able to get in there!"

Longest Span Bridge

It is claimed for the new double-deck bridge which is now nearly completed across the Missouri river at Kansas City that it is the longest span riveted bridge as yet constructed, the length of the main span being 428 feet. The striking novelty of the structure is the fact that the lower platform can be raised [illegible] the floor by means of power-operated cables, drums and concrete counterweights. The vertical travel of the platform is 46 feet and it is raised and lowered by two 250 horse-power motors.

Philosophy by Post

There was once a man who had a great scheme of philosophy to propound. He became so engrossed in his idea that he allowed his hair to flourish unrestrained, wore out-of-date clothing and generally went around in a slipshod manner.

"Humph!" said those who heard this. "He is only posing. He does not mean what he says."

So he had his hair cut and acquired clothing of the latest style and pattern. Having remodelled himself thus, once more he started forth to spread his new doctrine.

"Humph," said the same people. "He is only bluffing. He doesn't know what he is talking about."

THE ACUTE PAIN FROM NEURALGIA

Permanently Cured Through the Use of Dr. William's Pink Pills

Neuralgia is not a disease—it is only a symptom, but a very painful one. It is the surest sign that your blood is weak, watery and impure and that your nerves are literally starving. Red blood is the one cause—good, rich blood the only cure. There you have the real reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia. They are the only medicine that contains in correct proportions the elements needed to make rich, red blood. This new blood reaches the root of the trouble, soothes the jangled nerves, drives away the nagging, stabbing pain and braces up your health in other ways. Among the sufferers from neuralgia cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, is [illegible] who says: "For months I suffered terribly from neuralgia. The pain in my head and face at times was so great as to be almost unbearable. I tried two doctors, and many remedies, without finding a cure, as the pain seemed to be ever kept up in the [illegible]. No Boom but Moving Forward

Business in town is reported to be in healthy condition the past several weeks and strangers find evidences of substantial progress on every hand. There seems to be a decided improvement on things in general, and although we are not having a boom still Vermilion is moving forward. The Secretary of the Board of Trade reports numerous inquiries for homesteads in the districts and also wages paid to carpenters generally. It is expected that this will be a record year for Vermilion.

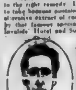
WOMEN TAKE NOTICE!

A man cannot understand the torture and suffering many women endure uncomplainingly. If the majority of men suffered as much pain and endured with patience the weakening sicknesses that most women do, they would ask for immediate sympathy and look for a quick cure.

Many women have been saved from a life of misery and suffering by turning to the right remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a remedy which is safe to take because containing no narcotics, alcohol or injurious ingredients. It is an alterative extract of roots, made with pure glycerin, and first given to the public by that famous specialist in the diseases of women, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.



Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

A Goat In a Bag

A Story of an Italian Bandit

By G. TOMASO

On an eminence amid the mountains back of Sorrento, Italy, stood a well dressed young man evidently waiting for something or some one. Before him was spread out the beautiful bay of Naples, to the north the islands of Ischia, and Capri jutting on what seemed at the time a sea of molten silver, for the Mediterranean takes on a different hue in every part of the day. Directly beneath him lay the town of Sorrento, set on a ledge of rock 300 feet above the bay, the waves beneath rocking the anchored fishing boats, then pushing on to break in a white line of foam at the foot of the cliff.

"I beg pardon," said a voice behind the gentleman. "Is this Signor di Guida?"

The gentleman turned and saw a man who seemed to belong to the lower but not the lowest class.

"I am Signor di Guida," he replied, somewhat surprised.

"There is a man over there," pointing, "who carries a letter for you."

"Indeed? I expected him to come up by this road. I will go to him."

Di Guida dropped a coin into the man's hand and went off in the direction he had indicated. It was not on the road, but behind some high rocks. As soon as he had passed around the rocks he saw a man who advanced to meet him—a tall, well built fellow, but with a sinister expression on his face.

"Are you looking for me, sir?" asked Di Guida.

"Are you Signor Vincenzo di Guida?"

"I am."

"And expecting a note from Signorina Bianca Fabri?"

"I am."

The man held out a note, which Di Guida received with some surprise, for it was written on paper such as Signorina Fabri was not in the habit of using and addressed in a masculine hand. He opened it and read:

ANDREA ZANELLA.

Di Guida saw at once that he had been tricked. He had been drawn away from the road on which vehicles and pedestrians were constantly passing to a retired spot where he could be easily captured without exciting any attention from wayfarers. But how did Zanella, a member of the celebrated Camorra and a man who had been mixed up in a number of illegal episodes, know of Di Guida's affair with Signorina Fabri? The lady had yielded to her father's wishes so far as to engage herself to one of her choice. But she loved Di Guida and was carrying on with him a clandestine correspondence. Looking up at Zanella, Di Guida said:

"How you became aware that I expected a note from Signorina Fabri I am at a loss to understand. Your demand for 100,000 lire is absurd. My father has not as much as that in the world. Had he a fortune to warrant his paying you such a sum I would not be up here waiting for a note."

"As you please, signor. I will send a note from you to your father stating your capture and the ransom demanded for you if you choose to write it."

Zanella raised a silver whistle to his lips and blew upon it, whereupon several men started from different hiding places.

Di Guida remained with the bandits quite awhile. Their chief threatened several times to cut off a few of his prisoner's fingers and send them with his next demand, but Di Guida laughed at him.

"Every one between here and Naples and all Neapolitans know that you, Andrea Zanella, are here in these mountains overlooking Sorrento, and you will be captured at last. Your friends of the Camorra will not be able to save you. You are a fool to set up for a regular bandit, for you can never rise beyond the Neapolitan sneak thief you are. If you harm me my father will understand parts of letters of mine you have carried to him—after inspecting them and not understanding them yourself—that as evidence of harm to me he is to put my best friend, Sergeant Giuseppe Mirelo of the carabinieri, upon your track and mine and never leave the job till he has taken you."

Zanella poohpoohed this, but it was evident he was impressed by the information. He took no especial measures to enforce his demands, and when he went away from the camp left instructions that the prisoner was to be loosely guarded that he might escape.

One evening, when Zanella was away, he availed himself of an opportunity given him by his guards and walked away into the darkness. He walked for perhaps an hour, when he came to a small villa. It had commenced to rain and he applied for admission. His summons was answered by a young girl, who told him that her father and brother were absent, but meanwhile he might come in out of the rain.

Di Guida entered the villa, telling the girl that he would remain in the hall, which is used for a living room in such buildings in Italy. A light stood on a table, and there were books at hand, so after she had withdrawn he sat down to read. It was not long before there was another knock at the door, and the girl came out of a rear room to answer the summons. Di Guida sat where he could not see who had arrived, but supposed it was those expected. He was mistaken. They were several men whom no young lady would dare admit, and she refused to do so. Finally they prevailed upon her to permit them to leave a sack containing a goat that had been killed that day and which they would return for. To this the girl consented. They unloaded their burden, and the girl went back to where she had come from.

Now, in doing this the men had placed the sack near the door of the room in which Di Guida was sitting. He took no interest in it, but went on reading.

THE GIRL PALED, BUT SAID NOTHING.

"My bag is a poke," said Di Guida.

After a few moments the bag recommenced its hitching motion and, guided by Di Guida, passed to a position a short distance away from the door. Di Guida presently called his hostess and told her to meet her father and brothers outside, when they came, and advise them of what had occurred.

Not long after they arrived, and, having been warned, they entered the house and secured arms. Then they came into the hall and saluted the guest.

"Now, my friend of the bag," said Di Guida, "you have doubtless come here prepared to cut yourself out. Do so."

Presently a slit was made in the bag. A man threw it off and stood up. Di Guida was right—he was Zanella.

There was nothing for it but to obey the order. Zanella blew, and as each

For a sunny exposure the California poppy, eschscholtzia, will endure midsummer heat and drought without flinching. The colors vary from pure white through yellow and orange to scarlet, with the satin sheen peculiar to the poppy tribe, while the foliage has a whitish cast which is especially in harmony with the blossoms.

For a boutonniere there are few blossoms which equal the old fashioned bachelor's button in white and the various shades of blue. It has the happy faculty of keeping fresh for hours and of never becoming unsightly, even when wilted.

For rapid growth the kudzu vine excels, well established plants sometimes attaining a height of fifty feet in a single season and furnishing a dense shade. If grown from seed, ten or twelve feet is perhaps the limit the first season.

The calendula will endure more frosts without complaint than any other annual, offering a pleasing variety of the different shades and combinations of yellow.

If you wish to conceal the garden fence plant sweet peas or a row of hollyhocks.

Portulaca is fine for covering a sunny spot, the succulent foliage being a most successful resister of drought.

The calliopsis is showy when grown in masses, the long, slender stems rendering it admirable for cutting.

The branching varieties of aster are preferable to the compact sorts. Lavender and white make a charming combination, while pink appears without a rival for third choice.—Ideal Homes.

AGRICULTURE.

Agriculture, the oldest of occupations, is also the most important. The value of that which comes from the soil surpasses in value all else that is produced by human labor. The prosperity of the farmer is coincident with the prosperity of the nation, and fundamentally the welfare of all the people depends upon the cultivation of the soil.—Governor Hadley of Missouri.

REAL VALUE OF PLAY.

A Brief Period Snatched From the Regular Routine Aids Health.

Self improvement societies that have tried to find the best way to live have never discovered anything more valuable than play, says Collier's Weekly. A man may shake up a continent by his energy or build kingdoms by his brains, but so far as his personal life is concerned he has been a failure if he has not learned to play.

Play, of course, is not confined to games. It may be a walk in the woods, a row upon the river, a sail upon the lake. To some making a garden is play, as to others is chopping wood. To play is to follow the irresponsible inclination which gives the most pleasure with the least mental strain and bodily wear.

Ideal play is a brief period of care free living snatched from the regular routine. It is enjoying the pleasure of being alive.

Premier Sifton Extended Civic Reception

Much Needed Work On Roads and Bridges Will Be Undertaken

At a meeting of the citizens of Vermilion Friday night last it was decided to extend a civic reception to Premier Sifton on his visit to this constituency, a complimentary luncheon to be provided. A strong committee was appointed to carry out the arrangements and to meet the Premier and party on their arrival here.

The government party comprising Premier Sifton, Hon. Mr. Mitchell minister of Public Works, Hon. Mr. Stewart, minister of municipalities and Mr. Stocks, deputy minister of public works, arrived on the noon train Wednesday and were met at the depot by the committee and a strong deputation of citizens. The luncheon was served in the council chamber of the town hall at 1.15 and about sixty sat down to a beautiful and most refreshing spread which did justice to the caterer for the occasion, Mr. Chas Pilkie. His Worship Mayor Roxborough presided and the guests of honor were seated to his right and left. After the Mayor had introduced the town guests ... [illegible]

[illegible] ... were called upon in turn by the Mayor for a few words. All expressed their appreciation of the reception accorded them and while not committing themselves in any way to a definite ... the work proposed to be undertaken in this portion of the constituency, yet made it sufficiently plain that the people could look to a large amount of the much needed work on roads and bridges being undertaken this year. The gathering closed with the singing of the national anthem.

It is probable that no institution in the Dominion of Canada comes into touch with so large a number of people who have been impressively . . . as does the Annuities branch of the Post Office Department. It is understood that hardly a day passes that several communications are not received in which the writers bewail the loss of money invested in some scheme that promised phenomenal dividends or returns. One of the saddest of these cases is that of a lady who about three years ago enquired as to the cost of an Annuity of $500. The information was promptly given to her, but the opportunity to purchase was not embraced. She believed she could invest her money to better advantage and that at the time she attained her 55th birthday she would not only have enough to pay for the Annuity outright, but a little for rainy weather. This week another letter has been received from the same lady, who by the way is now over fifty years of age, which furnishes the sequel to the story. She says: "I have spent my savings on worthless stocks, believing, firmly believing, that I would soon be rich. I would not listen to advice ... that I know best. I wonder at my foolishness now ... in schemes I knew nothing about. For some time I had a large salary and gave to certain companies every month. Now that they have turned out worthless, I see how wrong I was. I am sorry ... for what I have done, but nothing will bring back what I have wasted." Her case is a pathetic one, and her experience has been costly, but it is the common experience of many who have tried Get-Rich-Quick schemes.

In the same month of the same year another lady enquired as to the cost of a Government Annuity. She ... had saved a nice little sum for the "Rainy Day" as the result of her own labors. She began payments with a view to purchasing the same amount of Annuity to begin at the same age ...

DIFFERENT NOW

Since the Slugger, Coffee, Was Abandoned

Coffee probably causes more biliousness and so-called malaria than any one other thing, even bad climate. (Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine, the drug in coffee.)

A Ft. Worth man says:

"I have always been of a bilious temperament, subject to malaria and ... coffee. At times I would be covered with boils and full of malarial poison ...

"I don't know how it happened, but I finally became convinced that my sickness was due to the use of coffee ... stopped coffee and began drinking Postum.

"From that time I have not had a boil, not had malaria at all, have gained 15 pounds good solid weight ... I have taken no medicine at all. Postum has certainly made healthy red blood for me in place of the blood that coffee drinking impoverished and made unhealthy." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a Reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Nannie Looked at the Cup.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — Who Chipped Poor Nannie's New Teacup

It was an early bedtime, and Jack and Evelyn said they thought on that account daddy ought to tell them a longer story.

He smiled, for well he knew that by the time his usual story was over white lids would be drooping over heavy eyes and tired heads would be gently nodding. So he began:

"Nannie was a very careful little girl, and when her grandma gave her six little cups and saucers she was very pleased. Nannie asked in her six dearest friends, and they had an afternoon tea party.

"When they went home they thanked Nannie for the pleasant afternoon they had enjoyed and tripped down the street looking very happy.

"Then Nannie carefully carried the dishes out to the kitchen, where mother allowed her to have a pan of nice soapy water, and into this she put the cups and saucers one by one and washed and dried them.

"And when Nannie came to the cup used by Kitty Flynn, there, right out of the rim of the cup, a tiny chip was missing.

"Nannie held it up and looked at it hard. A broken cup—what a shame! She had told the little girls to be very, very careful because the cups with their pretty pink flowers had been a gift from dear grandma.

"Nannie sat down and cried. Never again would she speak to Kitty. It was bad enough to break the cup, but to go home without saying anything about it seemed the height of meanness.

"'Never mind, dear,' said mother. 'Perhaps we can get another cup just like it.'

"'But it won't be just the same,' sobbed Nannie. 'Grandma told me to take good care of them, and what will she say when she sees them broken so soon? It was mean of Kitty not to tell.'

"'Yes, if Kitty knew she broke it it would have been more polite of her to say so and tell you that she was sorry.'

"Nannie wept and would not be comforted.

"'If we must tell grandma suppose we have it over since it worries you so much. I'll just call her up on the telephone and tell her.'

"So mother called up grandma's number and told her about the accident to the cups and how very sorry Nannie was.

"'The dear child!' grandma replied. 'You know I forgot to tell her one of the cups was chipped when I got it. For that reason the storekeeper sold it to me a good deal cheaper. ... [illegible]

"There," exclaimed Nannie, "I'm so glad Kitty didn't break the cup. I'm sorry I blamed her."

THE VALUE OF PROMINENCE

Sometimes It Is a Disadvantage

By F. A. MITCHEL

I am a literary man, a novelist. I and my characters are known all over the English speaking world. Of late years we literary men, after having won our literary spurs, find the lecture field much more profitable—certainly an easier way of earning money—than writing books.

I gained my prominence before I had come to middle age and was considered a desirable parti by young ladies in search of a husband. Miss Amelia Gregory was the one of all others I favored, but Miss Gregory was not sure whether she favored me or not. I had a rival—a rival who had some prominence, though in a different field from mine. Harding was an explorer and climber. He had climbed not only the prominent Swiss peaks, but certain ones of the Himalayas and Andes. He had stood on the top of one mountain on which no man had ever stood before.

Miss Gregory's suitors became reduced to two, Harding and myself. Not gifted with marked ability in any one direction, she was ambitious for the man she would marry. I was better known than Harding, but there is a greater fascination about a man who is at constant risk of breaking his neck than one who incurs no especial danger. Miss Gregory treasured a picture taken from an illustrated newspaper [illegible]

[illegible] death to Amelia and win an easy victory. I thought it best that he should not see me alive. If he attempted to take advantage of my death I might turn that advantage to myself by turning up to the flesh in the nick of time. Therefore as soon as the funeral procession had passed I drove on to my hotel and registered under an assumed name.

I soon got an explanation of the singular occurrence. An impostor had personated me and several days before my arrival had lectured in my name. He had been taken sick, and the society which had extended the invitation to lecture had given him every attention. He had died, and they had attended his funeral in a body.

I shrank from putting in an appearance as the real Paul Wagstaff. The chances were that I would be considered instead the real impostor, and if I were believed I would only make those who had shown me or my reputation such marked attention feel uncomfortable. The consequence was that I left the city without making myself known.

It was late in the season, and, having no further engagements in the east, I turned my face homeward. I would have written my relatives that if they got a report of my death and burial to consider it incorrect, but I could travel about as fast as a letter would go. Besides, I had no very near connections. As to Miss Gregory, I was in no hurry to forestall any report she might hear concerning me. I would likely get home as soon as Harding, so I had little or nothing to fear from that source.

I did not care to travel very fast, so that Harding, if he were carrying the news of my death, could, if he chose, go faster than I. Spring was coming on, and, fearing the heat of southern countries, I preferred to get into the mountains. While in Interlaken I heard the news of an accident to a party of men who had attempted to [illegible]

[illegible] of years, there has been a constant flow of [illegible] on agriculture, in its several lines, going out from the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. In [illegible] annual reports, special reports, [illegible] and circulars, hundreds of [illegible] have been issued [illegible] exceeding [illegible] a year and the stream is [illegible] [illegible] the Department [illegible] a branch which is charged with the sending out from one office of all the publications issued. Communication

Editor,
Vermilion Standard,

[illegible]

"Vermilion will be a big town as the people make it." In the last issue of the Standard [illegible] that a 10,000 club was formed which is a step in the right direction. I trust that the citizens will work together for the interest of the town. The trouble must [illegible] at the start when [illegible] to be done it devolves on a few. I understand that [illegible] the 10,000 club [illegible] is most important that when meetings are called that [illegible] would attend [illegible] the interests of the town. As one who is very much interested in the [illegible] of Vermilion, and the future of Vermilion rests largely with the people themselves, it behooves [illegible] to strive to make [illegible] 10,000 club [illegible] reality. To [illegible] things are [illegible] for the success of the [illegible]

1st. It is imperative that harmony reigns, or all work done [illegible] one undo the work of the optimist.

2nd. [illegible] let the work devolve on one or two, take up your share and participate in the upbuilding of your town and country.

3rd. — Never mind the other fellow's business, you acknowledge his power when you neglect your own to talk about his.

4th. — Foresight, not hindsight, is what makes a town. It was said years ago that the C.P.R. would not make enough money to pay for axle grease. Still the promoters went ahead and you know the result.

We want industries and if people do not encourage them you cannot expect them to come in. Vermilion will be as big a town as the people make it. —— The [illegible] comes in for a lot of abuse but who has made our [illegible] and towns what they are to-[illegible] Vermilion has been advertised extensively the last two years and a [illegible] capital has been invested in the town and district, benefiting you directly or indirectly. Property is cheaper in Vermilion than in any other town. - Why? Ask yourselves the question.

You possibly are a property holder if not you should be. If you [illegible] property you expect to sell for more than you paid. You cannot [illegible] if you do not [illegible] [illegible] will, if you are selling [illegible] do not tell the purchaser it is the worst town [illegible] The same spirit applied to the upbuilding of the town will show wonderful results and you will benefit through increased incomes.

You may not know that Vermilion has the smallest townsite in Western Canada. A few figures from the following Boards of Trade [illegible] prove interesting.

Dauphin has 700 acres in city limits.

Edmonton has 10,000 acres in [illegible]

[illegible] has 9,280 acres in city [illegible]

[illegible] has 7,850 [illegible] city limits.

[illegible] through [illegible] miles in city limits.

Brandon has 3000 acres in city limits.

VERMILION has less than 200 acres as per registered blue print of the Canadian Northern Railway. Including the Eastern Division and strip owned by the railway about 420 acres would be sum total. Vermilion property will be increased 25 per cent shortly. Vermilion has the promise of a number of branch railroads and there is no doubt but that work will start on the Brooksheim and Medicine Hat line this summer.

Extract from "Canada Today"

Land around the borders of an established town, if judiciously selected offers an attractive look up. The important point to remember is the direction in which the town is growing. As the population of the town increases, the boundaries of the town are extended, and in about five years the property should have doubled in value. Outside property can usually be let profitably for purposes of growing vegetables, for which there is a good sale in the town, therefore bringing in a small annual return [illegible] with the capital increase. The investor in such property may have to wait anything from two to five years for his profit.

I do not think that Vermilion will be a city in a week, but I do [illegible] and property holders will realize large profits on their investment.

Vermilion is now past the intermediate stage and it should be our aim and endeavor to arouse public sentiment to that pitch where Vermilion's people will fully realize the importance of the subject with which they are dealing, and the hearty co-operation of every citizen to aid and assist the 10,000 club, the results will be gratifying to all who have the best interests of Vermilion at heart. In closing I wish to pay a tribute to the good work the Press of Vermilion is doing and it should have the support of all.

Yours truly,
A. E. Howard

On the "Made-in-Canada" Train

The special train, bearing the "Made-in-Canada" Exhibit, which left Montreal on May 16th, and is touring the West until July 1st, is creating unusual interest all along the line.

One of its notable exhibits is that of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited, the largest manufactures of smoking and chewing tobaccos and cigarettes in the Dominion.

In addition to their generous advertising, this company is still further helping all dealers carrying these well known brands by giving away samples and attractive souvenirs to those visiting the "Made-in-Canada" train.

Among the brands thus being advertised and sampled, are those most popular with the men of Western Canada: "Black Watch" Chewing Tobacco, "Shamrock" Quality Plug Smoking Tobacco, "Meerschaum" Cut Plug, "Old Chum" Pipe Tobacco, "Player's Navy Cut Cigarettes, "Sweet Caporal" cigarettes and "Columbia" Little Cigars.

THE SAMPLE MARKET

Grain Fixing and Grain Mixing

Dear Mr. Editor,

Will you permit an ordinary homesteader to pass an opinion on a very plausible, and at the same time a very great injury that threatens the grain trade of the West? I refer to the establishment of a sample market.

The grain sharks are making a determined effort to get legal authority to open such markets in Winnipeg and Fort William. The scheme is to take a certain quantity of grain from every carload and place it on view in the grain exchange, and as soon as the car is sold, the car from which the sample is taken is sent to its destination by the railway company. Meanwhile the cars are delayed in transit twenty-four hours, and cars not arriving at Winnipeg before eleven o'clock on Saturday mornings are held until eleven o'clock on the following Monday morning. This means that the loss of time in transit caused by the sample market, reduces the carrying capacity of the railway companies nearly two days in every week. This, on the three main lines of railway to Lake Superior, equals a reduction of about 2,000 out of a total of 15,000 available for the transportation of grain during the whole of the busy season.

Now, sir, I look on this as a very serious matter. The great cry, almost menacing in its intensity, from the Rocky Mountains to the Lake of the Woods, has been and will be, "Give us cars! more cars! more cars!!!" And every newspaper in Western Canada re-echoes the cry, "More cars!!!" And this too in the face of the fact that next fall will witness an increase of millions of bushels of grain to be transported to eastern markets. It is nothing short of criminal folly in the face of these facts to place such an obstacle as a sample market in the way to prevent rapid and efficient transportation to Fort William and Port Arthur.

It is seldom, indeed that I can commend the railway companies, but I cannot shut my eyes to the fact that they are all straining every nerve to prepare for the fall rush. They are laying double tracks as quickly as possible. They are improving their terminals. They are largely increasing their elevator storage capacity. They are buying hundreds of locomotives and thousands of cars. And shall we stand supinely by and see the grain sharks block the march of progress. No! A thousand times no! Rather let us help ourselves to get our grain quickly to the lake front by seeing that no obstacles are needlessly allowed to interfere with the transportation companies. The farmers are perfectly right in asking for more cars, and the railway companies must do their utmost to comply with the demand but is it not a queer way to get them when we allow the available supply to be cut down to the tune of 2,000 at one lick.

There is another aspect of this barefaced attempt to impose a sample market on us farmers. Ever since the mixing of wheat in the elevators was forbidden by law, desperate attempts have been made by the grain sharks backed by the big interests, the financiers and very likely by the railway companies, to get at the wheat and play their old game of mixing grades, and robbing us farmers. Once allow a sample market and they can mix wheat to their heart's content. Nothing is easier for them. They buy a number of cars of maybe rejected wheat by sample, then buy a car or two of the higher grade and [illegible] the whole to an elevator, dump the good and bad into the same bin, mix the whole thoroughly and steal a higher grade [illegible] a substantial profit. Thus the mixing is as thoroughly done as it would be if there were no law to prevent it.

The [illegible] who are actively seeking to get the sample market established are the same gang who formed the Winnipeg grain combine which controlled the entire wheat market of Western Canada. They are the men who named the price to be paid for wheat at every shipping point until the farmers got the Grain Act amended so as to compel the railways to accept wheat loaded in cars at loading platforms and the distribution of empty cars to elevators and farmers on equal terms. Ever since, this grain combine has been extremely [illegible] [illegible]

TWO YEARS SUFFERING

Brought on by a Severe Strain—How a Cure Was Found

Mr. Joseph Stephens, Rosemount, Ont., is one of the great host who continually sound the praises of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he has much reason to do so as they brought him from suffering to health, after he had spent much money and two years of time experimenting with other treatments. Mr. Stephens tells his experience as follows: "In the month of January, 1908, while working in a logging camp at Creston, B.C., I got my back badly injured. I suffered a great deal of pain and was almost helpless. I tried plasters, thinking they would help me, but they were of no use. I took several medicines, equally without benefit. Then I was advised to try electrical treatment and did so for a time, but without getting any permanent relief, and I began to look as though I was going to be permanently crippled. Then I was advised to undergo treatment with a specialist at Spokane, Wash. After examining me he said I was in a very bad shape and that the trouble was likely to result in Bright's disease. However, he told me that he felt sure he could cure me. At a heavy expense I was under his treatment for three months, but did not get the least benefit. I was almost in despair; work was plentiful and wages good, but I could not work, as I was quite unable to bend. I was in this condition for about two years when my brother, who was with me all the time, came across one of Dr. Williams' pamphlets and read of the great work Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were doing. He urged me to try them, but I thought it would be useless to spend more money after all the other treatment had failed. He insisted, however, and got a dozen boxes of the Pills and I began to take them. Before I had used a half dozen boxes I felt relief, and I continued taking the Pills until every vestige of the pain was gone, and I could raise my hands above my head and then bend until I could touch my toes with my fingers, something I had not been able to do for over two years. My cure was a [illegible] to my comrades, and you may be sure I told them what had brought it about. I am now as well and strong as any man in the country and I owe it all to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

His Fatal Kindness

The difficulties of supplanting nature is shown in a Fulton, Mo., dispatch to a Rochester paper. The communication declares that when Roy Chamberlain's pet dog lost one of his legs, the chances seemed to be against Shep staying this side of the dog heaven, but Roy built a wooden leg and attached it to the stump of Shep's limb.

Shep each night went to his master and permitted his artificial leg to be removed, and in the morning it was strapped on again. Shep was really a much improved watchdog because he did not run around nights.

The wooden leg, however, was the cause of Shep's death. In a fit of absent-mindedness he went after a particularly ambitious flea that had chosen his head as a defying ground and fractured his skull as he attempted to hit the insect with his wooden leg.

Roy painted the leg white and used it as a marker for Shep's grave.

Viewed With Suspicion

Before he was well known Wendell Phillips, the abolitionist, went to Charlestown and put up at a hotel. He had breakfast served in his room and was waited upon by a slave. Mr. Phillips seized the opportunity to present to the negro in a pathetic way that he regarded him as a man and brother. The negro, however, seemed more anxious about his breakfast than he was about his position in the social scale. Phillips became discouraged and told him to go away, saying that he could not bear to be waited on by a slave.

CHAPTER V.

A list of those came to Cowley Bridge to be married from which I extracted this. When he saw Clara Tate in his office he knew that he had thought to a little. Could he enter upon a new life and make even a start in it as he was, his own self-respect would be restored, and Clara Tate's opinion of him.

His first step in that direction was to build up better, and the following day he went to Little Jutton Street for carrying with him some choice flowers. He had not thought that she would have stopped so promptly, for he received on his first check with a very bad grace.

"What I an please sire not her at all, Clara." he asked in a whisper.

"Haven't got it, sir."

At that moment Vaughan Bevan appeared.

This gentleman is a friend of hers. He may be able to tell you, she added more graciously.

Brian approached Vaughan with an affable smile.

"Mad, to come to your house for a moment on business?"

Vaughan looked at him with surprise, but he was always polite, and rather than to be for trouble he asked him in.

The room was small, but it was a friend of Miss Dulie Grant and was therefore entitled to one and comfort.

"I don't know. She went to the country yesterday. She may be back very day.

Charley Brown started violently at he heard this statement, but he quick to controlled himself.

I am sorry to hear it. he said quietly.

Yes. Miss Stafford has been very ill.

Thank you. I shall have occasion to pass my I shall hear from her.

With characteristic tact he then seconded the subject.

Vaughan, may be mistrusted to [illegible] anything.

Brian looked at him with surprise.

Not Charley Brown was of a cautious disposition and he determined at once to verify his suspicions. At first sight it appeared to him to be certain that the girl called Vera Bidford must have represented herself to Miss Grant, for it was extremely unlikely that both girls should have come into an unexpected fortune. He sought out the landlady, and entered her kitchen, in spite of her protestations.

I don't suppose you mind me as a sovereign, he said easily, as he took a gold piece from his pocket and laid it on the table.

If it honour, she began.

You seem to pride yourself about that, I only want a little information.

I'll give you any I've got, she said with a covetous glance at the money.

You've been having strange lady passings in your household?

Indeed I have. Not if like talking my husband to court, after twenty years of married life, but—

I wasn't alluding to your domestic differences, I was referring to Miss Grant and her bond fortune.

I hadn't heard of it. She wants it, for she's a poor ailing thing, least-ways since she's been here.

Hasn't she been left a lot of money? he asked carelessly.

Ah, you mean Miss Stafford. Now there's a difference kind of girl—a real lady every inch of her. I'll warrant she never touched the color of her money yet. Why, she's never even seen a five-pun' note—no, a poor-spirited girl she is, and that's the truth.

What's the color of her hair?

Just like white heather, she answered, with alacrity, and she evidently said as she edged nearer the table.

I think you had better take it, Good-day to you.

He thought that the information he had well would be sufficient, and returned to his office with a feeling of satisfaction that was somewhat rare with him. His clerks hissed with curiosity at him, as he gave them a cheery bit smile. He went to his room, and sent for Mr. Bidford, who was soon by his delight.

He spoke in a good grizzly one, he said, in a tone of great solicitude, but what a splendid man he was! He spoke for a man like myself. Fresh of temper, and somewhat given to drink, but his heaven, but she'll set off my dis charms."

He walked over to the mirror that he hanging on the wall.

I'm not such a bad-looking chap, am I, Bidford? I'm fair to look at, and I've got a heart as big as a house, and I'm not bad-looking, am I?

Bidford approached Vaughan with an affable smile.

Mad, to come to your house for a moment on business?

Vaughan looked at him with surprise, but he was always polite, and rather than to be for trouble he asked him in.

Alfalfa Growing in Alberta

During the past two years more than eleven hundred farmers in Alberta have applied to, and received from the Experimental Farms at Lacombe and Lethbridge inoculated soil for the purpose of beginning the culture of alfalfa. This indicates in some measure the interest being taken in this western prairie province in the growing of this exceedingly valuable fodder crop. Tests have proved that it grows well from the United States boundary as far north as Fort Vermilion. It has been tried extensively with and without irrigation and the conclusion is reached that while it is an exceedingly profitable crop under irrigation, it will probably produce more hay on dry land without irrigation than any other perennial forage crop that can be grown there.

To supply the much needed information on the subject and to publish as widely as possible the usefulness of this crop, a bulletin has been issued under the direction of the Minister of Agriculture by the Experimental Farms, entitled "Alfalfa Growing in Alberta". It was prepared by W. H. Fairfield and G. H. Hutton, Superintendents of the Experimental Stations in that Province. It is issued as Bulletin No. 8, Second Series, and will be sent free to those who make application to any of the Branch Experimental Farms or Stations in the Western provinces or to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Remember Your Opportunity

Always keep in mind that every knock you give your home community recoils with greater or less force upon yourself, and that in every benefit that follows a boost you also have a share. If we would expand and prosper, we must work together for the common good. The opportunities of the country [illegible] should appeal to every farmer, and yet there are some who always have a hammer [illegible] they should an [illegible] exposition, right in the very [illegible] of this [illegible] country, require in the matter of your old [illegible] and co-operation through exhibiting the best that you have grown? And what about the men who criticize, when an exposition is made international-world-wide in scope, with displays of the best that nearly every country under the sun produces — and it is brought right to his very door, with the thousands of attending official representatives, progressive agriculturists and captains of finance and transportation, who travel thousands and thousands of miles to ascertain what are the requirements, what they can do to make the journey through life easier and happier, and what is best for the country, yes, the world as a whole? God loves an honest man, the Bible doesn't place a knocker anywhere near the throne.

Nearly every district throughout western Canada — in every one of the four provinces — is arranging to be represented at the great International Dry-Farming Congress at Lethbridge, Alberta, October 21-26 next, and, in view of the fact that some $10,000 of prizes have already been announced, and more are promised, it behooves every farmer in this community to get busy and join with his neighbors in arranging for the exhibit that will capture the sweepstake prize. It will be a boost for our district; not to do it may place us in the category of the knocker. A special meeting should be called at once, and we should make our preparations right now.

With the phenomenal move in property both in Vermilion and farm lands adjacent to the town it is not unreasonable to conclude that a railway movement is at the back of this activity. That a railway corporation never divulges its plans is conceded, but there are evidences abroad that that great corporation the C.P.R. are carrying out an aggressive policy radiating lines. Within [illegible] will ultimately place a network of railway into the vast hinterland to the north of the main line of the C.N.R. This [illegible] lying to the [illegible] is as yet untapped and in the way of resources it is probably one of the richest belts in this great and vast westland. Is it unreasonable to suppose that the eyes of the greatest railroad corporation in the world have not been set hard and fast on it and that they are not, even now, already at the outset of carrying these plans into effect. The Standard believes that the C.P.R. will build into Vermilion, for this point is the natural line from Wilkie into the northland, being the most direct angular route across country to St. Paul and Chicago - and it is the direct route that is going to count. A delegation from Vermilion were told by Mr. Bury of the C.P.R. that in the event of branch line construction being pushed this year on the lines radiating from Wilkie, the natural terminus of the great northwestern line was Vermilion. The C.P.R. can make a city out of Vermilion and every step should be taken and every effort put forth to urge upon the C.P.R., even though they may be perfectly cognizant of the fact the untold benefits to be gained by the immediate invasion of the Vermilion country. — The time is ripe.

The C.N.R. have plans which will greatly tend to the growth of Vermilion, but until the completion of their transcontinental line from coast to coast we are led to believe the exact date of construction is indefinite but it is assured that the Vermilion Medicine Hat line is a living reality.

Bearing Down Pains

"What woman or [illegible] does not experience those dreadful bearing down pains. Mrs. E. Griffith of Main street, Epworth, [illegible] "[illegible] bearing down pains had settled across my back and sides. I was often unable to stoop or straighten myself up. Many times each night I would have to leave my bed with the irregular and frequent secretions of the kidneys, and feel just as tired as in the morning as on retiring. I was longing and would have to let my housekeeping stand. Nothing I had tried would benefit me. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and concluded I would try them, which I did, and soon found the long sought relief. My back strengthened and I began to feel better and stronger. I now enjoy my sleep without being disturbed and feel grateful to Booth's Kidney Pills for what they did for me."

Large Sum To Be Expended on Roads And Bridges-70 Miles New Telephones-Railway Through The North

On the return of the government party from a tour through the Vermilion territory Thursday, an informal smoker was held in the Royal George theatre so that the views of the Premier and Minister of Public Works might be learned as to the measure of good things to be alloted to this part of the constituency this year and also to draw forth a statement relative to railway matters as they might effect this town.

Statements were made that a substantial sum of money would be expended on roads and bridges and the telephone system extended some 70 miles in the district, mostly in the north from where largely signed petitions had been sent in. Relative to railway matters, the Premier stated that there were no doubts as to new lines being built into Vermilion. In the railway project of the government this was provided for. At present over 5000 men and teams were engaged in railway work in the province and just as fast as construction material could be obtained roads were being built. The plans of the cut-off from Bruderheim to Vermilion as submitted had met with the Premier's disapproval and at the present time the C.N.R. were engaged in surveying a line to run far enough north of their main line as not to injure the trade of towns already established on the latter, but to afford much needed relief to settlers eighteen and thirty miles from markets. From a point on this line it is no doubt proposed to run south through Vermilion and Medicine Hat to the International Boundary. No specific promises were made further than the above and the people of this portion of the Vermilion constituency will watch for aggressive action on the part of the government in the rapid development of the Alberta railway policy.

Two Drowning Fatalities

A young man named Chapman, ledger keeper in the Merchants Bank of Canada, Mannville, went bathing in a lake near that town Sunday. He tried to swim across but when about half way over he called out to his friend that he could not do it and immediately sank to the bottom. The water was cold and it is thought that he was seized with a cramp. The victim was an Englishman, about 19 years old and has no relatives in this country.

The second drowning fatality occurred near Minburn, when a young man named Aston, lost his life while bathing.

Both bodies were recovered.

Vermilion possesses the same strategical relationship to the development of the north country of this portion of Alberta as does the town of Battleford to the development of the northland of western Saskatchewan. Battleford's wonderful growth will be duplicated by Vermilion; nothing can hold it back.

Thumbs in Social Gestures

The persons realize how important a part the thumb has played in the social relations of mankind.

Hitchiner relates the opposing elements of progress to Gentleman the digital settlement of a bargain was always stipulated by the licking and pasting of thumbs.

Soldiers more than kissing the thumb was a characteristic of worship. The ancient Greeks, the Arab and the great, were in receipt of this honor from tradesmen.

Every remote times the practice of licking the thumb has been regarded as a solemn pledge or promise. Chaucer, according to Farrow, has writers, among the Gaelic, the Irish, Latin and the Slavic, and it may also be traced through successive periods down to the present time.

Washing day or rather washing week is so important a period in the Balkan, reports the Atlantic, that social obligations relative to the hospitality of home have to be considered even when a traveller. I have known a Turkish lady to refuse to receive herself from attendance at a friend's house because it would not be convenient to be made with her husband. This is quite in the full qualities of servants, both male, homosexual and old ones. None of these was privileged or efficient enough to meet the fastidious handiness and satisfy her requirements. Besides, the lady herself or home in the 24 hours, and a visitation, accepted in one's privation with a readiness born of long experience.

Parental Testimony

I don't know how many people for be better self-confidence and assurance than the parents of a child who comes to tell the rising generation, and how many parents would be ashamed to confess their own ignorance. You are sure to be asked questions about all sorts of things their children see, but how few parents can answer them! how few confess to their ignorance. Kindergarten Review.

The Way to Meet Work

The beauty of work depends upon the fact that we are free to do it or not as we please each morning to start it or to leave it, to work as long or as little as we choose, or whether we work not at all. The moment we begin to do unwarning friend will be sure to tell us that the work is good for us, and that we ought to be grateful that the day has still work to do.

City Life

I can't get used to the noise there. Why isn't?

Well, besides a career, there is no chance to get a word in edgewise at home.

Tax Collector—Could you give me the name of your husband in full, madam?

Lady—Really sir! I don't know, but I wouldn't take a million dollars for him.

Away to West

Madam: I see travelling around the country with a view to have to make a good time, so I have to make it.

Well, I don't see anything my ball dog must pass for a couple of nights. Home, Tiger—Kansas City Journal.

RASH SO BAD BABY CAME NEAR DYING

Head Broke Out. Spread to Arms, Legs and Entire Body. Itched So He Would Scratch Until Blood Ran. One Box of Cuticura Ointment and Nearly One Cake of Cuticura Soap Cured Him. Has Had No Return.

"When my baby was seven weeks old he had broke out on his head. It was like little red and a water had formed. We kept scratched so much but as we knew how to stop it it spread to his face, then to his body. He got so bad he could not rest day or night. He would scratch until he would bleed. We had a doctor, and a trial ointment, but it only seemed to make it worse. We had a trained nurse, and she said she had never seen so bad a case. We had a doctor from the Board of Health, and he said it was eczema. We had a doctor from the Board of Health, and he said it was eczema. We had a doctor from the Board of Health, and he said it was eczema
